Vital Questions!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops!!!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, debetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu!"
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.," and they will tell you:
Mandrake! or Dandelion!"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless to the most frail woman, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"
For years and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other Kidney diseases' liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.
Women have gone nearly crazy!!!!
From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness, and various diseases peculiar to women.
People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.
Erysipelas!
"Saltrheum, blood poisoning dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact, almost all diseases frail"
Nature is heir to
Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile poisonous stuff with 'Hop' or 'Hops' in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co, make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.'s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward he goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure See adv't in nother column,

TRIFLES LIGHT AS AIR.

A maiden coy and tall slim boy,
Sat cooing on a stile;
The boy's lip wore a slight moustache,
The girl's lip wore a smile.

"I love thee," quoth the boy, and stroked
That faint and downy line;
"And I," the siren softly sighed,
"Would dye it were it mine."

He left the maiden like a flash,
A minute to the mile,
Ah! trifle not with youth's moustache
When sitting on a stile.

NICKNAMES.

HOW THEY STICK FOR YEARS TO UNFORTUNATE BOYS.

Peck's Sun.

It is wonderful how college boys grasp at the least thing to make it uncomfortable for one of their number. A son of President Arthur, who is at Princeton college, has his life made a burden to him by being called by the nickname of 'Precious Thing.' He is never called anything except Precious Thing. and it galls him. The way he got the name was peculiar. The President took the young man to Princeton, when he entered that college, and the boys gave the great man and his son a serenade. The President acknowledged the compliment and made a little speech, in which he said:—'You can see how much I think of Princeton by my leaving my son, the most precious thing I have in life, here with you.' The young galoots and educational hoodlums gave three cheers for the President, and then some one proposed three cheers more for 'his precious thing,' and that settled it. Young Arthur, alluded to by his father as the most precious thing in life bec[illegible] precious thing in ridicule. If a boy could be called a 'precious thing' by girls, with all the name implies, it would not be so bad, but to have six hundred boys constantly calling him a 'Precious Thing,' is too much and the young man is broke up. It is 'Here you Precious Thing lend me your jack knife,' or 'Precious Thing pull down your vest,' until he wishes he were dead. His father meant the expression as one of endearment, showing the love he bore his son, and he supposed he was addressing a lot of human beings with hearts concealed about their persons, but they were only college hazers with no respect for the decencies of life, and they would make fun of anything. The president can't take his son away from there and send him to another college as the name would follow him so he has to bear it as best he can. But he would give a good deal to have his name changed.

A SIX-YEAR-OLD GIRL'S PERIL.

HANGING FROM A TOX WINDOW SILL OVER A HELPLESS CROWD.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Mrs. Jerry Murphy, who lives with her husband on the fourth floor of 233 West Thirty-third street near Seventh avenue, went down stairs about 6 o'clock on Saturday night to buy some supper. She carried her baby with her, but left a little girl, Anna, six years old, locked in the room facing the street. When the mother entered the grocery little Anna climbed into the window and sat on the sill, with her feet hanging down. She grew dizzy from looking at the pavement, thirty five feet below, and began to sway on the window sill. As she was falling she partly turned around and grasped the sill with her hands.

Policeman Thomas Maloney came along and found the street half full of people who were talking excitedly and looking up. Trees prevented him seeing the object of their anxiety until he was nearly opposite the tall brick tenement. When he caught sight of her the little girl had the tip of one toe on the stone coping of the window below her, and was trying to get a hold on the smooth brick wall, so as to climb back in but her foot slipped and both her feet dangled in the air. The crowd yelled at this. The policeman said he'd break the head of the next one that made a noise, and then put his shoulder against the locked front door. As it gave way the mother of the girl came running along the street and fainted on the doorstep with her baby in her arms.

Hurrying up the stairs, the policeman found the room door locked also, but it was easily broken in, and he caught the child by the shoulder and pulled her in. She fainted in his arms When he got down to the street the crowd gave him three cheers for his success. Neighbors cared for the mother and the girl.

HE COULDN'T.

She—Did you order that watermelon?
He—Yes dear I ordered two.
She—Good land man! whatever do you suppose we can do with two big water melons?
He—I told the man to deliver on to-day and the other to-morrow.
She—Oh!
He—Yes, my dear; you see I am not such a fool as I look.
She—No dear. You never could be, either.

HUSBAND—Oh, that neuralgea and toothache nearly [illegible] me.
WIFE—Why don't you go to A. L Geen's Wholesale and Retail Drug Store and get a and get a bottle of Fluid Lightning, you know it cures all such things as tooth ache, neuralgea, headache, lumbago, earache, sore throat etc. It gives instant relief.

SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Unto May I had spent at least five hundred dollars in treatment by many of the best medical men without benefit. My mouth became badly ulcerated, sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like drowning man catches at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel the change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.
T. S. Cannon South Boston Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of terrible Blood Poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not able to raise my hand to my head, spiting up clots of blood and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.
Chas. [illegible]erger, Hoboken, N.J,

HOARSENESS AND FAILURE OF voice from congestion of the vocal cords follicular disease of the fauces, or ministers sore throat, are often the results of bronchial troubles, extending up the trachea and larynx, affecting the whole mocus tract of the air passages. These diseases are the outcome or expression of nerve debility and blood impoverishment from overworking the system and excessive use of the organs involved. Here constitutional treatment is required to restore nutrition and nerve power, and WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya has been successfully used by singers and public speakers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

FOR THE fiscal year ending June 30 our exports have fallen nearly $3,000,000 below last year.

THE PRESENT numerical strength of Free Masonry throughout the world is placed at 138,065 lodges with 14,190,543 members.

IT IS stated that the boundary decision has given great satisfaction at Rat Portage, and has put new vigor into all local enterprises.

NOBODY denies, says the Mail, that for a year past there has been a depression. This is rich. Nobody denies it now because it has been patent for much more than a year. But the Mail did deny it up to the time when it decided that the state of trade warranted the management in reducing by ten per cent the pay of the printers.

MUCH has been said as to woman physicians in Russia, but according to a competent authority there are only 250, and whatever their acquirements and abilities they are only allowed to treat the diseases of women and children. Even in country districts, where there is, perhaps, no male physician within fifty miles, apothecaries have been forbidden to put up a prescription emanating from a woman.

THE ACTION of the Mayor of Almonte in purchasing an American fire engine in preference to one of Canadian manufacture excites surprise in that town inasmuch as the Mayor is a man who was during the last election the Conservative standard bearer in that riding. The purchase will no doubt commend itself as much to the people of Chatham as the purchase by the Dominion Government of American dredges did to the shipbuilders of St. Catherines.

IN AN interview published in San Francisco on July 22, with "Hon." N. F. Davin, Secretary of the Dominion Government's Commission sent to enquire into the question of Chinese immigration the San Francisco Chronicle credits the mouthpiece of the commission with the following sentiment which does credit to his heart if it doesn't to his head:—"It is repellant to British institutions, and consequently Canadian, to debar any man or race the privilege of living under its protection or of enjoying its institutions."

OUR LOCAL CONTEMPORARY contains a couple of columns regarding the Boundary, of exceedingly valuable matter. The simple facts of the question are these:—The Canadian Government which formerly contended that Ontario extended to the Rocky Mountains disputed its claim to territory extending only to Manitoba's Eastern boundary and refused to be bound by an Award giving Ontario a thirteenth part of what used to be claimed as hers by right. The Privy Council being appealed to its judgment confirms the awarded boundaries, and Sir John Macdonald will be forced to give up his resistance to Ontario. This is the whole matter in brief.

EDWARD BLAKE sometime ago spoke out for free discussion as did Sir Richard Cartwright recently. Mr. Blake spoke as follows:—"I hope we shall always remain part of Great Britain on the federal principle, but I am not going to quarrel with men on the one side or the other who maintain a different view as to what is best for this country. Let us see what we desire, and come to the best conclusion that we can upon the matter. Let us not drift. There are rocks ahead, and if we drift we may drift upon them. It is not patriotism to frown down discussion on such questions as those, because we know not the day or the hour when we may be obliged to make decision, and in order to come to a wise and mature decision we must have discussion." Free and enlightened discussion is what Mr. Blake insists upon. It is the dead best blow that can be aimed at the Tories.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

THE GOLDEN GRAIN HARVEST.

The answers to the circulars sent out from our office, in regard to the crops in the County of Beautiful Plain, are very encouraging. The prospects for a bountiful harvest are excellent and the farmers look forward to the dawning of brighter days.—Neepawa N. W. T. Canadian.

TO SIR HECTOR LANGEVIN.

If Masons or Oddfellows or other bodies whose membership is subject to no religious or national test, wish to add eclat to the founding of a public building or other public institutions, we can not understand why they should not be permittted to do so when the people of the locality desire it and when it is distinctly understood on all sides that the Government of the country is in no way responsible for the character of the order, or the character or standing of the membership of the order, or the details or meaning of its ceremonies. —Montreal Herald.

RUBBING IT IN.

The protective tariff never could be upheld by argument. The World seldom tried to argue in its support. When times were booming, our contemporary would say: "There is the N. P., and there is the prosperity; judge the cause by its results.' Now it pleads: 'There is the N. P., but I pray you, good sirs, say nothing about the results, for the truth might hurt somebody.' The World is wrong. Those who most desire the welfare of Canada should rub the truth in, without sparing the use of such illustrations as come to hand, till every Canadian is convinced that Sir John Macdonald's N. P. is one of the greatest frauds of the century.—Hamilton Times.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes.

THE FRENCH-CANADIANS AND MR. BLAINE.

AN UNFORTUNATE SPEECH FOR THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE.

BUFFALO, Aug. 1.—A special from Lewistown Me., says: In Maine there are between 12,000 French voters, principally located in Aroostook county and Lewiston Beddeford, Laco and Waterville. Four years ago a very large precentage of this vote went to Garfield, in the following year in the gubernatorial contest the returns were very unsatisfactory to Mr. Blaine, who said a great many abusive things about the French population of Maine. As a result they became very much incensed Le Messager, published here, denounced Mr. Blaine in an emphatic manner, saying, "Mr. Blaine is the most fanatical of any American of any distinction." Since then the French people have been very hostile to Mr. Blaine and his party. Judge Wing, Chairman of the Republican Committee, has used the most strenuous efforts to bring Le Messenger to Mr. Blaine's support, but without success. The Republicans propose not to let the Canadians go by default, and have secured the services of a Canadian named Ross of Biddeford, to stump the State on behalf of Mr. Blaine. Other speakers from outside will also be brought here. In behalf of the Democrats Dr. J. L. Martel, of this city, and the editor of Le Travailleur, of Worcester, Mass., will probably take the stump. Dr. Martel is one of the leading Canadians in this State. He is an eloquent and convincing speaker. Mr. J. N. L'Hereux, editor of Le Messenger says: 'Without a doubt the whole Canadian vote will be brought into the Democratic column this fall.'

CANADA PACIFIC RAILWAY

The Canada Pacific, it is said, intend monopolizing the passenger traffic between Toronto and Ottawa. At present they control two lines between Brockville and Prescott which connect the Grand Trunk system with the capital. As soon as the new line between Toronto and Ottawa is is running order the C.P.R. will not connect at either Brockville or Prescott with the Grand Trunk trains from the west, consequently passengers from Ottawa will find that in order to make time they must take the Ontario & Quebec at Toronto, or go north on some of the other lines running north from the Grand Trunk and then get on board the C.P.R. cars.

ENGLAND'S POET LAUREATE.

His figure is bent, says a recent writer describing Tennyson, and yet it bears its 75 years lightly. The once dark mass of hair, now gray, falls back from the broad high forehead, while the 'knightly growth fringing his lips' is streaked with silver and the face, though rugged and deeply lined with thought, is still full of calm dignity, and of a tenderness strongly at variance with the poet's somewhat brusque tone and manner. His disregard of conventionalities of life is thoroughly natural and unaffected. His suit of light gray, hanging about him in many a fold, like the hide of a rhinocerous, the loose, ill-fitting collar and carelessly knotted tie, the wide, low boots are not worn for artistic effect. The spirit of the man speaks plainly in his garb as it did when he lashed his critic with:—

> What profits now to understand,
> The merits of a spotless shirt,
> A dapper boot, a little hand,
> If half the little soul be dirt.

MR. DAVITT COMING TO AMERICA

Michael Davitt has postponed his Australian tour, and now announces that he will follow Mr. Sexton to the United States and make a rival tour against him as far as he dare go. Mr. Davitt says he will tell the Irishmen in the United States some truths about the present management of the Irish National League, which he believes they need to know, and will do all in his power to expose the selfishness and self-seeking of the unworthy but trusted leaders of the Irish party, who are criminally abusing the patriotism of the Irish people. It is feared by Parnell's friends that Davitt will succeed in seriously crippling that Irish leaders support in America.

SALVATION ARMY MATRIMONY.

If the Salvation army goes on as present it will soon get to the end of its string. These hallelujah weddings may be very interesting affairs, and may help to keep up the excitement for a while, but eventually they will be the death of the army. Quite recently we had a grand sensational hallelujah wedding in Toronto, and the other day they had one in Hamilton, when 'Happy Bill' and 'Captain Eliza Crosby' were made man and wife. It may be asked, is it likely that these couples will long remain active members of the army after family responsibilities begin to come upon them? Very doubtful, we should say. If the mixed brotherhood and sisterhood make monks and nuns of themselves, in separate orders, the thing might last, but the marrying and giving in marriage introduces disturbing elements, which must shortly make a wreck of the whole organization.—Toronto World.

THE CHOLERA CENTRE.

Marseilles and Toulon Visited by a Correspondent.

WALKING THROUGH THE HOSPITALS

New York Times.

MARSEILLES, July 26.—I have made a five days' visit to this city, to Toulon, and to Arles, in order to learn and report for American readers some facts and scenes in regard to the cholera. I have visited every room in every cholera hospital existing in Marseilles and Toulon, and have seen the wretched people dying in hospitals and in their own hovels, and buried at midnight in the cemeteries by the light of torches and lanterns. I have discussed all the phases of the epidemic exhaustively with the hospital doctors, with priests and with nurses, and my conclusion is that the much dreaded cholera, probably the most fatal and severe of all diseases to which human flesh is heir, is a thing of which no intelligent community of well ordered lives and well managed sewer pipes need have an alarming fear, even when brought into close contact with it, to say nothing of getting into a panic at a distance.

The treatment both here and at Toulon, in the first stages, is twenty drops of laudanum, with three grains of ether, and ice in the mouth to stop the vomiting. In the second stages the patient becomes very cold. From ten to fifteen grammes of acetate of ammonia, the same quantity of alcohol, and two injections of morphia are given daily. If a patient cannot breathe, artificial respiration of oxygen is produced and the limbers are rubbed with turpentine. The third stage is the coffin.

MIDNIGHT AT THE CEMETERY.

Late at night I drove, with my courier, outside the city to the cemetery, St. Pierre, to see the burial of three patients whom I had observed in the Phara Hospital in the afternoon. The route led through the poor quarter, and at every corner bonfires were blazing to purify the air. The whole population was sitting out on the steps of tenements or on church porches, enjoying the fires and the currents of air created by them. After a brief burial service, intoned by a pale young priest, who looked badly scared, three boxes were hurriedly lowered into a trench eight feet deep by twenty feet long, and a goodly quantity of lime was shovelled on top. A concierge showed me a burial permit. Across the face of the document was written. "Cholera—urgent." and there was a requisition for some disinfectant. I went back to the central part of the city, and it was gay enough. Bands were playing and cafe lamps were gleaming. People in throngs were walking in the streets, laughing merrily, and many heads were poked out of the windows of the houses.

AT TOULON.

My visit to Toulon was necessary in order to show me more plainly what were the effects of the epidemic. The country people seemed to have lost their wits. The stations along the road were deserted save by the railway officials. As at Arles and everywhere else where there was a stopping place, piles of baggage, bedding, and household furniture encumbered the platforms. At the Boulevard de Lasse, near the station at Toulon, I saw no human being save one cabman, who was sound asleep beneath the shadow of a huge umbrella. I awakened him and hired him. I started at once for an inspection of the town. Not until had I reached the Place d'Armes did I see a soul. The Place d'Armes is the usual resort and lounging place of many sailors, for Toulon is a huge marine barracks, where at times there are as many as 12,000 sailors. Now I only saw two or three men seated on the benches. The larger portion of the sailors, with the soldiers.

A WOMAN'S DEVOTION.

Toulon streets and shops displayed nothing of their former bustle and activity There were some few signs of life only in the two streets of La Republique and La Fayette. Here the shops were open, but elsewhere they were closed. No business seemed to be the rule, and a visit paid to the outlying sections of Toulon showed how the dreaded disease had made the streets a solitude. I visited a hospital in the suburbs constructed in that unfortunate way so much in vogue a century or more ago. It has been receiving cholera patients since the 14th of July. I saw there thirty-six cases of cholera. Here I saw Mme. Dorvon, a lady of wealth whose name has already been celebrated for her devotion to the cause of humanity. This brave woman has nursed cholera patients in Egypt, Greece and Italy. I found her in the hospital busily occupied moving from bed to bed administering to the wants of the sick. In a conversation with her in regard to the contagious character of cholera, Mme Dorvan agreed with the doctors that under proper precautions the elements of danger were singularly lessened. I noticed that the doctors smoked cigars and chewed considerable quantities of camphor.

LADIES, ATTENTION! In the Diamond Dyes more coloring is given than in any known dyes, and they give faster and more brilliant colors. 10c. at all druggists. Everybody praises them Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AN UNPLEASANT TASK.

'What are you going to do with the dog?' asked a gentleman on the street of a friend who was carrying a small poodle under his arm; 'take him down to the river and drown him?'

'I wish I might,' was the sad response, but he belongs to my wife. I am taking him over to the barbers to get his hair cut.'

A MILITIA MUSS.

Suspension of Adjutant of Governor General's Guards.

OTTAWA, July 31—Some excitement has been caused here by the action of Major Macpherson in suspending from duty Capt. Wm. Hodgins, Adjutant of the Governor General's Foot Guards. Major Macpherson, as senior major, commands the Guards in absence of Lieut.-Col. Ross, who is now in Europe enjoying his holidays. Captain Hodgins formerly belonged to the Queen's Own Regiment, and is son-in-law to Chief Justice Ritchie of the Supreme Court. He is charged with insubordination in addressing his commander officer an abusive and impertinent letter and generally treating Major Macpherson with contempt. On receiving the letter complained of, the Major reported the matter to Gen. Middleton, and Capt. Hodgins was at once relieved of duty. It is probable that the latter will at once demand an enquiry into the charges against him, and lively times are expected, in which the new General will have an opportunity of showing the Militia of Canada how he purposes dealing with such cases. Macpherson is Sir John Macdonald's nephew, and will probably have the sympathy of the Minister of Militia. Other officers of the Guards are complaining of the conduct of Mr. Macpherson in assuming command of the regiment while incapacitated for active duty.

THE BABY CITY.

ST. THOMAS,—Aug 1.—The latest social bugbear in this city relates to the intimacy of a young man belonging to a well known family, the head of which has in years past occupied at least one important public position, with a servant employed at the parental establishment. The young man is 18 years of age and the party of the second part, the genius of the kitchen, so to say, is 25. The latter was lately obliged to abandon her position and she applied to the civic authorities to be sent to a convenient and safe retreat for a time. The civic authority told her that he would endeavor to secure her admission into the Home, but she declined. The youngster's father was informed of the state of affairs and was solicited to provide for his former servant's time of need. He denounced the whole affair as an attempt at blackmail, and posted the young man off to relatives east of Toronto.

'Yes,' said the colonel, 'I was on a jury in California once. It was a murder trial. I didn't want the fellow hung, and so stuck out against the other eleven for nine days locked up in the jury room, when they gave in, and we brought in a verdict of not guilty. And I think I was the maddest man in the State.' 'Why, what were you mad about, colonel?' "Cause the mob had hung the prisoner the first day we were locked up.'

And perhaps in the distant future when the ages have grown old, and move with slow and tailing steps down the corridors of time—When the adjuncts and appliances that now make life endurable are forgotten, how gladly will the people hail the re-discovery of Putnam' Painless Corn Extracter, the great and only sure pop corn cure of this age. Without a rival for efficacy or painless action, certain in every case and yet perfectly harmless to every other part, surely its loss would be felt in future ages as keenly as its value it now appreciated by all in this. Try Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure and safe. N.C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietor.

AN ELOPEMENT.

A BARTON GIRL GOES AWAY WITH A MARRIED MAN.

On July 15, Annie Wilkins, daughter of a farmer residing near Mount Albion in Barton township, disappeared suddenly. A neighboring farmer disappeared the same night leaving his wife and two children behind him. Neither has since been heard of and the parents of the girl have grown weary of waiting for her return, and have given the matter over to the police. Miss Wilkins was a very respectable girl only 16 years of age. She had no money when she left home and as far as can be learned the farmer with whom she is supposed to have gone away, had none either, which leads the girl's parents to believe that she is not far away from the city.

RESENTED HER MARRIAGE.

Clarke Delong's Endeavors to Persuade his Niece.

David Keller, a switchman in the Grand Trunk yard here, swore out a warrant yesterday for the arrest of his wife's uncle, on a charge of threatening to shoot her. Sergt. McCrudden visited the scene of the domestic trouble but the objectionable visitor had made good his escape.

Two years ago the uncle lived in Whitby with his niece, but after leaving for Michigan, she married Keller, and moved to Belleville. When Delong returned to Canada for his niece he found she had been married as stated and he at once got very angry. Yesterday he arrived in Belleville armed with a pistol and determing to take his niece back with him. He sought out her home on the Canifton road and at the point of the revolver persuaded her to follow him out of the house, but in passing the switch-house the husband was called to assist and a lively scene took place. Finally Delong took to the woods and escaped when pursued by a police officer. Mrs. Keller returned to her home and it is to be hoped in future she will not be troubled with such visitors.

An artesian well was bored to a depth of 52 feet on John Reid's place, near Milford, recently, when gas came belching up through the shaft. Mr. Reid put a wooden plug with a small hole in it in the top, and into this hole he fixed a bit of punctured tin. To this he applied a match, and flame shot up about two feet. It burned day and night for more than a week, making a brilliant light at night. Water at length flowed into the well and shut off the gas. Mr. Reid thinks the gas an indication of petroleum, and has declined a liberal price for his lot.—Picton Times.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

'In court,' said the card on the lawyer's door,
'Back in ten minutes' on many more,
'Gone to the hospital,' on the doctor's slate,
On another, 'Sit down and wait.'
'Gone to bank,' on the notary's sign;
'Arbitration,' that young clerk of mine.

'Back soon,' on the broker's book:
'Collecting rents' on my agent's hook,
They were all too busy, a matter quite new,
Very sorry was I, I had nothing to do,
Then I hied me hence to the lacrosse ground,
And every man on the grand stand found.

THE YACHT RACES.

Belleville Craft Sustain Their Reputation.

GENERAL SPORTING NEWS.

Our special despatches yesterday indicated that the Iolanthe took the second class yacht race at Oswego. Later despatches received too late for publication yesterday furnish fuller particulars. The Ella did not start in the first class, the damages of the previous day not being repaired. The Garfield, Verve and Aileen started in the order named within one minute of each other. The Aileen, as already stated, won the first-class race, the Verve getting second place. The Garfield did not finish and was towed in by a tug. Those that started in the second class were the Laura, of Oswego, Zeta, Iolanthe of Belleville, Fascination, Katie Gray, Gracie of Belleville, Laura of Kingston, and Cricket, in the order named.

The first time around, the boats passed the home buoys as follows:—

Iolanthe	11 49 15	Laura, Kingston,	11 50 01
Katie Gray	11 50 31	Laura, Oswego,	11 53 15
Fascination	11 57 15

Cricket not given; Gracie withdrawn. As the boats passed along the harbor front it was evident that they were getting more wind than they wanted, yet each boat continued to carry all sail it could possibly stand up under. Shortly after passing the buoy the peak of the Iolanthe's mainsail was seen to drop, and her peak halyard gave way. With a big spinnaker pulling she continued to hold first place until the damage had been repaired. The first three boats were very close together as they passed out of sight and it was impossible to tell which was ahead. The balance of the fleet followed well together but some of them commenced to shorten sail. About 2 o'clock a terrific squall of wind and rain came down the lake and almost immediately it became so thick that it was impossible to see a hundred feet from shore. The lake was lashed into foam and the rain was blown along in blinding sheets. It was impossible to see the yachts, and great anxiety was felt lest some of them should come to grief. When the squall came down the Iolanthe was near the home buoy and by hard work and good management succeeded in rounding the buoy first at 1:40, and winning the race. She then ran into harbor and anchored, but dragged, and at 2:20 was in trouble. The squall drove the other boats before it, and blew them away down the lake. The Katie Gray, which was sailed by Capt. Cuthbert, tried to get up to home buoy at 2:30 but was driven back several time. The Katie Gray rounded the buoy at 3 o'clock getting second place. The Laura, of Kingston, got in at 3:10, taking third place. The performance of the Aileen, which came in four miles ahead of the Verve, has won her many admirers.

WEDNESDAY'S LACROSSE MATCH.

The Kingston papers give due credit to the Okas for good playing in Wednesday's match with the Kingston club. The Whig says the club is a credit to Belleville. The same paper, however, seems inclined to believe that the Belleville men played roughly, because, it is to be presumed, some of the Kingston men got hurt. But there is the usual fortune of war in the game and the misfortunes happened to overtake the Kingstonians. It cannot be said that the Okas intentionally hurt anyone for a more gentlemanly set of players there is not in Canada. In the match with Peterboro the Okas received some bad cuts while the Peterboros escaped but no one imagined that the Peterboros played anything but a fair game. The News very justly says:—"On the whole the Kingstonians were badly bruised, but they have no complaints. Fair play was all they wanted and they got it. The same paper is, however, in error when it says that three ex-members of the Brantford club played with the Okas, One of the Okas played with the Brants when he lived in Brantford. It is to be hoped that the utmost good feeling will be maintained between Kingston and Belleville on the flagged field of lacrosse and that no exponent of the national game will leave himself open to the charge of unmanly conduct.

The Whig of yesterday says:—The Brockvilles will play the Kingstons here on the 6th and the Okas, of Belleville have been invited down to meet the Maple Leafs at the same picnic, Both clubs in that case will be invited to remain over until the next day and play for the championship cup. The Maple Leafs are to play the Okas on the 15th, and the Cornwalls will be here during the month also. The Napanees will be here to play the Kingstons on the 14th.

WISELY ADOPTED BY DAIRYMEN,
The adoption by most of the prominent dairymen and farmers of the United States, of the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., is a proof of their wisdom in a business point of view. Nearly all winter butter is colored in order to make it marketable, and this color is the best in regard to purity, strength, permanence and perfection of tint.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.–A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April [illegible], 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatou, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask or the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Twice, in amazed perplexity, the Creole read the above. Then hastily approaching the window, looked forth to discover if possible the sender of the billet. In vain.

Over the gardens reigned stillness and peace; not a person was in sight.

'Another mystery,' she murmured, returning into the apartment after closing the lattice.

What can it mean? Why such a proviso? Who can be this anonymous friend?

Sitting down by her toilette table, the paper yet in her hand, she reflected deeply. The riddle was impossible of solution. The question remained the same—should she accept or reject the singular advice?

'From a friend,' she pondered; adding bitterly, 'they are too rare to neglect. Let me consider both sides. If I refuse, I may be refusing that of which I may repent. If I accept, what does it entail? Nothing. We may, if we please, quit here the moment after the deeds are signed, leaving Mr. Folmsbee to finish the arrangements.'

'Wiser to comply,' she decided after a long pause. 'I loose nothing, and may gain. Wiser to keep this letter, so sensationally delivered, a secret, I have been subjected to shame enough lately.'

Consigning the billet to her desk, she sought her pillow, her mind resolved.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE DEEDS SIGNED—JABEZ SCLADDEN PLAYS HIS TRUMP CARDS.

The day that was to see the transfer of Longueville to Jabez Scladden broke in a a glory of tropical sunshine, and as the sisters looked forth upon the landscape, vibrant, jubilant with life and beauty, it recalled some of the happiest moments of their experience, for to that landscape their eyes from infancy had been accustomed.

It elicited a sigh of regret from Pauline bending out of the casement to let the morning air kiss her cheek.

It elicited none from the Creole.

A dark, dark shadow had, to her settled over all the place.

Gazing at the landscape before her, she beheld but the women slaves proceeding to their daily toil, and turning from the sight with an expression of pain, but a proud erection of the head, as she caught the reflection of her queenly figure in the cheval-glass standing near.

'When, Pauline,' she asked, addressing her sister, the remembrance of the mysterious missive in her mind, 'do you think we may get away from here?'

'Mr. Folmsbee said last night, dear, in little less than a week,' was the rejoinder.

'For my part,' proceeded the Creole, 'I see nothing to detain us after to-day, when the papers are signed. Mr. Folmsbee will stay and superintend the rest.'

'Yes,' rejoined Pauline, hesitatingly.

'Then we might really start to-morrow; I see a vessel is advertised to sail.'

'Yes; but you forget, dear.'

'Forget what?'

'Eustace. He is now on his way here to escort us back. We could not leave before his arrival.'

Juliette had forgotten.

The recollection came upon her with an agonised pang.

She would have given much to have quitted America without seeing Eustace Belmore.

How could she tell but another scene similar to that at the theatre, might be waiting her, and in his presence?

It would kill her.

Nevertheless, she perceived it would be impossible to depart before he came, and answered—

'I had forgotten. Well I suppose it must be so, I fancy, however, it would have been wiser of Mr. Belmore, Pauline, to have remained in England, and such, I imagine, will be our aunt's opinion.'

'Ah, you are angry, dear sister,' ejaculated Pauline, timidly raising her eyes, dimmed with tears. 'What have I done to deserve it? Juliette, forgive me, but lately you seem—you seem changed.'

The Creole paused, gazing into those fond, violet eyes.

Then by a sudden impulse she embraced the young girl with effusion,

'Pardon me Pauline, my sister,' she exclaimed. 'Yes, I am changed; but it is only while we are in this place.'

'Then we will get away as speedily as we can.'

'True; still, where shall we remain until we go? I cannot return to New Orleans, and we surely cannot stay here as Mr. Scladden's guest. I would rather be indebted to anyone else for an obligation.'

'I agree with you, nevertheless, what shall we do?'

'Cannot there be a proviso introduced into the deeds that he shall not enter into possession for three days at least? The other boat from England will arrive about that time. I should think there might,' suggested the Creole.

'I should think so, too. Let us go and ask Mr. Folmsbee. If it can be done, it will be the very thing.'

Descending the sisters laid the case before their guest, who rejoined—

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.," and they will tell you:

Mandrake! or Dandelion !"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is

Harmless to the most frail woman, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients

"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other Kidney diseases' liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women have gone nearly crazy ! ! ! !

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.

Erysipelas!

"Saltrheum, blood poisoning dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact, almost all diseases frail"

Nature is heir to

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and, send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in nother column

FOES OF SOCIETY.

The Dangerous Classes Which Live on the Public.

SERMON BY REV. DR. TALMAGE,

"Why hast thou broken down her hedges so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her? The boar out of the wood doth waste it and the wild beast out of the wood doth devour it."—PSALM LXXX, 12, 13.

By this expressive figure the text sets forth the idea that in olden times there were bad influences which, as with swine's feet trampled and, as with swine's teeth, crunched the vineyards of God. So it is now. Long ago the temple of truth and justice would have been completed had there not been bad influences to deface the walls and break down the altars. If it had not been for these evil influences long ago the whole earth would have become an Eschol of ripened clusters. But the boar out of the wood hath devoured it, and the wild beast of the field hath wasted it. Day by day the shuttle flies to and fro, of the world, and every additional wire is another nerve of sympathy; and, looking upon the present condition of these cities and upon their prospective improvements I find that there is a large class of men and women who are the sworn friends of all that is right and the sworn foes of all that is wrong. But while I recognize this fact we must all as intelligent men, recognize the other fact that there is a class of persons whose whole influence is baneful, destructive and deathful in these cities. It is my object this morning to point out these foes of society, and to classify them, that we may know who they are, how to treat them, and how to put ourselves on the defence. In the first place, in this class of baneful people, you must place all

WEAVING TOGETHER THE CITIES

PUBLIC CRIMINALS.

The entire business of the latter class, American and foreign, whom we call the professional criminals—their entire business is to work iniquity. That is as much their business as merchandise or jurisprudence is your business. They put into it all the energies of body, mind, and soul, and they look upon the interregnum spent in prison as so much wasted time—just as you look upon an attack of rheumatism or asthma that keeps you a few weeks in the house. It is their regular business to pick pockets, and blow up safes, and shoplift, and ply the panel game: and they are as proud of their adroitness in that direction as you are proud when you upset the argument of an opposing counsel or cure a wound that some other surgeon has given up, or forsee a turn in the market so that you can buy goods just before they go up 20 per cent. It is their business to work crime, and I do not suppose that once a year the immortality of the thing comes across their soul.

Do you feel that you are independent of all these things? You are not. In the first place it touches your pocket. Do you know that in these three cities we pay seven millions dollars a year tax to arraign try, and support criminals? You help to pay the board of every criminal, from the sneak who take a spool of cotton up to the man who enacts a Black Friday. Yea, your morals are affected by this fact. You might as well think of standing in a confined room where there are fifty people and avoid breathing the vitiated air, as to stand in any community without being somehow contaminated or effected by the evil moral atmosphere. What if the fire that burns down your store or house compared with the conflagration of your morals? What is the theft of gold or silver compared with the theft of your children's virtue? When a man does wrong, we are all ready to arrest him. We shout at the top of our voice, 'Stop thief!' and we put on the handcuffs and manacles; but what provision are we making for the time when the handcuffs and manacles come off? Society practically says to these men 'You go into jail now and rot—good for you,' instead of saying, 'You go into jail, the justice of the earthly law and the justice of the divine law demands it; you must atone for your crime; but remember we are not rejoicing over your suffering; we wish for your elevation. Here are books and tracts and the Gospel of the Son of God—here is Christ. Look and live.' Instead of that, we make these criminals feel that society has a grudge against them, and they in return have a grudge against society, and they come out more infuriated and depraved than when they went in. This is so much the fact that a great multitude of those who are in the prisons of this country have been there before. Of the 1,500 criminals in New York prison one year, 400 had been there before. Of the 5,000 people who had been in a House of Correction in this country during a certain reach of time—of these 5,000, 3,200 had been there before—the prison in the one case, and the House of Correction in the other, actually producing no benefit, leaving them worse than they were. 'Oh,' you say, 'these criminals in our cities are incorrigible.' I deny it. I believe there were thousands of men who slept last night in prison bunks who would leap at the first touch of coming back to decency and respectability, if it were possible. 'Oh,' you say, 'I haven't patience with them.' How much better would you have done under the same circumstances? Suppose your mother had been a blasphemer, and your father a sot, and you had started in life with your body full of evil proclivities, and at ten years of age you had been sent out to steal, and banged and bruised when you came in without any spoils, and Society had turned its back on you, leaving you to consort with vagabonds and wharf rats, how much better would you have been. While I have no sympathy with that judicial clemency which would let crime run loose, or that feeling which sits in the gallery of the court-house weeping bitterly because some desperado is brought to justice—while I have no sympathy with that, I tell you we want more potential influence for the reformation of these depraved classes. Again, in this class of dangerous and baneful people, I must place

THE IDLE

Do not mistake me. I do not mean the sick, the old, or those people of any age who cannot get work, but look out for your athletic do-nothing—the man who will not work, the man who chooses idleness. Some one said to a celebrated French nobleman. 'Why is it that you work when you have so much property?' 'Oh,' he replied, 'I should have to keep on engraving or I should have to hang myself!' No man can afford to be idle, if there is any work he can get to do. Out of the idle classes come the criminal classes. Character, like water, stagnates if it stands still too long. I do not wonder that in a world where there is so much to do, and all the hosts of earth, and heaven, and hell are plunging into the conflict, and angels are flying to and fro, and God is at work, and the whole universe is aquake with the marching and countermarching—I do not wonder that God smites with His indignation man who chooses idleness. I have watched these do-nothings, who spend life stroking their beard, and retouching their toilet, and criticizing industrious people, and spending their evenings in bar rooms, smoking, and drinking champagne, and telling silly or scandalous stories. I have watched them. For a while, they drink the best wines, and they smoke the best cigars, and they move in very fine society; but, as by a law of inexorable gravitation, they come to the Almshouse or the penitentiary. The governments of these three cities provide free lodgings—free lodgings to over 20,000 men and women who are as able to work as you and I are. These men go into the station house to sleep. In the day time they come out and they get their food at your door, and they steal what they can out of the front basement while the servant is spreading the bread in the back basement? Then they go along from one place to another, from one station house to another. When they are found out to be 'repeaters' they simply move on. Nine hundred and ninety nine of the thousand would not take work if you gave it to them. I know how much they want to work—a good many of them. I am referring now to the tramps who infest all our cities. I know them. I have tried over and over again whether they wanted to work, by setting them to saw wood in my cellar. I offered them large wages. I heard the saw going for about three minutes, and then there was a silence and I went down stairs to see what was the matter, and lo! the wood, but no saw! The man had offered his arm to the saw, and they had walked off together. I say these men are an outrage on the Lord's poor, who ought to be helped, must be helped, will be helped. There are thousands of men in our cities who cannot get work, but these mean fellows of whom I am speaking come not under that category. These men would not go, they do not want work. I wish we could have reestablished for just such men the old fashioned whipping post. Banishment from society does not hurt them a bit. They like prison. They rather prefer the almshouse, for they like thin soup when they cannot get mock turtle. You cannot frighten them by imprisonment. Oh, no. If I had my way, I would just put some healthy work on one side and a raw hide on the other, and let them take their choice. By what law of God or man is it right that you and I, who toil until our hands are blistered, and our elbows ache, and our brain gets numb—I ask you, by what right are we called upon to take care of the two million loafers of the United States? I like that scant bill of fare which Paul wrote out for the Thessalonian loafers:—'If a man will not work neither shall he eat.' Depend upon it, my friends, these idle classes make the criminal classes. In this class of dangerous people I must also place

THE OPPRESSED POOR.

Poverty a little while is chastening, but when it comes so that the children cry for bread, and there is none, sometimes men get desperate. There are thousands of honest men every day lacerated into vagabondism. They go on, they are badgered, and stung, and kicked until they can endure it no longer, and they stand with the ferocity of a wild beast, which, pursued until it can run no longer, turns round, foaming and bleeding, to fight the hounds. There is an underground life in New York and London that is simply appalling. It wallows and it sweats with putrefaction. You go down the long stairs which are wet, and decayed, and rotten with filth, and at the foot of those stairs you find the victim, cold and hungry, three fourths dead—perhaps slinking into a darker corner, under the gleam of the lantern of the police. There has not been a breath of air in that room for five years not a breath of fresh air. There they are, all huddled together, men, women, children blacks, whites—Mary Magdalen without her repentance, and Lazarus without his God. These are the dives into which the thieves and the pickpockets go, and other people who would like to do better. These are the sores which bleed perpetual corruption into the city. This is the underlying volcano which threatens us with Caraccas earthquake. It rolls, and it surges, and it heaves, and it blasphemes, and it dies; only two outlets for it—the police station and the Potter's Field. In other words, they must either go to prison or to perdition! 'Oh!' you say, 'I have never seen these things.' Because you will not. but you will see them in that day when these poor wretches crawl up in the light of the judgment throne, and while all hearts are being revealed and amid the thunders and lightnings and earthquakes of that day God will ask you and me what we did to help them, what we did to save them. There is of the poor not quite so squalid, but almost as helpless. See how sunken their eyes are. Cheek bones stand out. Hands damp with slow consumption. Their breath is that of the charnel house. They hear overhead on the pavement the roar of the wheels of fashion and the laughter of gay men and women, and wonder why God gives to some people so much and to others so little. And some of them are being pushed off into the infidelity the poor German woman experienced when in the midst of her wretchedness it was told her that God was good. 'No! no! no good God. Look at me! No good God! No good God!' In all our cities, the cry of whose want I am to day interpreting, there are countless thousands of people dependent upon city, individual and State charities. If I could gather up all their voices to-day it would make a groan that would shake this city to its foundation: but for the most part it is speechless, it suffers in silence, gnashing its teeth, sucking out the blood of its own arteries. Oh, this wave of vagrancy, and pauperism, and crime, and hunger that dashes against our front doorstep! I do not know whether you see as much of it as I do. Some weeks I get almost frenzied with it—this pounding at the door, and ringing, and ringing, of all nationalities, of all and there is no fortune on earth that could help all of them. It goes on until I dare not own more than one decent pair of shoes, or more than one decent hat, lest in the last day Christ should say to me, 'Inasmuch as ye did it not to these, ye did it not to me.' Oh, if the roof could be lifted off these homes of the destitute, and we could look right into them as God looks, who would have nerves to stand it? There are the forty-five thousand sewing women in this cluster of cities—forty five thousand sewing women toiling day after day and night after night until sometimes the blood spurts from nostril and lip! How well all that woe was voiced by the despairing woman who standing by her invalid husband and her invalid child, said to the philanthropist who came to their relief, 'Oh, I am broken hearted; everything seems to go against us; and then, beside that, there are other things,' 'What things?' said the philanthropist. 'Oh,' she replied, 'my sins, my sins! I never see anything or hear anything good, I work from Monday Morning until Saturday night, and on Sundays I can't go out, and I walk up and down this floor, and tremble at the thought I must at last meet God. Oh, we work very hard; we get on so poorly! And then to see the poor little wee thing getting weaker and weaker every day; and then instead of getting nearer to God, to feel all the time that I am going away from Him further and further. Oh, sir, I do wish I was ready to die! Alas, that woman could not realize the tender-hearted love of Jesus, who sympathizes with and will assuredly succor all who trust in Him and call upon His name! I should not wonder if some of those people will have a better time in the next world than we will have. I am preaching this sermon this morning for four or five practical reasons. Because I want you to see who are the dangerous classes, and beware of them. Because I want you to be more discriminating in your charities. Because I want to make you the friends of all city evangelization, of Howard Missions, of Childrens Aid Societies, of Dorcas Societies. Because I want you, if you have extra and useless garments in your house, or garments that you can spare, I want you to send them out, that the naked limbs might be covered. Who knows but that the hat you give away will come back a jewelled coronet; and who knows but that the garment you give away will be turned into white, by some mysterious process, and after a while be embroidered in Christ's raiment, so that He shall run His hand over it and say, 'I was naked and ye clothed me?' And, above all, I have preached this sermon this morning my dear friends, because I want you to see in contrast how good God has been to you; because I hope some of you will go home from this service and sit down at your full table, and look at the round faces of your children, and thank God.

ANOTHER CLASS

PEOPLE WHO WANT TO BE HELPED.

SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Until May I had spent at least five hundred dollars in treatment by many of the best medical men without benefit. My mouth became badly ulcerated, sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like drowning man catches at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel the change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. Cannon, South Boston Mass.

In 1873 I was the victim of terrible Blood Poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not able to raise my hand to my head, spiting up clots of blood and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pound. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

QUEBEC'S GREAT SCANDAL.

A Quebec city despatch yesterday announced that the three Ministerial Commissioners who have been running the Mousseau-Charlebois scandal enquiry there with the assistance of Mr. Thos. White M.P. for Cardwell in the interest and at the request of Sir John Macdonald, had closed the taking of evidence, and nothing now remains but to report to the Legislature. Two of the Liberal members of the Commission withdrew in disgust some weeks ago, but Hon. Mr. Mercier, leader of the Opposition, remained to examine the unwilling witnesses. A recapitulation of the circumstances under which the enquiry was ordered will be of interest.

At the last session of the Quebec Parliament the Hon. Honore Mercier declared from his seat in the Legislative Assembly that in 1882 the Government called for tenders to construct the Parliament House, according to specifications deposited in the office of the Public Works Department. The tenders were to be accompanied with two solvent sureties, and the work done was to be paid according to the weekly estimates of the architect giving the amount of work done and the materials delivered, less a deduction of 20 per cent, which was to be kept back until the work was done, the Government reserving the right to return 10 per cent. of this deduction every six months at its discretion. The heating of the building when necessary during its construction was to be at the expense of the builder, who was to insure it at his cost as it progressed towards completion to the satisfaction of the Commissioners. The tenders were opened about the 2nd of December, 1882, and the lowest, accompanied with the names of the sureties, were as follows:—

1	Jos. Thos. Lavallee	143,196.00
2	P. G. Hout and Chas. Joubin	158,189.00
3	Alex. McMillan	185,160.64
4	A. Charlebois and G. Beaucage	197,596.60

Without complaining of the solvency of the sureties offered, the Government suddenly changed the conditions of the guarantee and demanded a deposit in money of ten per cent. upon the amount of the tenders, which had for effect that the lowest tenderers above mentioned had to retire; the delay granted to make the deposit being up to the 12th of December, 1882, as concerned Mr. Lavallee; to the 21st for Huot & Jobin, and to the 2nd of January, 1883 for McMillan. In the meantime a contract under private seal was made in Montreal on the 7th of December, 1882, between A. Charlebois & Co. and Jean De Beaufort, in which it was stipulated that a sum of $10,000 would be paid to the latter by means of three promissory notes of $3,000, $2,000 and $5,000 respectively, if either Alexander McMillan or A. Charlebois obtained the contract. These notes were signed and endorsed by A. Charlebois & Co., and were placed into a sealed envelope and delivered into the custody of I. B. Durocher, at Montreal, upon the condition that it would be handed over to Jean De Beaufort when either Charlebois or McMillan obtained the contract. It was charged that on the 6th of January 1883, McMillan authorized the Commissioner of Public Works to substitute A. Charlebois' name in the place of his, and Charlebois obtained the contract by a resolution of the Council, No. 22, bearing date the 20th of January. By this contract Charlebois undertook to build for $185,160.64, or $41,964, and $21,971 more than was asked by Lavallee and Huot & Jobin. The conditions of this contract were also more favorable. The three promissory notes were handed over to De Beaufort, one of which was transferred to Gaspard Mathieu, of Montreal, who sued for payment of the amount on its face in the Superior Court. According to the sworn evidence of Jean De Beaufort in this cause a portion of the $10,000 was to be divided among other parties.

Mr. Honore Mercier was credibly informed and sincerely believed that he was in a position to prove according to agreement the Hon. J. A. Mousseau, then Premier of the Province of Quebec and member of the House, and Joseph Gideon Horace Bergeron, Esq., member of the Commons for Beauharnois, were to receive each a third and in fact had already received various sums of money as a reward for having secured Charlebois the contract. The Hon. Mr. Mercier, after making this accusation moved for an enquiry which was carried.

The Commissioners met on June 16th and the investigation began. The majority of the Commission consisted of partisan supporters of the Government, and at the onset there was a frustrated attempt to burke the enquiry. The Tory members of the Commission harassed Mr. Mercier in his efforts to bring out the facts and tried by every means in their power to screen Judge Mousseau. Notwithstanding all this a great deal of very damaging evidence was wrung from backward witnesses and from Charlebois himself. A Quebec contractor named Jobin, who was produced as witness for the defendant, deliberately swore that he and others who put in lower tenders than Charlebois for the Parliament buildings expressly did so, not with any intention of executing the contract, but for the sole purpose of getting themselves bought off or forcing a partnership in the profits upon the next highest tenderer, and this because the Mousseau Government at first only asked personal security and not a money deposit.

Another witness admitted that it was to his knowledge that McMillan was Charlebois' book keeper, and that his tender was only a blind, but he was not very clear whether he got information from Mousseau or some other colleague. As for Charlebois' supplementary contract for fitting up temporary accommodation for the Legislature Charlebois at first demanded $35,000 for it, and they finally beat him down to $28,000, which he accepted with great reluctance. Sicotte, Clerk of the Crown, Montreal, deposed to De Beaufort having in July last communicated to him in confidence that he had just made a bargain by which Charlebois agreed, if he got the contract, to pay him $10,000, for which three notes had been placed in trust with Mr. Durocher.

A Quebec cabinet maker testified that almost the whole of the furniture placed by Mr. Charlebois in the temporary parliament buildings was charged at from 50 to 70 per cent above its value.

The whole affair discloses an amount of corruption such as is ever found attached to Tory Governments in this country. The Commission will now report their finding to the Legislature next session when Mr. Joly and Mr. Robidoux will no doubt also submit a minority report.

THE MOWAT DEMONSTRATION.

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—The Reform Association met last evening. It was decided to have a general demonstration given to Mr. Mowat on his return about September 15th. The program as outlined was to meet him at Niagara by chartered steamer, a procession to the park, where an opportunity would be given of presenting addresses, and a banquet in the evening. In this demonstration all parts of the province will be asked to join, so as to make it provincial in its character. A large executive committee was appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting, which then adjourned. The feeling was warm and enthusiastic and the prospects for a successful home-coming' of Mowat are very promising.

SOME FROZEN FACTS

ABOUT ICE-CREAM AND THOSE WHO AB ORB IT.

(Cincinnati Inquirer)

'Yes, the world will have to reverse its judgment before long,' said a city confectioner, in answer to a question. 'Ladies are no longer the most numerous patrons of the ice-cream saloon, and I am glad of it. When a party of ladies stroll in they invariably take a single dish each of the lowest priced ice-cream' loiter over it for an hour, and then leave without buying as much as a dime's worth of cake; while a man will come in, ask for the very best cream that we make, regardless of cost, take a glass of lemonade and a dish of cake, possibly call for another installment, and be off in twenty minutes—leaving behind him more money than the entire party of ladies, and not making one-half as much trouble.

'Of course, when a girl comes in with a gentleman the case is different. Then she orders lemonade, cakes and tooty frooty with a high hand—'

'Hold on a minute. What is tooty frooty?'

'In the first place you have it spelled wrong. It should be spelled tutti-frutti, and is nothing more nor less than are fruits frozen in the highest grade of cream. I generally pour half a bottle of sherry wine in each two gallon freezer of tutti-frutti cream. It imparts an indescribable relish to the compound, and has made my cream the envy and despair of every other first class confectioner in the city. We chop up figs, dates, seedless raisins, pineapples, cocoanut and occasionally a peach or two into fairly small pieces, mix them thoroughly, and when the cream is frozen and rubbed smooth, but before it hardens, we remove the dasher and put in the fruit, which mixes readily with the cream. The can in the freezer is then set to revolving rapidly, without the dasher to thoroughly harden the mass. When wanted for the table at private parties, in order to make an attractive-looking dish the can in which it is frozen should be of artistic shape. cover should be removed, the can inverted over a glass plate, and then a cloth with hot water applied to the outside of the can, when the solid mass of cream will be deposited in a pleasing shape on the plate ready to be cut in slices.

A KISSING CASE.

Fredericton was mightily amused some short time ago by a verdict given by a grave and reverend justice of the peace. A young man from the country got into trouble with his boarding-house keeper, who caught him hugging and kissing a lady boarder. The matter came before the justice of the peace, who, after giving a hearing to the case, delivered judgment as follows:—

'As the young man, the defendant in this case, has testified that the young lady in question was not related to the plaintiff—was neither his sister, his, cousin or his aunt—and inasmuch as there is sufficient evidence to prove conclusively that she was a good-looking girl, and enjoyed in the highest degree the hugging and kissing complained of, the verdict of this court is: that the young man shall only pay at the rate of three dollars a week, as per contract."

It appears that the young man had engaged board at $3 a week but his landlord, shocked at the discovery he had made, when ordering him out of the house wanted to charge him twenty-five cents a meal hence his appearance in the court.

HEART-RENDING FATALITY.

A Father Finds his three Children Crushed to Death.

KINGSTON, Aug. 1.—Thursday evening about 7 o'clock while Mr. James Burgess, an employe of the Chicago Granite Company, was at tea, in his home on Grindstone Island, his attention was attracted by an unusual noise, and rembering that his little children were playing about, immediately rushed out to seek them. He ran down to an adjacent marsh and near these met some children who informed him that his little ones were at the river bank. Thither Mr. Burgess ran, and to his horror found that about 40 feet of the bank, which at that spot was 11 feet in depth, had caved in and crushed all three children to death. The foreman of the Chicago Granite Company was immediately on hand with assistance, and removed the earth where the children had been killed. The bodies, with the exception of one of the girls were found to be terribly mangled. The little boy's head was crushed and broken. The little boy, 9 years old, was the eldest of the trio, the other two being girls.

DALY GETS LIFE.

END OF THE MANCHESTER DYNAMITE CONSPIRACY.

WARWICK, Eng., Aug. 2.—In the trial of the dynamiters, Daly began his address to the Jury yesterday, and made a powerful argument in his own behalf. He argued that there had been nothing of a criminal character proved against him except that he had travelled under aliases. This he did not consider criminal, as the Queen had repeatedly travelled under an assumed name. The men however were convicted. Daly was sentenced for life. Egan for twenty years. Macdonnel, who pleaded guilty, was released on bail to appear whenever called upon.

Jet beaded turbans trimmed with pompons and aigrettes, powdered with jet or glittering with jet beaded laces, will be much worn on the promenade in August, with stylish costumes of black surah or gros grain silk.

Combinations of velvet and silk, ottoman or rhadames, in all colors, with trimmings of Aurilac lace, form some of the most elegant and costly costumes of high ceremony for the present season at Saratoga and Newport.

The handsomest travelling raglans of English cloths, in combination with velvet and broche, satin and silk, lined throughout with satin, come in all the dark cloth shades and are eagerly sought by fastidious customers.

Linen lawns have both dark and light grounds. pale blues, pinks and dull greens, and also pure white, on each are scattered big blossoms, clusters of fruit, Indian and Persian designs, and rustic scenes and figures.

Hand-painted sashes of silk or satin, in pale or dark colors, will be much worn this summer over simple house dresses of French muslin, organdie and lawn. With more dressy toilets for evening, graceful little sleeveless jackets are made to match.

It is rumored that Parisian young ladies will wear whole suits of andrinople during the summer. The favorite shades are to be gray, ecru, moss color, mushroom, tobacco and reddish brown, Light woollen and cotton fabrics, such as veiling, muslin and baptiste, have pompadour designs.

SHE CREATED A SENSATION.

A lady appeared at Lord's cricket ground in London on July 11 in what may be fairly termed an evening costume. She wore a black lace dress. a yellow satin cuirass bodice brocaded with black, cut low—very low—and fitted into the neck with black lace. Her tight fitting black lace sleeves reached down to her elbows being joined by black gloves. A mass of fluffy yellow hair, cut short was nearly hidden beneath a huge black hat. The lady was not slender. She created a furor wherever she went.'

ECCENTRICITIES OF A PRINCESS.

The Princess Like-Like, of the Hawaiian Islands, who has been spending several weeks in this city left for home a few days ago. She received many social attentions and certainly created a sensation at some gatherings by appearing in a rich black costume with long black gloves, and not a single article in her toilet to relieve the sombre color, As she is as black as the ace of spades, the effect of such a figure among brilliant party costumes may be imagined.—San Francisco Letter.

TOO MUCH KISSING.

Some ladies are beginning to complain of the kissing nuisance as now practised between members of their sex. It is declared that the practice of one woman saluting another with a kiss whenever she meets after an absence it becoming too common, and, that the osculatory welcome should be limited to ladies who are very dear friends—and to gentlemen, when properly authorized. Many ladies who do not like to seem rude are compelled to kiss other ladies of their acquaintance when they meet them because it seems to be expected, and to refuse to return the salutation would be embarrassing.

VIGOROUS GIRLS.

The time has come when weak spines, headaches, flabby muscles, and feeble sweet delicacy have become unfashionable, An eminent London physician has lately written in the warmest terms a letter recommending gymnastics for girls, She of the sparkling eye, the strong round arm and the deep chest, the maiden who can swim and row and ride horseback, and tramp five miles—this is the girl the times demand. This is the girl for the higher intellectual education. Careful attention to physical culture, air exercise and sunshine will do away with two-thirds of the sickness that now affects the female sex; but it will not destroy any of the gentler qualities. The perfect woman who will one day, we hope, bless the world, will have a sound, active body, a cultivated brain. and at the same time all womanly graciousness and sweetness.—Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

And perhaps in the distant future when the ages have grown old, and move with slow and tailing steps down the corridors of time—When the adjuncts and appliances that now make life endurable are forgotten, how gladly will the people hail the re-discovery of Putnam' Painless Corn Extracter, the great and only sure pop corn cure of this age. Without a rival for efficacy or painless action, certain in every case and yet perfectly harmless to every other part, surely its loss would be felt in future ages as keenly as its value is now appreciated by all in this. Try Putnam's Painless Corn Extracter. Sure and safe. N.C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

The reason why "Nonsuch Washing Compound" should be used in preference to all other washing preparations. First, It is perfectly harmless. Second, It saves more than half the labor. Third, It is the cheapest in th market. Many more could be given but this should be sufficient. For sale by all Druggists.

These cool evenings are a delightful contrast to the usually warm sultry nights of summer. A man can play pool for the drinks without wishing that there were only five balls instead of fifteen.

That Belleville is a popular place to visit says the Kingston Whig, is indicated by the fact that another excursion to it is on the tapis, that of the True Blues, on Belleville's civic holiday, 18th August.

We learn that the citizens of Belleville are subscribing very liberally toward paying the expense of improving the interior of Albert College. The response has been so generous that the repairing committee feel authorized to do far more than was originally contemplated.

The announcement of weekly promenade concerts and bicycle races in an illuminated park at a nominal charge, comes as a pleasant divertisement these dull evenings. Bright illuminations, good music, gay crowds, exciting and amusing bicycle races, all go to form an attractive entertainment.

Mr Tammadge is endeavoring to secure a visit from Henry Irving and his magnificent Lyceum company. Mr. Irving when in Toronto promised to try and visit Belleville next season and as he is his own manager he may possibly be induced to come. It is to be hoped so as there is no such dramatic treat furnished in the English speaking world as his performances.

A son of Mr. Wm. Ketcheson, front of Sidney, had a narrow escape from being killed in his barn yesterday while unloading barley with a barley fork. There was about half a ton of barley suspended over his head, when one of the pully ropes got foul and the straw, with the car dropped, going through the barn floor, within a few inches of the boy, who had a miraculous escape.

One of the most successful dramatic companies last season was the celebrated Stafford & Foster organization, headed by those sterling artists, William Stafford and Evelyn Foster; and whose magnificent productions of legitimate drama received the cordial support of cultured and enthusiastic audiences, together with the highest praise from competent critics. Manager Tammadge, with commendable enterprise, has secured this attraction for an early engagement in that most popular of Shakespere's plays, "The Merchant of Venice."

KING OF THE TURF.

Jay Eye See Beats the Record by Going in 2:10.

OSWEGO REGATTA—GENERAL NOTES.

The annals of the American turf have yet to chronicle a more brilliant and successful achievement than that performed at Narragansett park, Providence, R.I., yesterday in the trial of the trotting wonder Jay Eye See to beat his record of 2:10¾ and that of Maud S. of 2:10¼. After warming up Jay Eye See started at the word go. The first quarter was made in 33½, the second 1:05, the third 1:39, and the fourth 2:10. A scene of wild excitement followed. Hats, canes, handkerchiefs and fans waved, while men shouted themselves hoarse in cheering the king of the American turf. Mr. Case, owner of the horse, was overjoyed. [The blood of Jay Eye See is fifteen-sixteenths pure trotting blood. His sire is Dictator and his grand sire Hambletonian. Jay Eye See is a little, rather insignificant looking horse. He looks like his sire. He is colored like him, built like him, and trots like him. The new king of the turf made his 2:10¾ record September 15th, 1883, on the same track where yesterday he won the first place.—SPTG. ED.]

THE OSWEGO REGATTA.

The Iolanthe has been supplied with a new gaff-topsail at Oswego. The general opinion of the Belleville delegates to the regatta is that the Iolanthe was by far the fastest in the second class race. When the squall struck the Belleville boat it was within a quarter of a mile of the home buoy, but with a single reefed mainsail and a storm jib they faced the gale which came down the lake like a blinding snow storm, and moved the flags, after which all the canvass was stripped and the boat run into the harbor with bare poles. When the squall struck the Iolanthe the Katie Gray was half a mile to the rear, but seeing there was trouble ahead took in all the canvass and an hour later reached the buoy. Had it not been for this squall of wind the finish between the Iolanthe and the Katie Gray would have been a close one, as the Belleville flyer had to allow the Katie four minutes on tonnage, according to the rules of the association. The Oswego yachtmen made every preparation for the races, and had Capt. Cathbart, builder of the Katie there for a week fitting her up, but her backers were for all this cautions about risking much money on the race until they saw how the Iolanthe sailed.

At Providence trotting meeting yesterday Maxim Cobb made a trial beat to beat 2.13¾. She made a mile in 2.15¼. Winship and mate then made a mile in 2.06. Phallas then tried to beat his own record of 2.13¾, the best mile ever made by a stallion. He finished in 2.15, and another resulted in 2.13¾.

MISCELLANEOUS SPORTING NOTES.

Campbellford defeated Peterboro' at cricket yesterday.

The yachts in the Kingston regatta on Monday will be photographed before the start.

The differences between the Shamrocks and Montreal Lacrosse Clubs have been settled and a close and exciting match is expected. They are playing this afternoon for the championship.

John Teemer and Wallace Ross are to meet at Oak Point, New York, to-day. They are matched to row in single sculls four miles with a turn for stakes of $2,000, and no aquatic contest of late has aroused such interest as is felt by the respective admirers of Ross and Teemer. Both men will row in their new dock boats.

CHILD DESERTION.

At an early hour this morning a child's cry awoke the occupants of Dr. Curlett's residence, Hotel St. On opening the front door they found a female infant, aged about two week, and quite cold, lying on the stone steps between the two doors. It had on a faded blue coat and a striped petticoat. The infant was taken in and cared for and the police notified. It is surmised that some member of the circus deserted the child before leaving town.

TOOLS OF TRADE.

Philadelphia Call.

Mrs. Winks—My dear, I read such a funny thing about China to-day. On the first birthday of a Chinese male infant he is seated in a large sive, with money scales a foot measure, a pair of sheers, a brass mirror, a pencil, ink and books, and other articles ranged in a circle around him. The object which he handles first is thought to be a sure prophecy of his future occupation. Well, I concluded to try it just for fun, and so I fixed our baby that way.

Mr. Winks—Indeed! What did he take hold of first.

Mr. Winks—Well, the fact is he picked up the shears.

Mr. Winks—Good! We must move to Chicago at once. He is destined to become a great editor.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Huron, Dak, writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes.

Trial Bottles Free at B. Templeton's Drug Store. Large Size $1 00.

RESCUED AT LAST.

W. H Crooker, druggist of Waterdown, says, when all other remedies fail for Bowel Complaints, then Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry comes to the rescue.

A FARMER'S FALL.

Tumbles into a Mill-Race—Unconscious all Night.

James Curray, a farmer living in the first concession of Thurlow, about six miles from Belleville, met with an accident sometime during last night which nearly cost him his life. He was walking along the western bank of the river in the dark, considerably under the influence of liquor, and when near Ald. Cooper's mill he tumbled over and fell to the bottom of the mill-race, a distance of about thirty-five feet, striking his head and shoulders on the rocks below. He was unconscious for some time and remained there bleeding profusely until about six this morning unable to assist himself. At that hour Mrs. Downs accidentally saw him in the mill-race and at once summoned assistance. The police were telephoned for and the injured man taken to the police station, after which David Bradford, carter, drove him to his home in the country. Curray complained of severe pains in his back and shoulders, but it is probable that he will recover. Had there been any water in the mill-race he would have drowned.

An unknown person has presented the English Wesleyan Conference with a theological library of 30,000 volumes.

Rev. Wm. Clark, of the late Methodist Episcopal Church of Canada, will take charge of an M. E. Church at Waupun, N. S.

Rev. Dr. John McLean, Bishop of Saskatchewan has been in Toronto for a couple of days. He has just returned from England, where he has been for half a year raising funds for his extensive diocese.

"My dear brethren," said the minister, leaning forward and speaking very earnestly, "in the excessively warm and oppressive weather I can excuse a little drowsiness during the sermon, but I do wish you would try and keep awake while the collection is being taken up."

The Rev. Frank Rogers Morse of Brooklyn said in giving several reasons why a minister should have a vacation, that the minister's absence gave his congregation a rest. The congregation also had an opportunity to hear the cream of sermons, as each pulpit supply preached his best in order to make a favorable impression.

We learn with regret, says the Toronto Evangelical Churchman, that Canon Carpenter the new Bishop of Ripon, has had in his church a surpliced choir, full choral service, Communion every Sunday at 8 a. m. and on saints' days, no evening communions, Hymns Ancient and Modern, and the surplice in the pulpit.

Rev. C. S. Williams of Brooklyn, talked the other evening about white and black lies. "There has been a great deal of talk," he said, "about telling a lie to save a man's life. I don't know that many people would hesitate to tell such a lie. Joseph with the instincts of a generous heart, told a white lie to shield the weak. These lies may not conform to the naked truth, but they should not be confounded with lies told in malice."

At the convocation of the Province of York, Eng., July 15, the Archbishop presiding, the Dean of Chester moved, "That the establishment of a ministry of women, in general harmony with the system of deaconnesses in the Primitive Church, and adapted to the condition of modern times, is an urgent need of the Church of England." He claimed definite Scriptural sanction for an order of deaconnesses. A discussion followed, and eventually the following resolution was adopted:—That an extension of the ministry of women is an urgent need of the Church of England in the present day, and that the President be prayed to direct the appointment of a committee to consider the best means by which the work of women may be organized, encouraging, and developed."

WISELY ADOPTED BY DAIRYMEN.

The adoption by most of the prominent dairymen and farmers of the United States, of the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., is a proof of their wisdom in a business point of view. Nearly all winter butter is colored in order to make it marketable, and this color is the best in regard to purity, strength, permanence and perfection of tint.

PLACING HER AT HER EASE.

Dumley had accompanied a friend home to dinner, and, as they seated themselves at the table, the hostess remarked:

'I trust that you will make allowances, Mr. Dumley. My girl left me this morning very unexpectedly, and I was compelled to cook the dinner myself.'

'Oh, certainly, my dear madam, certainly, responded Dumley, with much manner.' I can put up with anything."

——The question whether young women shall pursue the same line of studies as their brothers, seems to find its chief objection in their different physical constitution. Arguments on this subject are finely handled on both sides; but the perfect adaption of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to the cure of ailments attending the feminine organs needs no argument; its works are its proof.

AN END TO BONE SCRAPING.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctor told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, 3 bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by B. Templeton.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS—Coughs Influenza.—The soothing proerties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In in common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceeding efficacious. When influenza is epidemic this treatment is the easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the overgorged air tubes, and render respiration free without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of saving suffering when any one is afflicted with cold, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which so many persons are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 7, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,

Missionary to Swaton, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Why not? Nothing easier, Miss Pauline. It's a good idea. Then you will not feel constrained to hasten your departure as otherwise you might. I'll see to it. It shall be done in black and white, mind, for I am not over and above impressed favorably with Jabez Scladden. Different man to Freeman altogether. Leave the matter to me.'

The half-sisters willingly did so, and Juliette curiously and impatiently waited the result, as the probable explanation of the mysterious and anonymous letter.

With eleven o'clock punctually came Mr. Jabez Scladden.

The exegencies of the toilet were slightly regarded by Mr. Jabez Scladden.

To-day, however, was an exception.

He had evidently tried to looked his best and was airing his Sunday clothes, also had expended an extra five minutes before his glass in the arrangement of his hair.

The effort was not a success.

Some men never can become broadcloth clean linen and ties.

The oily, cringing smile on the repulsive face was rather more cringingly apologetic, as humbly Jabez Scladden saluted the ladies. while the gleam that shot through the pale fish-like eyes, as they turned upon Juliette, possessed so singular an expression that the Creole averted her face to conceal her disgust.

Having motioned Mr. Scladden to a seat, upon which he sat at the extreme edge, his long bony hands hanging nervously between his knees, Mr. Folmsbee stated the proviso which the sisters were anxious to make.

Jabez Scladden's brows fell of a sudden over his eyes like the hood of a hedgehog from under which he sent a quick, furtive, suspicious glance at the three.

Then with a wriggle that nearly brought him to the ground, said—

'Why?'

Mr. Folmsbee clearly stated why.

Mr. Jabez Scladden grew more oily, more cringing, more abhorrent than ever.

'I am sure I should only be too honored,' he remarked with a leer he intended to be killing at the sisters; 'honored more than I can express by the ladies remaining my guests as long as they please.'

'Possibly. They appreciate your hospitality, Mr. Scladden, I am certain,' rejoined Mr. Folmsbee; 'but you are strangers, you know, and few people care to place themselves unnecessarily under an obligation. This matter is purely one of business.'

'Purely,' coincided Jabez Scladden, with singularly marked emphasis; 'purely business.'

'Therefore, the Misses Beauchamp desire the proviso to be made.'

Jabez Scladden was silent.

He evidently had some secret cause for disliking the proposal.

Juliette, keen of perception, noticed it, and the letter she had received flashed upon her mind.

'This proviso must be inserted,' she remarked, with quiet decision, 'or I, for one, will sign nothing.'

'Neither will I,' remarked Pauline.

Jabez Scladden's snaky gaze had beant upon Juliette with, if it might be termed, an amused smile, but as Pauline spoke, the expression changed and slightly lifting his narrow, bony shoulders, he rejoined, bowing to the younger sister—

'A lady's will is ever my law. Of ecorse I agree to so small a matter. I did but hesitate, hoping to have the pleasure of offering Longueville to you Miss Beauchamp, as long as you cared to stay in America.'

'It is better as it is,' remarked Mr. Folmsbee, not more favorably impressed than the sisters with Mr. Jabez Scladden. 'Now, if you please, we will to business, which, if agreeable to our sex is, as a rule, very wearisome to ladies.'

With a smirk and mawkish compliment, addressed to Pauline, Jabez Scladden took up the blue bag. which he had placed upon the ground by his side, and drew from it the necessary parchments, title deeds, etc., etc.

As Mr. Folmsbee had said, all secure, leaving no loophole.

All plain, in hard, uncontradictable black and white.

Mr. Scladden was not likely to omit that.

The proviso having been duely inserted, Mr. Jacob Folmsbee, setting his spectacles over his nose, drew the parchments towards him and remarked—

'No doubt my dear Miss Beauchamps, you would like to hear these papers read through?'

Pauline's expression of horror was almost ludicrous.

'Oh, please, Mr. Folmsbee it is necessary?' she exclaimed, with a little beseeching gesture.

'It it be not,' said Juliette to whom Mr. Jabez Scladden's presence was growing more and more detestable, 'I trust, dear sir, you will kindly excuse us that infliction. You have seen them, I suppose?'

'The rough draft.'

'Which was correct?'

'Quite.'

'Then we are satisfied.'

Jabez Scladden took the compliment to himself, and with his horrible leering eyes rested upon Juliette, bowed to Pauline,

'Is this opinion also yours, may I ask?' he demanded with a wriggle.

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians: "What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, debetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.." and they will tell you :

Mandrake! or Dandelion !"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless to the most frail women, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years had given up by physicians, of Bright's and other Kidney diseases' liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women have gone nearly crazy ! ! ! !

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.

Erysipelas!

"Saltrheum, blood poisoning dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact, almost all diseases frail"

Nature is heir to

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile poisonous stuff with 'Hop' or 'Hops' in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience,' says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasteby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and I all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward he goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in nother column,

A WOMAN'S WISH.

Would I were lying in a field of clover,
Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet,
With dusky clouds in deep skies hanging over
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of Worry,
In eager haste, from Thought's impatient neck,
And watch it coursing in its heedless hurry,
Disdaining Wisdom's call or duty's beck.

Ah ! it were sweet, where clover clumps are meeting
And daisies hiding, so to hide and rest ;
No sound except my own heart's sturdy beating,
Rocking itself to sleep within my breast—

Just to lie there, filled with the deeper breathing
That comes of listening to a wild bird's song !
Our souls require at times this full unsheathing—
All swords will rust if scabbard-kept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty,
So tired of all my tired hands find to do !
I yearn, I faint for some of life's free beauty,
Its loose beads with no straight string running through.

Ay, laugh, if laugh you will, at my crude speech ;
But women sometimes die of such a greed—
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach,
And the assurance they have all they need.

Mary Ashley Townsend.

SHE WANTED A HORSE

THE YOUNG WOMAN WHO SOUGHT THE ADVICE OF THE HORSE REPORTER.

'Good day, sir.'

A young lady stood by the horse reporter's desk. 'I came up here,, she said, 'because I often read in the Tribune—papa takes it—about people you give information to. Papa says I can have a horse and one of those sweet little village carts Won't it be just lovely?'

The horse reporter subscribed, by an inclination of his head, to the entrancing nature of the prospect alluded to.

'And I want to find out,' she continued, 'just what sort of a horse I ought to buy, because papa doesn't know anything at all about such matters, and I've got to do the whole thing.'

'I suppose you want a horse that you can drive yourself ?'

'Yes. And it must have its tail square, like those at the races. Weren't those lovely little horseys that ran last Tuesday? —the cute things ! I won a box of candy on that delicious little Wanda. Isn't she splendid ? Do you think I could get Wanda?'

'You dont want a race horse,' said the horse reporter ; 'you want one you can drive. You can get a bay filly with her tail banged, though, and that will answer the description of Wanda pretty well.'

'Get a what?'

'A bay filly.'

'What's a filly ? Is it a new kind of horse, and are they fashionable?'

'A filly.' replied the horse reporter 'is a girl horse.'

'Oh, said the young lady, blushing violently. 'And do you think I'd better get a filly.'

'It will do as well as any. I suppose you want a gentle one?'

'Oh, yes. I want a sweet little horsey that won't kick or runaway, or anything like that. That would be perfectly terrible Why, Belle Jones had a perfectly charming little donkey last summer, and the nasty little thing went right into the flower beds at Central Park with her and ate up a lot begonias and things and a horrid policeman said she ought to get married and practice on her husband a year or two before trying to drive a real donkey. Wasn't he mean?'

The scholarly head of the horse reporter was again inclined in an affirmative manner.

'And so.' continued the young lady, 'I want a nice horse—one that will do what I want him to as soon as he finds it out. And it must be a bay horse with 'a square tail and have white harness.'

'They are not growing harnesses with horses this year,' said the horse reporter. They used to do it, but it is cheaper to let the horse grow up, and then have the harness made.'

'Why, of course !' exclaimed the young lady. 'I ought to have known better than that. Why, General Grant was a harness maker, wasn't he? And that's now he came to be President. I remember papa saying that no matter how humble a station a man got on at he might attain any honour in this country.'

'General Grant was not a harness maker.' said the horse reporter, 'and your papa didn't say anything about a man getting on at a station. Prosperity isn't a railroad train.'

'Well, perhaps he didn't but anyhow I want a white harness and blue ribbon on the whip. It will be just too lovely'—and the young lady sat back in the chair and for a moment silently contemplated the ecstatic vision thus conjured up. Then she said ;—what shall I call my horse ?'

'Have you decided to get a filly?'

'Yes.'

'Well. there are plenty of good names. How does 'Beatrice' strike you?'

O that would be elegant. And then I could call her 'Trixy' for short, could'nt I? It will be simply ravishing to hear that dear darling little horse, and a cunning cart with yellow wheels, and I think you're awfully good to tell me all about it. And will there be an item in next Sunday's paper that Miss Lilian Smith appears daily on the boulevard driving a beautiful bay filly ?'

'Yes : we,ll have an item prepared.'

And will it be in the society news ?'

'No ; we'll put it on the editorial page where it will attract more attention.'

'Oh ! You're just lovely. You must let me take you out riding some day.'

'Thanks,' said the horse reporter, 'but I love life with a strong, clinging love of buoyant youth, and I have seen women drive.'—Chicago Tribune.

SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Unto May I had spent at least five hundred dollars in treatment by many of the best medical men without benefit. My month became badly ulcerated, sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like drowning man catches at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel the change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. Cannon South Boston Mass.

In 1878 I was the victim of terrible Blood Poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not able to raise my hand to my head, spiting up clots of blood and reduced in weight from one hundred and eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighing one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Chas, erger, Hoboken, N.J,

HOARSENESS AND FAILURE OF voice from congestion of the vocal cords follicular disease of the fauces, or ministers sore throat, are often the results of bronchial troubles, extending up the trachea and larynx, affecting the whole mucous tract of the air passages. These diseases are the outcome or expression of nerve debility and blood impoverishment from overworking the system and excessive use of the organs involved. Here constitutional treatment is required to restore nutrition and nerve power, and WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya has been successfully used by singers and public speakers.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

LENNOX.

Mr, George Tate Blackstock, has received from the Conservatives of Lennox the party nomination for the Local Legislature in opposition to Mr. Hawley. Mr. Blackstock is a young man pretty well 'heeled' and with the gift of gab very well developed. He is a Toronto barrister, with no experience in public life either municipally or otherwise. He would have uphill work against a local man in a constituency accustomed to furnish its own Parliamentary representatives and as against Mr. Hawley in particular he will simply stand no chance whatever. Advices from Napanee say that Lennox is already as good as redeemed.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

LET HIM of giant stature now be known as the Brobdingnagian Knight.

MR. MOWAT has, it is said, positively refused to accept of a money testimonial.

IT IS stated on the best authority that Professor Wiggins positively declines knighthood.

THERE is now a precedent established for knighting Senator J. Burr Plumb, and we hope justice will yet be done to that gentleman.

ONE OF Governor Cleveland's sisters has been a missionary in Ceylon for thirty years. If the Buffalo Telegraph is to be believed she could have done good work nearer home.

THE Toronto organ of despair has kindly ceased to cry "Mowat Must Go" and taken to advising him to resign. This was done in Saturday's issue.

IS OUR new Commander in Chief a soldier-dude? A contemporary says:—"Major-General Middleton wears his forage cap in a very jaunty way. His step is quite elastic and a la militaire."

PUCK'S snake stories have been outdone. A Pittsburg paper relates that a family in Soho have a garter snake which plays "Sweet Violets" on the piano by striking the notes with its tail.

SAYS Prof. Goldwin Smith in the Week:—"Whatever Sir John may have achieved, it is certainly not to him that prayer can be hopefully addressed for political reform." No, place Mr. Blake at the helm and he will steer the ship of State clear of the whirlpools of political corruption, and national dishonor,

MR. BLAKE should at once resign all his offices from the Chancellorship of the University of Toronto, and the leadership of the Liberal party down. No man can live under the stigma conveyed by the Toronto Mail in the following sentences:—

> After reading the addresses presented to Mr. Blake at Windsor, we are convinced that he wrote them himself. No one else would have written so badly; for Mr. Blake has no literary style,

Now that the date of the grand demonstration in honor of Hon. Oliver Mowat and the triumph of Provincial rights is fixed, the admirers of Mr. Mowat in Belleville, Hastings and Prince Edward should take steps to participate in the welcome. The date is Sept. 16, and the place is Toronto. The Reform Association of Toronto have decided to make it Provincial in character so that the enthusiasm of the whole Province over the victory won before the Privy Council may find an outlet.

AN association to achieve the independence of Canada has been formed in Toronto with 20 members to start with To quote:—

> The purpose of the Canadian national association is to maintain the consolidation of the dominion; develop a national sentiment; oppose annexation; and support all constitutional measures to bring about; the independence of Canada. All patriotic Canadians are invited to become members.

Yet the Toronto World disposes of the movement in a report of a dozen lines. Has the World ceased to believe in Canadian Independence or was it ignored by the promoters of the new association?

OUR esteemed contemporary, the Hamilton Spectator, recently asserted that this was the most prosperous country on the face of the globe. Upon reflection it gets off the following:—"Even if protectionists did promise or predict too much—if they thought their remedy for industrial distress would accomplish more than it was able to accomplish, no case has been made out against protection. Most men are inclined to be over-sanguine. Most advocates of any reform promise more for it than events ever justify. The National Policy has not been a failure. It has been of untold value to the country. The worst that can be said of it is that it cannot keep our industries always on the crest of the wave." The italics are in the original. It is to be understood, emphatically, that the N. P. has not been a failure.

THE Legislative Committee of the Trades and Labor Council quotes a sentence of Mr. Donaldson's (Immigration Agent) in a letter to the press as follows:—"Nor have I ever known the inducements to emigrants from Europe to this country so flattering as at the present," and reply to him as below:—"What the "flattering inducements" are he does not enumerate. If many failures in business, general stagnation of trade, and a very great tendency towards a lowering of wages at the present time, coupled with high rents, no decrease in cost of necessaries of life, dear fuel, and every appearance of large numbers to be fed on public charity and in the poor-houses during the coming winter, are to be counted as 'flattering inducements,' then Mr. Donaldson is right."

A SEARCH WARRANT.
If there is any lurking taint of scrofula in the system, Burdock Blood Bitters are warranted to search it out.

AN IMPASSIONED SPEECH

BY DALY, WHEN ASKED IF HE HAD ANYTHING TO SAY.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—John Daly, the dynamiter, after the verdict, was asked by the Clerk of the Court whether he had anything to urge why sentence should not be passed on him. Daly, amid the breathless silence of the Court, burst out into an impassioned oration, in the course of which he claimed that it was beneath the dignity of the British Crown to stigmatize him as an assassin on the evidence that had been given. He characterized the evidence as a tissue of lies and perjury from beginning to end. He was guilty of treason and felony only as every Irishman dearly loves his country, who prays for her peace and would die for her freedom, is guilty of the same crime. Like every member of his race he was prepared to shed the last drop of his blood for Ireland. The remedy for the hostility of the Irish to the British Crown was not, he said, in repression and prosecutions. Give us, he said, our freedom and our own laws. Give us our own Parliament and our own Government. That, and that alone will satisfy the heart of Ireland. As to himself, he submitted to his fate, a willing victim in the cause he loved so well. The British Government he continued, was pitted, not against a few individuals like himself, but against the Irish race throughout the world, under the iron heel of the British rule. Justice this country was refused, and for every victim struck down a dozen patriots were waiting to take his place. At the conclusion of his address, which produced the profoundest sensation in court, Daly drew himself up, and, standing at his full height, defiant and unbroken, listened stoically to the life sentence.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

A CUT FROM A FRIEND.

On the whole a knight is a very useful person.—Hamilton Spectator.

TAKEN TO THE WOODS.

Mr. Pardee and his allies have however only escaped for a time.—Peterboro Review.

A FAVORABLE VERDICT.

Major-Gen. Middleton will do. He may be just as great a disciplinarian, and just as particular in his requirements as Gen. Luard, but he knows how to carry himself, and he has the disposition to suggest instead of damn.—Kingston Whig.

THE NEW KNIGHT.

Ta Phairson has been made a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. There is no reason why he should not take the order if he wants it. It is about on a par with the curl on a pig's tail—not much good, but not particularly hurtful.—London Advertiser.

AN INTERREGNUM.

We intend to take our holidays next week, so no paper will be issued from this office, unless some extra interesting news should come to hand. It is really a duty we owe to ourselves to take a little respite from the toils and cares of business. The regular visits of the Monitor will be resumed on the 15th inst.—Meaford Monitor.

A DEAD FAILURE.

We are told now that it was never pretended that the policy of high taxation could ensure good harvests. It certainly was pretended that it would make Canada independent of all internal and external influences such as short harvests, low prices in foreign markets, etc., and establish here a prosperity which nothing could destroy or diminish. We were to have no more depression, no more insolvency, no more idleness for persons willing to work, That these promises have not been fulfilled, the reports of our correspondents demonstrate. —Globe.

QUEEN CITY NOTES.

TORONTO, Aug. 4.—About 2 o'clock Saturday morning a Northern Railway brakeman named Scully was cut in two at a siding between Weston and Thornhill. It is supposed he fell asleep on the track while waiting to flag a train.

At the meeting of the Provincial Board of Health Saturday, Drs. Bryce and Cassidy were appointed a delegation to the Sanitary Convention at Washington on the 7th of August; to concoct measures for the international and inter-state protection against cholera invasion. Drs. Covernton and Oldwright were appointed a deputation to attend the approaching meetings of the Canadian Sanitary Association and British Association at Montreal.

The advance guard of the members of the British association arrived here from Ottawa Saturday morning in the Canadian Pacific railway car St. Lawerance. They were met at the station by the mayor, Hector Cameron, Q. C., and C. W. Bunting, and after luncheon at the Queen's Hotel, were driven to the University observatory and other points of interest. They left yesterday morning for Niagara and for the Northwest to-day,

OTTAWA, Aug 4.—The Public Works Department have received tenders for coal for public buildings thoroughout the Dominion. They have been opened, but the contracts will not probably be awarded for several days yet.

Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

FROM BELLEVILLE NORTHWEST.

Description of the Steel Electric-lighted Steamer "Algoma."

SAILING UP LAKE SUPERIOR.

Correspondence of the Ontario.

To be ignorant of the Northwest is to be ignorant of the greater portion of our country. So, detesting ignorance of my native land, I started in the fifth month of the present year for a trip over the "Lone Land," Taking the route of the Northern Lakes we run by rail to Owen Sound and change to the magnificent steamer Algoma for the head waters of Lake Superior. As it is too early for summer travel through these chilly waters, the pleasure seekers are few. The company is composed chiefly of English immigrants who are being sent out to the Northwest under the auspices of the London Samaritan Society. They are for the most part well to do, and will be a desirable class of settlers. There are also a large number of Scotch immigrants, and nearly 200 cabin passengers, in all about 1,500. At times most of them make merry but there is no mistaking the sound, for "at each remove they drag a lengthening chain."

THE ALGOMA.

Perhaps an abridged account of the Algoma will be read with interest. She was built last year by Aikin & Mansell of Glasgow, Scotland, especially for this line. She was delivered at Montreal, cut in two, towed up the St. Lawrence canals up Lake Ontario to Buffalo, put together and steamed to Port Colborne. The model is admirable and the graceful run of the lines indicate strength, seaworthiness, and adaptability for speed. She is 270 ft. long by 38 feet beam and has a depth of hold of 15 ft, The Plimsoll marks allow her to load to 15 ft. of water, on which she would carry 2,000 tons dead weight of freight. The anchors, windlasses and capstan are handled by steam and all freight is taken in or out by a hoisting engine on the main deck. She is steered by steam and her course could be directed by a child. Instead of bells and whistles as signals to the engine rooms. there is a self-acting telegraph from the bridge. Six large life boats, 600 life preservers with a liberal allowance of life buoys about the decks constitute the life escapes in case of danger. She is lighted throughout by the Canadian Edison electric light, of Hamilton, in a style never before seen on the lakes. A novel and useful feature of lighting is an electric lamp, with a long and flexible conductor. It can be taken from the boat and carried up dark decks, or can be used in the examination of the screw, rudder or any submerged part of the hull. It is of course enclosed in an airtight glass globe and sheds its light when under the surface of the water as well as when in the air. Matches are not used on board, not even for lighting cigars being used for that purpose. The furniture of the main saloon is first-class. The protection against fire is the most ample that human ingenuity can devise. In the first place the vessel itself is of steel, and the hull of course cannot burn. The main and upper decks are also of steel. Only the cabins or the cargo can burn. All parts of the boat are furnished with cold water pipes for fire purposes the water being supplied by a donkey engine.

We left Owen Sound at 3 a.m. on Sunday morning, May 11th, had a delightful sail out of Georgian Bay, arriving in Sault River at 7:30 in the evening. The St. Mary's is a narrow winding stream with grassy and well-wooded shores, presenting a great variety of charming scenery. Navigation being too dangerous in the darkness that has thrown its mantle around us the steamer lays to till morning. A few of us soon go ashore and make our way to the only hotel on St. Joseph's Island. With the first streak of day we are on the move The passage through the locks was delightful. It seemed but a few miles till we entered Superior—30,000 square miles of fresh water, the grandest of inland seas. At Whitefish Point we encountered fifteen miles of ice. This was one of the

MOST BEAUTIFUL SIGHTS

I ever beheld. So far as the eye could scan it was a boundless field of floating crystal, The open places presented the appearance of silvery waters. Had they been real lakes, with wooded banks, cool groves and historical points such as where the red men held their council fires and tortured their captives, I should have said:—

"Good-bye to pain and care! I take mine ease to-day;
Here where the sunny waters break,
And ripples the keen breeze, I shake
All burdens from the heart, all weary thoughts away."

After running parallel with the main land and rounding the extremity called Thunder Cape, rising 2,000 feet at our left is an island of magnificent upward dimensions. On the north is the imposing formation called Pie Island, and within this closely guarded place nestles Thunder Bay. Directly ahead, on a rising shore, is old Prince Arthur's Landing, or Port Arthur. Every available piece of bunting is spread to the wind and we ride in as stately as any ocean steamer in the presence of 1,000 spectators.

WORTH TEN DOLLARS A BOTTLE.
Any person who has used Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure, would not be without it if it cost ten dollars a bottle. A good thing is worth its weight in gold, and Nerviline is the best remedy in the world for all kinds of pain. It cures neuralgia in five minutes; toothache in one minute; lame back at one application; headache in a few moments; and all pains just as rapidly. Small test bottles only cost 10 cents. Why not try it to-day? Large bottles 25 cents, sold by all druggists and country dealers. Use Polson's nerve pain cure—Nerviline.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.
Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes.
Trial Bottles Free at R. Templeton's Drug Store Large Size $1 00.

BRITISH POLITICS.

Numerous Meetings Denounce the House of Lords.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Meetings denouncing the House of Lords as at present constituted are reported daily from different parts of the country. Counter meetings approving of Salisbury's course are also being held, but they lack the enthusiasm of the denunciating parties, who have taken up the 50th anniversary of the abolition of slavery as a parallel case and point to the fact that three times the House of Commons passed a Bill providing for the extirpation of inhuman commerce in slaves, and each time the measure was defeated in the House of Lords as an instance of how that body can get and keep on the wrong side of every popular movement towards the liberty of the masses. Lord Randolph Churchill, who has long been the blazing faggot in the Tory powder magazine, for the sake of preventing what seemed to by an unavoidable explosion, has temporarily extinguished himself by resigning the chairmanship of the National Conservative Union—but, to show the nominal leaders of the party that the power was not out of his hands, canvassed for and secured the election of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach as his successor.

CANADIAN NOTES.

The opening of the Ontario & Quebec railway will take place on the 11th.

The seven-year old son of Antoine Decaire, of Garden Island, near Kingston, was drowned while getting a pail of water from the lake.

To-morrow the freeholders of Hamilton will vote for or against a comprehensive system of parks. An expenditure of over $100,000 is contemplated.

Everything in connection with the Brockville water works is now ready for the water to be turned on, which it was expected would be done this morning.

While two boys named Leadbeater and Riley of Kingston, were playing with a revolver it discharged, and the ball went through the former's hand. Riley was arrested.

FITTED OUT FOR THE SEASON. Dresses, cloaks, coats, stockings and all garments can be colored successfully with the Diamond Dyes. Fashionable colors. Only 10c. at druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co, Burlington, Vt.

CABLE BREVITIES.

The king of Annam is dead.

The Imperial Government has resolved upon a large reduction of the forces in Ireland.

Mr. Thomas Sexton and Mr. William Redmond of the Irish National League have sailed for America.

The Egyptian Conference has adjourned sine die without arriving at any agreement provisional or otherwise.

Lord Randolph Churchill will act as leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons in the absence of Sir Stafford Northcote.

The trial of the libel suit brought by Bolton, crown solicitor, against Parnell and other proprietors of United Ireland, for £30,000 damages, began Friday in Dublin.

THEIR NAME IS LEGION.
Legions of people have had their lives made miserable by Piles. This painful difficulty is often induced and always aggravated by Constipation. Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for all affections of this kind. It acts as a gentle cathartic, promotes a healthy action of the bowels, and soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces. It has cured hundreds of cases where all other remedies have failed. Sold by all druggists,

WHERE ARE THE TOURISTS?

The St. Lawrence and Thousand Islands travel is suffering greatly—presumably from the prevailing 'hard times' and cool, rainy weather. The thousand Islands House at Alexandria Bay, which has accomodation for 1,000 people, has at present less than 100 guests, while the Crossman House has but few more. If business does not improve they will both be shut down earlier than usual. The season at Niagara Falls is also reported very dull this year.

FATAL RATTLESNAKE BITE.

WINDSOR, Aug. 4.—A young daughter of a farmer named Horres, living near Moulton, Essex Co., Ont., was bitten on the foot by a rattlesnake while picking whortleberries. Antidotes were promptly applied but without success. The girl died in a few hours.

PARNELL AND DAVITT.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Observer says: Though the breach between Davitt's party and the Parnellites is temporarily closed, it is not healed. Parnell's followers believe Davitt will take his own course, and in the event of a general election prove a formidable opponent.

DUBLIN, Aug. 4.—Twenty men have so far been implicated in the disgusting Dublin scandals. They are all men who have occupied respectable places in the community. Among them are stock brokers, justices of the peace, castle officials, two doctors and several officers of the army. Warrants have been issued against several men who have fled from Dublin.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF,
And perhaps in the distant future when the ages have grown old, and move with slow and failing steps down the corridors of time—When the adjuncts and appliances that now make life endurable are forgotten, how gladly will the people hail the re-discovery of Putnam' Painless Corn Extracter, the great and only sure pop corn cure of this age. Without a rival for efficacy or painless action, certain in every case and yet perfectly harmless to every other part, surely its loss would be felt in future ages as keenly as its value is now appreciated by all in this. Try Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure and safe. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

While at the seaside Mr. Johnson, of Ontario Business College, ascertained that a number of young men from Maine and New Hampshire will come to Belleville to take a commercial course.

Some gentlemen who drove to the Sandbanks Saturday report that the hotel there is full of guests who are enjoying themselves immensely. One of the visitors could not obtain a bed and hung himself up in the office where the proprietor allowed him to sleep after seeing that the safe was fast.

It is hoped that few Belleville people experience the delirium tremens, but it is well to know that Dr. Seitzer, in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, recommends beef tea made very hot with red pepper, for delirium tremens. A London surgeon is stated to have treated 150 cases successfully with this remedy alone.

The proprietor of the Prince Edward House in future will keep a close watch on any guests he may have from Kingston. On Thursday night a woman called at the police station and gave her name as Mrs. Marlow, of Kingston. She said she was searching for her husband, John Marlow, and had no money to pay her hotel fare. Constable Cook took her to the Prince Edward House where she found lodgings for the night, but left in the morning carrying away with her the sheets on the bed.

With an unclouded sky there will be good moonlight from now until the 10th. Jupiter the planet which is many times larger than the earth, is the evening star till the 7th when after emerging from behind the sun, showing that he is further away from us than the orb of day, he becomes a morning star. The queenly Venus is morning star during the month and is a charming object in the eastern sky during its course. On the 17th the most lovely star that gilds the morn reaches her greatest brilliancy and is well worth getting up to see. Mercury is evening star this month.

The clear blue of the empyrean was unclouded yesterday as the sun rose in all its glory and it was apparent very early that we were in for a hot day. It it had not been for the breeze which fanned the atmosphere into motion it would have been exceedingly sultry. As it was it was undoubtedly above zero. In the evening, beguiled by the starry heaven no one thought of taking umbrellas or wraps to church and worshippers heard with consternation the patter of the rain when the storm broke before eight o'clock. Such sudden changes are unusual in this country and the ladies in muslin dresses and thin shoes thought them as undesirable as they are rare.

During lacrosse matches the remark is often made that the ground on which games are played would make a first-class athletic park, and no doubt it would. The idea is that the lacrosse, bicycle and other athletic clubs should combine to form an Athletic Association, which should have a grand stand erected, a cinder track for bicycle racing and running constructed, and the grounds levelled and improved. The expense would not be very great. As the largest and most influential club of the two, the Rambler's Wheel Club should take the matter up and that would mean success. If the movement is to go ahead at all it should be started this summer so that next year's season would open up with one of the best athletic grounds in Ontario, controlled by one of the largest bicycle clubs and one of the best lacrosse clubs. If the grounds now used by the lacrosse club are objectionable for any reason, it would not affect the project, as there is other ground to be had.

At this season of the year, when all are liable to an attack of cholera, every family should be protected by having in the house a good reliable remedy. Such a remedy will be found in Holden's Cholera Drops, for sale at Geen's drug store.

MAUD S' PERFORMANCE.

She Trots a Quarter Less Than Jay Eye See.

Teemer Beats Ross—The Shamrocks Win—Toronto Takes the Intermediate.

It having been publicly stated that Maud S would trot a fast mile and probably endeavor to lower her record 5000 people were present at the Cleveland race track on Saturday to witness the event, but had no idea of the rare treat that was in store for them. Bair, the driver brought Maud on the track and exercised her frequently between heats of other races. At four o'clock she was in fine form and condition. The pretty little thing watched the weighing of the driver and other preliminaries with apparent interest, and when the word was given to go she gathered herself for a desperate effort, and before reaching the first quarter post had settled herself into a 2 08 gait and passed it in thirty-two seconds. The half was made in 1.04, still maintaining the rapid pace. The third quarter was a trifle slower. but after rounding into the home stretch her speed was terrific. With her head up and her eyes flashing she shot under the wire like a rocket having completed the circuit in 2.09¾, maintaining her reputation of "Queen." Her driver, Bair, is being complimented on every hand as the hero of the greatest race ever driven. By his contract with Mr. Vanderbilt he receives $5000 for beating Jay Eye See's best time, and an additional $5000 for the feat of lowering the mare's own record.

TEEMER DEFEATS ROSS

Wallace Ross of St. John, N. B., and John Teemer of McKeesport, Pa., rowed at Oak Point Saturday what was perhaps the most interesting sculling match that ever took place on the continent. The race was four miles. Ross was leader for the first half of the course, and Teemer was not headed during the second two miles. The victory was won by Teemer in his wonderfully scientific turning of the stake boat. Teemer caught the water first with something of a splash and went six feet ahead of his opponent. At three miles and three quarters Ross saw that he had to work and hit as high as thirty-four strokes to the minute. Teemer braced up at this stage also and went up to thirty-four, but did not stay there more than a dozen lengths. Ross kept up his giant stroke, but it was too late. He continued to diminish the lead gradually, but he had not the distance in which to go to the front, even if he had been able. On the first of the last quarter mile Teemer was plainly not doing his best; but within 200 yards of home he put on a spurt. Ross still continued to creep up, however, and when the line was crossed his bow lapped Teemer's stern. Teemer thus won by a short length. Barney Biglin made the time 26.20, the previous time having been made by Hanlan in his race with Ross at Ogdensburg July last when he accomplished the distance in 27.56.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

The Shamrocks and Torontos will meet again next Saturday in Toronto.

The Canadians know how to sail yachts.—Oswego Palladium. Yes; especially Belleville Canadians.

James Gordon Bennet arrived at Newport Saturday in his yacht Namonia, seven days from the Azores.

The four oared race at the Lachine regatta Saturday was won by the Argonauts of Toronto. The Lachine crew, who came in second claimed a foul and were given the race.

The Ontarios of Toronto achieved a victory on Saturday in Montreal over the Young Shamrocks at lacrosse. They won in three straight games.

The championship pennant of the Oswego club, presented by Commodore Mott, was awarded to the Katie Gray. She was the only boat of the Oswego fleet that covered the entire course.

The lacrosse match in Montreal Saturday resulted in the Shamrocks defeating the Montreals in three straights—1½ min. 18 min., and 8 min., thus regaining the much coveted pennant. There was a great deal of betting on the match, and a subsequent mingling of joy and sorrow.

EXCURSION TO STURGEON POINT.

A local paper says:—Sturgeon Point is blooming and gushing. The hotel is filled and jollity runs wild. Everything is in splendid shape this year, in the house and in all the connections. The Saturday night hops are a splendid institution; the open air ball room having been expressly fitted up this season. Eighty guests are now in the house, and nearly all the Continent is represented. The grounds are in capital order and present a fine rich green, and when in the evening the guests scatter among the trees the sight is pretty in the extreme. The Point is becoming more popular every year, and for the next six weeks the woods will resound with the merry laughter of from eighty to a hundred guests.

The excursion from Belleville to the Point on August 9th promises to be largely attended. The tickets are good for ten days.

RESCUED AT LAST.

W. H. Crooker, druggist of Waterdown, says, when all other remedies fail for Bowel Complaints, then Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry comes to the rescue.

"Facts are stubborn things," and sufferers from chills and fever generally find their complaint a very stubborn fact, until they commence the use of Ayer's Ague Cure. That medicine eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and invariably cures even the worst case.

DEATH OF C. W. BELL.

Taken Suddenly Ill at Montreal he only Lives Three Hours.

Mr. Charles W. Bell, barrister of this city died suddenly at the New York House, Montreal, yesterday morning at five o'clock, and his remains were brought home on the early train this morning in charge of Mr. Kenneth Blackwell, mechanical engineer of the Intercolonial Railway and an undertaker. The report of the death of one so well known in this city caused wide-spread sympathy for the deceased's widow and family.

Mr. Bell left two weeks ago for the east with his wife, who with Mrs. W. L. Fellowes went on to Murray Bay to spend some holidays. Deceased stopped at Montreal and after visiting some friends went to Sherbrooke, Que., where he remained for a few days, returning to Montreal last week, preparatory to leaving on an extended tour through the Northwest. Early Sunday morning he was taken seriously ill at his hotel and in three short hours he died of gastritis, or inflammation of the stomach.

Deceased was thirty-nine years of age, and three years ago was married to the only daughter of City Solicitor Henderson, she with a bright little boy of two years, surviving him. He was born near Perth, where his parents resided for some time, and was a brother to Mr. John Bell, Q. C., solicitor for the Grand Trunk Railway. When a young man he graduated at the Toronto University with honors, carrying off the gold medal, and soon after was called to the bar. He was generous and kind hearted to a fault and made many warm friends. As yet the relatives have been unable to reach Mrs. Bell by telegraph.

PROFESSORIAL LIBEL SUITS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—Two actions have been entered in the Superior Court against Dr. E. P. Lachapelle, one of the professors of Laval Medical Schools, on behalf of Drs. A. B. craig pnd J. B. Durocher both professors in the college, Each for $25,000. Some time ago Dr. Lachapelle made a charge against the faculty, to the effect that an examination had not been fairly conducted. The question was referred to a committee of the society of physicians and surgeons, but Dr. Dachapelle refused to make his charge specially before the body, as it was not a legal tribunal that could take evidence under oath. The entire faculty of Victoria College, will, it is said, take out action against Dr. Lachapelle. Mr. Geoffrion, Q. C., who is the advocate for the defence, states that this will give his client the opportunity he wished for of substantiating his charges before a court of law.

CHEESE MARKET

NEW YORK. Aug. 1—Receipts to-day 21,497 pkgs. The day's record presents few if any really new features. During the early morning there was a little drag and some operators commenced to talk about a loss of tone, but subsequently buyers were found for about all the offering and former rates could be realized without difficulty. In brief, it is a plump 10 cent market for all choice stock, with ½c more paid for fancy under the tryer, and the specially engaged lots passing at 10½c, On other qualities the feeling is also firm, and indeed about all the full cream stock sold at 9½c and upwards, while on the night skims the position remains firm and more could probably have been placed if here. The indications are that little if any stock will be left to carry over into next week where holders have been willing to accept 10c, but goods on a higher limit remain unsold.—N. Y. Bulletin.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 4.—With the cable at 51s. several factorymen contracted for the balance of the season's make on Saturday at 11c. and a fraction better for choice quality.

DAIRYMEN GETTING RICH.

Progressive dairymen who are only satisfied with the best results, are adding to their wealth and conferring a benefit on society, by the rapid improvements they are making in the art of butter making. This class use Wells, Richardson & Co's, Improved Butter Color, and know by actual test that it fills every claim made for it.

NEW DAIRY JOURNAL.

We have received the Canadian Dairyman, a journal which as its name indicates, will be devoted to the interests of the dairy. If subsequent numbers prove to be as well conducted as the initial number it looks as if its success could not be by any means doubtful. Cheese making and kindred interests are those about which the farmer is continually learning and the Dairyman promises to tell him a good many things which are not now generally known. The price of the journal is only fifty cents per year, and the office of publication is 162 St. James street, Montreal.

DRAGGED TO DEATH.

MONTREAL, Aug. 4.—A horrible occurrence at Point aux Trembles is reported. A lad of eleven named Desrochers, having been sent to bring from the pasture a cow, was found some hours afterwards dragging between her feet at the end of a rope tied round her horns. The boy was stripped and frightfully lacerated. It appears that the beast, thoroughly frightened herself by the mass between her legs, must have dragged the child for nearly two hours. The boy is reported inanimate and dying.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

THE IOLANTHE FIRST

In the Second Class Yacht Race at Kingston.

THE NORAH TAKES THE FIRST.

(From our own Correspondent.)

KINGSTON, Aug. 4.—The wind to-day was excellent for the second regatta of the Lake Yacht Racing Association. There were four in the first-class, five in the second and nine in the third. At the time of writing the Norah in the first-class is ahead eight minutes, Aileen 2nd and Garfield 3rd with little time between them. The Norah is making a magnificent sail. In the second class the Iolanthe is first with the Katie Gray at her heels. The Gracie is behind the Laura. The Iolanthe is finely handled. They are now making the round for the last time. The Mabel of Gananoque, and Merlin, of Kingston, are working hard for first place in the third class race.

KINGSTON, 3 p.m.—The Iolanthe came in first at 1.49, Katie Gray 2nd, Laura 3rd. In the 3rd class the Mabel, of Gananoque is 1st, Merlin, of Kingston, 2nd, and Shadow, 3rd.

The Norah won the first-class. The Iolanthe's lead was 10 minutes.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Whatever my sister says is right,' responded Pauline rather haughtily, offended by the point he evidently made of addressing her before Juliette.

'Oh, exactly. In that case the business will be short,' smiled Jagez Scladden, slipping one bony, damp hand over the other. 'Satisfactorily ended, I trust, to both—to both. These papers, of course, you perfectly understand,' he proceeded, placing his splay palm upon them still addressing the younger sister, 'make over to the purchaser of Longusville, for the sum specified, the house, the estate, and all things appertaining animate and inanimate, dead stock and live stock; that on the signatures being affixed, everything passes from your possession into mine.'

'With the proviso,' interpolated Juliette quietly; 'that you do not enter upon real possession for three days.'

'With that proviso,' he added. 'Do you,' again addressing Pauline, 'quite comprehend this?'

'Perfectly,' answered the young girl, slightly confused by Mr. Scladden persisting in forcing her to take the lead.

In her own mind she attributed it to the poor rating he put on her intellect.

Juliette, of course, understood everything.

'Perfectly,' she repeated: you see it so dear, eh?' and she turned to the Creole.

'Yes,' answered the other, looking atr he sister, and pointedly ignoring Mr. Scladden's presence as he apparently did hers 'The estate goes as it stands, by which I suppose it means the house, the furnature, the lands, outbuildings, and the servants?'

'The slaves and the bond slaves—exactly; could not have been more clearly put,' responded Jobez Scladden, honoring Juliette with an approving glance. 'All live stock either recently purchased or born on the estate,'

'That is what my sister intends,' remarked Pauline, 'our means not equalling our desires to give them freedom, or we should.'

'Ah, that is a matter of opinion,' rejoined Jabez Scladded, with a deprecatory smile. 'Very generous but rather expensive philanthropy. The question is whether the objects are worthy. Young ladies—he, he, he!—are at times, a leetle too impulsive.'

'As you remarked sir, the object of emancipalinn is a matter of opinion,' interposed Juliette, haughtily; 'and in no way relevant to the present case. My dear Mr. Folmsbee cannot the papers be signed?'

Mr; Scladden regarded her with an admiration more insulting than speech.

The Creole, before turning away, gave him a look that would have annihilated many.

It had not the slighiest effect upon the present receiver save to produce a similar smile, as addressing Pauline deferentially, he said—

'Are you ready, Miss Beauchamp?'

'Quite, replied Pauline. 'Please, Mr. Folmsbee, will you tell us what we are to do?'

Before the old gentleman could comply being rather taken back by the exceeding singularity of the purchaser's manner, Jabez Scladden had risen, and with seeming gallantry drawn the table to Pauline, put his finger on the place where she was to sign and presented her with the pen.

Taking involuntarily, the young girl glanced towards her sister, feeling she had the right priority.

But with a smile the creole motioned her to proceed.

She delayed no longer,

The act was done.

The cruel enemy was triumphant.

It might have been seen in the vulture-like face, in the brighter gleam of his dull green eyes.

Poor Pauline! how little she dreamed of what she had done!

Instead, with a long soft-drawn breath, as if she had accomplished some great feat, she raised her head, the ceremony fully completed and with a little languor handed the pen to her sister.

'Come Juliette,' she exclaimed gaily; 'it is nothing very terrible after all.'

The Creole laughing took the pen and approached the table.

But Jabez Scladden was no longer the Jabez Scladden of a moment ago.

His cruel, bad countenance was lighted with an expression of triumph, of cunning and exultation.

As the Creole advanced he abruptly placed his hand on the deed, and with a self-complaisant leer, drawing the parchments toward him began to fold them up.

With amazement not unmingled with anger, the three watched him a second in silence; then his cheery face growing very red and indignant, Mr. Folmsbee exclaimed—

Excuse me Mr. Scladden, but I am blessed if I can make you behavior out. What are you doing with those papers, sir? Those deeds are incomplete until the elder Miss Beauchamp has signed them.

Jabez Scladden slowly shook his head from side to side to side as might an inebriated eagle, a low chuckle issued from his long yellow throat, while he continued to fold the deed, as he replied, winking cunningly—

Not exactly sir; I know perfectly well what I am about, I do. It is you who make a slight mistake. It is only Miss Pauline's signature I want; the other wont go for much I reckon.

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.." and they will tell you:
Mandrake! or Dandelion !"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasting by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5,00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

James Jeffry Roche in Life.

From the maddening crowd they stand apart,
The maidens four and the Work of Art;
And none might tell from sight alone
In which had Culture ripest grown—
The Gotham Million fair to see
The Philadelphia Pedigree,
The Boston Mind of azure hue,
Or the soulful soul from Kalamazoo—
For all loved Art in a seemly way,
With an earnest soul and a capital A.

* * * * * * * *

Long they worshipped; but no one broke
The sacred stillness, until up spoke
The western one from the nameless place,
Who, blushing, said: "What a lovely vase!"
Over three faces a sad smile flew,
And they edged away from Kalamazoo.
But Gotham's haughty soul was stirred
To crush the stranger with one small word,
Deftly hiding reproof in praise,
She cries: "'Tis indeed a lovely vaze!"
But brief her unworthy triumph when
The lofty one from the house of Penn,
With the consciousness of two grandpapas,
Exclaims: "It is quite a lovely vahs!"
And glances round with an anxious thrill,
Awaiting the word of Beacon Hill,
But the Boston maid smiles courteouslee
And gently murmurs: "Oh, pardon me!
I did not catch your remark, because I was so entranced with that charming vaws!"

A DIGNIFIED WAITER

HOW HE WAS RUFFLED BY A PARTY OF WAGS.

Foote, the English comic actor, made a wager that he would upset the dignity of a certain head waiter at a hotel in Bath. who had the name of being the most dignified man in Britain.

Foote went to the hotel with three friends, an engineer who had lost one eye, a cavalry officer who had lost an arm, and an old sea captain who had lost a leg. The precious quartette ensconsed themselves in in the four corners of the room and bawled for the waiter, who came in with more than ordinary assumption of dignity, as a tacit protest against their unceremonious treatment of him.

'Waiter,' cried the one eyed engineer, 'come and take off my eye glass,' adding as the waiter swelled with indignation, 'and while you're about it just take out my eye.'

'Your eye, sir,' echoed the startled dignitany.

'Yes, my eye; don't you understand English? Look sharp.'

Eye-glass and glass eye came away together, and the waiter reconnoiter them thougtfully as they laid in the palm of his hand like a man eyeing a watch that has suddenly stopped.

Just then the one armed dragoon shouted in his turn, 'Waiter take off my glove and now that I think of it, 'Take off my arm.' Glove and hand gave way at first touch, and the waiter, appalled to see his customers all tumbling to pieces like a mosaic puzzle, was turning hastily away when the one-legged sailor roared:

'Waiter, pull off my starboard boot; and you may as well pull off my leg. too!'

The poor waiter shudderingly complied, mentally repeating every prayer he could think of. Instantly the previously loosened straps of the cork leg gave way and down went the man of dignity on his august back with the artificial limb quivering in his clutches.

It was enough. Forgetting everything in his agonizing longing to escape from this chamber of horrors, the ill-starred waiter, casting a terrified glance at the fragments which strewed the carpet, sprang towards the door. But before he could reach it, Foote himself—the length and flexibility of whose neck might have aroused the envy of an ostrich—twisted his neck right over his shoulder and called out in a voice hollow and enearthly enough to frighten a Bengal tiger;

'Waiter, come and take off may hat, and while you's at it take off my head!'

Human nature could bear no more. The martyred waiter gave one yell worthy of a Cherokee Indian, and made but a single bound from the top of the stairs to the bottom, upsetting not only his dignity but himself so thoroughly that to the day of his death he was never quite himself again.

THE DIFFERENCE.

'Pa,' said a boston urchin of 8, 'couldn't Daniel Webster knock out Sullivan in three rounds?'

The Boston father did not look surprised af perhaps a New York father would. but said:

'Not much, my lad.'

'Was Daniel a n. g. slugger pa?'

'Daniel Webster wasn't a slugger at all, boy. What are you talking about?'

'He wasn't a slugger? What did that man you were talking with call him the 'great ex-pounder' for then?'

A VILLIANOUS OUTRAGE.

A beautiful young English immigrant girl, 20 years of age, lately arrived at Quebec, after straying a short distance from the steamship was decoyed to a house of ill-fame. There, after being locked up and outraged, her cries brought a passer-by to her relief, and after struggling with some bullies her rescuer secured the girl's release. She was then taken care of.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.
The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shakar Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerly advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,

HOARSENESS AND FAILURE OF voice from congestion of the vocal cords follicular disease of the fauces, or ministers sore throat, are often the results of bronchial troubles, extending up the trachea and larnyx, affecting the whole mocus tract of the air passages. These diseases are the outcome or expression of nerve debility and blood impoverishment from overworking the system and excessive use of the organs involved. Here constitutional treatment is required to restore nutrition and nerve power, and WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya has been successfully used by singers and public speakers.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

OUR LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

The Globe's report upon Belleville's industries dated July 29, was as follows:—

Belleville is not a manufacturing centre by any means, but whether it is the blight of a bad Government policy or not the fact is that since the inception of a high tariff policy the city, which flourished well enough under Mr. Mackenzie to become incorporated in 1878, has gone down in great degree, the population even not equalling that of the ante-N. P. period. The Stove Foundry is now perhaps the most important industry in the place. It now gives employment to 102 men. The managers were induced to move here from Toronto over a year ago. They say that wages are ten per cent. less than in 1882, and the same as paid in 1878. The protective tariff, however, does not affect the stove business except injuriously. The raising of the tariff from 17 1-2 to 25 per cent. did not keep out stoves of American manufacture, nor would it if it was double that. The duty of $2 a ton on pig iron and the duty on coal are naturally considered great drawbacks in this business, and much more than offset the increased protection, so-called.

The reports of those engaged in the building business and the manufacture of woodwork are far from satisfactory, and indicate a depressed condition of business. At one factory where in 1882 fifteen men were employed there is now a staff of twelve, which is no larger than in 1878, when this firm was busier than they are now. A few men get 12 1-2c and four or five 26c more in wages than in 1878, but of late years the scale has not risen.

The leading mills and sash establishments report that their business is about the same from year to year. In 1882 they employed 37 men, and have now 47, the increase being chiefly caused by the addition of a shingle mill. The wages were from $30 to $40 a month in 1882; now they are from $26 to $40. The cheapness of labor is accounted for by immigration. About 31 men were employed in 1878, wages running from $28 to $35 a month. The lumber business generally is not good. Locally the trade is about the same, but the foreign demand is poor for the "big cut."

In the axe factory the manager refused to give any information, but it is learned that there are only about 15 hands on now, earning from $1 50 to $2 00 a day. In 1878 there were 50 hands and their wages ran from $20 to $24 a week. This was then the most important industry in the city. When in 1882 Mr. Blake visited the city, the men of the axe factory were paraded by the proprietor as fruits of the N. P. during the progress of the Reform procession.

The carriage business is dead. One man said, pointing at his wareroom full of buggies: "Do you see that, and the season is gone." The trade claim that this has been the hardest season in years, but the wages for the best mechanics are better.

The pump business, once an important industry, here, is bad. One factory has closed entirely, and the other only employs two men, whereas in 1878 there were ten to fifteen men.

In the furniture factories the staffs are smaller, and they are just recovering from the effects of three-quarter time all winter. Wages in this branch of industry are about ten per cent lower than in 1878.

It is unquestionably dull with the foundry men. One firm said they had been in the business for 40 years and never saw it so dull. The men employed are fewer in number that in 1878 and the wages paid are lower. If it was not for jobbing there would not be any business at all. Another firm said it was duller than they had seen it for many years. They employ ten men less than in 1882 and about the same number and scale of wages as in 1878. Mechanical labor is cheap. There being no prospect of work this firm are letting men go. Common labor is very cheap. Martin Bros'. foundry, in full blast in 1878, is now closed. The Victoria foundry, which was closed, is again running with 10 or 12 hands.

The largest woollen mill is running at one third of its capacity with wages slightly higher than in 1878 when, however, they were running with their full capacity. There are 12 hands less now than in 1878 employed. The tariff of 17½ per cent is considered ample protection for this industry.

Our local contemporary challenges the accuracy of some of these statements, admits the truth of others, and in an endeavor to make its readers believe that the cherished Tory idol of High Taxation has not been a failure makes a number of incorrect corrections and false statements. Now we believe the above report to be a very fair one, with a leaning towards as favorable a report as possible. Our contemporary says the city flourished until the lumbering industry decayed and until its trade was injured by bonusing local railways. Few towns are ever injured by railway enterprise though such is undoubtedly the case with Belleville. Perhaps our contemporary can explain why this unusual result has afflicted the city. But surely the prosperity of the city since 1878 did not depend upon the lumber industry? Is it possible that the withdrawal of the trade of a natural product was not more than offset by the new policy? Out upon it! an unregenerate Grit could not show less faith in the Tilley tariff. But "a change for the better," the article continues, has taken place and the population is as large as in any previous year excepting perhaps 1879. Is the change for the better indicated by the population? The Stove Foundry ought to have added some hundreds to the population, and then there is the natural increase. But what are the figures?

" " 1884	9,467

The policy which produces this result cannot be permanent unless the electors take leave of their senses. A wrong Government policy and an insane municipal policy has deprived the city of Belleville of fair-play which let it get and it will, we predict, forge ahead as fast as the most sanguine of us would wish. We have had one or two new industries established here in spite of the N. P., which does not, admittedly, improve the manufacture of our chief industry, stoves.

It is true, as stated, that the number of hands employed in the axe factory is not so large as it has been, but the manager informs us that as many axes are now being turned out as in 1878.

This follows the uncontradicted statement that this factory employed 50 men in 1878 and employs about 15 now. How 15 men can turn out as many axes as 50 perhaps our contemporary knows; we don't. The articles proceeds in the next sentence to hint that it could if it wished account for the "alterations," meaning the decline, thus admitting in one line the depression that is denied in the other. But it does not wish to explain this rapid decline of an important industry. A difficult explanation is thereby avoided.

It is true the Globe's statement that the carriage business is dead was almost too sweeping, though the exception in the case of the manufacturer named is a solitary exception. Mr. St. Charles does a large business in vehicles of the 'bus class, executing orders for various parts of the country. We question very much if the statement does not apply to the ordinary carriage department of his business as it does to other ordinary carriage manufacturers. Our contemporary says of them that they are prosperous in the busy season. That is at all events an encouraging assurance for they are assuredly not prosperous this year.

We have made enquiries as to the pump factory which the Globe stated was closed. Our contemporary says the Globe's commissioner was hoaxed for the factory referred to as a closed one was Owens', destroyed by fire and not re-established. It is ascertained that the closed factory is Mr. Taugher's, so that the Globe report is perfectly correct.

We are told in this article that Martin Bros'. foundry, closed, was an insignificant thing anyway, and that its place was taken by Barrett's sewing machine "factory." If the works which have closed down (and of course do not tell against the High Taxation policy) were insignificant, employing few men, will our contemporary tell us how many men are employed in the knitting works, vinegar works, and Barrett's sewing machine shop which, of course, vindicate the policy inaugurated in 1878? Not half a dozen men in all three! Our contemporary need not decry the works which have been forced to close down or reduce their staff for they might have grown and expanded if they had not been killed.

Finally, it says, we come to the woollen mills, and it doubts the statement as to the decrease in the number of hands employed in the largest mill, "despite the fact that there has been for several months a depression in that industry." When the facts lead our contemporary to acknowledge the depression why does it doubt a statement which is too true to contradict?

Some "new industries" are referred to which the Globe report it is said omitted to notice and these are the knitting works, vinegar works, Brown's carriage works and Barrett's sewing machine "factory." As we have said the first two and the last one employ altogether about half a dozen men, the knitting works giving employment to a number of girls. Barrett's sewing machine "factory" gives employment to himself and possibly one more. His business consists chiefly in repairing. Brown's carriage works is a result of a division of the old firm of St. Charles & Brown.

> The number of men now employed in the furniture factories is at least three times larger than in 1878. Let the commissioners ask Mr. Tickell.

This statement is at least three times as ignorant or false as any of the others in the article under consideration. The number of men now employed in the furniture factories of this city is no greater than in 1878; in fact it is less.

We have referred at length to the Intelligencer's article because it shows to what devices Tory journals are put to defend the N. P. From the article one would suppose the Globe's report of the industries of Belleville was a libel on the city whereas our contemporary does not make one point against it on the score of accuracy if we make a possible exception of not including the manufacture of 'busses in the review of the carriage trade. On the other hand our contemporary, in its effort to apologize and defend the mistaken policy of the Dominion Government makes statements as reckless and as untruthful as it is possible for them to be. If Belleville has been grievously hurt by the high tariff it is not alone. That policy has wrung from the people millions of hard earned money unnecessarily which went to support hot-house industries and was of little avail as regards enterprises indigenous to the country. The cost of living has risen enormously and yet to-day wages are away down with those whose good fortune it is to have work at all.

A HOTEL FOR SUICIDES.

An ingenious southerner has conceived the idea of opening a hotel for suicides. He acts upon the American idea of the largest liberty for the largest hallucinations. He proposes to let rooms and furnish board to gentlemen and ladies who contemplate self-destruction and will furnish all modern conveniences, each room will be supplied with a finely ornamented brass hook, upon which the guest can get up and hang himself at any hour. Gas, of course, will be furnished, that can be blown out before retiring, and pistols will be kept in the billiard room.

SPORTING NEWS.

Conduct of the Yachts at the Kingston Regatta.

ROSS TO AGAIN ROW TEEMER.

The following particulars regarding the Kingston yacht races, in addition to what was telegraphed and published yesterday, are taken from the Whig. In the first class the wind was excellent. The boats got away at 10:32. The time at home buoy was:

	H.	M.	S.
Norah	1	13	50
Aileen	1	23	30
Garfield	1	30	25
Verve	1	43	25

The Norah maintained the lead well. At the home buoy entering upon the last round the Norah was 12 minutes ahead of the Aileen. The yachts passed the winning buoys as follows:

	H.	M.	S.
Norah	3	43	25
Aileen	3	54	50
Garfield	4	4	50
Verve	4	27	30

In the second class the boats got away at 10:58, the start being as pretty a one as was ever witnessed in Kingston. The wind was light at the start, but by and bye it suited everybody. On the run back to the city they ran better and faster than the first class yachts, passing the buoy in this order:

	H.	M.	S.
Iolanthe	12	27	28
Katie Gray	12	31	25
Laura	12	34	45
Gracie	12	35	50
Victoria, time not taken.

The Victoria was really sailing with the third class yachts and the Verve with the second. In starting for George's barn, on the second round, the Iolanthe led with the Katie Gray close at her wake. The Laura and Gracie were having a lively time of it for third place. The Victoria was simply nowhere. The Iolanthe gained on the stretch to Simcoe Island and turned the buoy at 1.33 quite a distance ahead of the Katie Grey. She straightened away for the home buoy with all sail set. The Laura and Gracie were still having it nip and tuck for third place. The race was a pretty one throughout, and when it ended the time taken was:—

	H.	M.	S.
Iolanthe	1	49	20
Katie Gray	2	00	01
Laura	2	02	45
Gracie	2	11	05
Victoria, not taken.

The Iolanthe beat the Katie Gray 10 min. 41 sec. The Gracie came in minus her topmast.

REGATTA NOTES.

The Yacht Club will meet to-morrow night to perfect the arrangements for the regatta on Friday.

The Kingston Club entertained the visiting yatchmen at supper last night and this morning they all left on their yachts for Belleville.

It is probable the following boats will sail in the regatta here on Friday. First class—Aileen, Verve, Norah and Garfield, Second class—Surprise, Iolanthe, Gracie, Katie Gray and Laura.

The News says:—"The Norah was handled magnificently throughout, the effect of which was the splendid position she took in such grand style. Its a pretty cold day when Billy Black gets left."

The Norah was hampered on the last round in yesterday's race by her centre board getting jammed midway on a bar too near too which the pilot ran. Her victory over the Aileen was nevertheless a splendid one.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

It is stated that Hanlan has not sailed from Australia.

The yacht Cygnet of Toronto left on a cruise yesterday afternoon for Niagara.

A five-mile sculling match for $1000 a side between Teemer and Ross has been arranged at Boston.

It is understood that if the Ontarios defeat the Young Shamrocks in the return match they will hand the intermediate flags to the association, and enter the ranks of a first-class team.

CANADIAN NOTES.

A movement has been started in the Limestone city for a centennial celebration in the fall, the town plot having been surveyed one hundred years since by the Government surveyor.

WORTH TEN DOLLARS A BOTTLE.

Any person who has used Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure, would not be without it if it cost ten dollars a bottle. A good thing is worth its weight in gold, and Nerviline is the best remedy in the world for all kinds of pain. It cures neuralgia in five minutes; toothache in one minute; lame back at one application; headache in a few moments; and all pains just as rapidly. Small test bottles only cost 10 cents. Why not try it to-day? Large bottles 25 cents, sold by all druggists and country dealers. Use Polson's nerve pain cure—Nerviline.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes.

A WINNIPEG ROMANCE

How a Lonely Bachelor fell Head and Ears in Love.

WINNIPEG, Aug 5.—Mr. Isaac Cowie, who has taken passage for Europe with his newly married wife was a principal in quite a romantic courtship. He has had charge of a post at Fort McMurry, Lake Athabask, for seventeen years, and he has never been out of the country and beheld Winnipeg for the first time upon his arrival here on Thursday evening last. Deciding to take a trip to England to visit his relatives, he took passage on board the steamer Princess from Grand Rapids. While on the steamer he met a young lady named Miss Maggie Sinclair, who is a a niece of Mrs. Allan of this city. Although their passage on the boat was only a couple of days' duration, the acquaintance proved so agreeable that, before they reached their destination, Winnipeg, it ripened into mutual affection and before they left the boat were engaged to be married. The wedding was fixed for Friday night, The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Fortini, of Trinity church, Everything was conducted very quietly and in keeping with the romantic courtship. Mr. Cowie, instead of purchasing one ticket for England as he had intended, bought two, and after dining at the conclusion of the ceremony left on the evening train with his wife.

FIGHT WITH A DOG.

KINGSTON, Aug 4—Mr. R. Riorson, Reeve of North Crosby, was attacked by a large vicious dog on Saturday near Westport, and after a battle of ten minutes he managed to drag the brute to a pile of stones near by, and while the dog was chewing his left wrist he battered its head with a rock till it dropped. He then started across the fields for home. The dog recovered and followed him to the door where it was shot. Mr. Riorson was driven to a doctor's surgery at once and received medical attention. His legs, hands, and neck were terribly lacerated and his clothes saturated with blood. It was the second time that the dog had attacked him. The affair has created a sensation in the neighborhood.

RATHER PERSONAL.

Life.

When Gen. B. F. Butler was a young man two girls, dwelling in the same boarding house, were simultaneously in love with him. Both ladies were sitting in the parlor one evening and Ben was making violent love to one of them, much to the chagrin of the other, who flounced to the piano and sang Rock of Ages at the top of her voice, laying particular stress on the line, 'Simply to thy cross-eye cling.'

FITTED OUT FOR THE SEASON. Dresses, cloaks, coats, stockings and all garments can be colored successfully with the Diamond Dyes, Fashionable colors. Only 10c. at druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co, Burlington, Vt.

WHITBY, Aug. 5.—The house of George Rowson, a farmer on the 3rd concession, Pickering, was entered Sunday by a tramp named Henry Porter, while the family was absent at church, who took therefrom a valuable watch, ear-drops and other jewellery, also a quantity of clothing. Chief constable Bryan wired to Oshawa and elsewhere, and after a chase of about 25 miles succeeded in capturing his man, having in his possion all the stolen property. He was brought before the police magistrate and sent to gaol here.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

And perhaps in the distant future when the ages have grown old, and move with slow and failing steps down the corridors of time—When the adjuncts and appliances that now make life endurable are forgotten, how gladly will the people hail the re-discovery of Putnam's Painless Corn Extracter, the great and only sure pop corn cure of this age. Without a rival for efficacy or painless action, certain in every case and yet perfectly harmless to every other part, surely its loss would be felt in future ages as keenly as its value is now appreciated by all in this. Try Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure and safe. N.C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

One or two other complaints from the wards were referred to the Chief Inspector for prompt action. THE CITY'S NUISANCE.

Will the Board of Health Visit the Cells?

POLICE MAGISTRATE'S LETTER.

He Would Rather Resign than Put up With it.

INTERVIEWS WITH THE OFFICIALS.

The basement of the city buildings and the police cells are declared to be in such a state that they may at any time engender disease, and are a standing menace to the health of the officials.

MR. FLINT'S LETTER.

At the last meeting of the city council the following letter from Police Magistrate Flint was read:—

GENTLEMEN,—I do not desire to be an alarmist, but I must enter my most solemn protest against the cellar and cells of the City Hall. I am convinced that sewer gas pours into the cellar in volumes at all times, and is then disseminated through the entire building. Sewer gas, stagnant water and mephitic air of the cells are quite enough to poison the strongest constitution. Medical gentlemen inform me that all of the officials and indeed every one forced to breath this vitiated air are in the greatest danger from cholera, typhoid fever and kindred diseases. Personally I have no doubt but that the serious illness of Mr. Tannahill and the repeated attacks of disease Mr. Ockerman has experienced have been occasioned by malaria. Whether the illness and death of Mr. Holden may be ascribed to this cause I know not. I very nearly lost my life through sewer gas, and I certainly do not desire to sacrifice the remainder of my life from a similiar cause. The air in the cells is so mephitic that I have actually repeatedly released prisoners before trial, as I would not take the responsibility of condemning any one to pass a night in the cells. Mr. Northrup and myself were in the police office when a prisoner was put in a cell. When the dividing door was opened the rush of foul air made Mr. Northrup and myself ill. I spent three hours consecutively in the police court and was so completely prostrated by the combined odours that I went home ill. I cannot feel that I ought to endanger lives by placing men or keeping them in the cells, nor do I feel that it would be right to endanger my own by occupying the building. Out of regard for all parties who have anything to do with the police court, I must, unless required improvements are made, find room elsewhere to hold court and transact business. I cannot think any gentleman of the council will blame me (with a probability of a visit from cholera), for not jeopardizing my life and the lives of unfortunates who fall into the hands of the police. I write this letter with the greatest respect for your Worship and the council, but I would very much rather return to my position as a private citizen than remain Police Magistrate and be obliged to transact business in the city hall. If any statement I have made with regard to the state of the building is doubted, I am willing at my own expense to obtain the services of any qualified expert the council may name to pass his judgment upon the matter."

WHAT THE OFFICIALS SAY.

Mr. D. B. Robertson, City Clerk, who is confined to his office nearly all day, especially at this season of the year, has frequently made complaints to the council about the unhealthy state of the building, but no action to effect a remedy has been taken.

"Is the air as foul now as ever," asked a reporter.

"There is no change. I believe nothing has been done to cause any improvement."

"Has your health been injured by confinement to this office?"

"O, yes; I have no doubt of it at all. Some time ago I had erysipelas in my face which my physician attributed to the bad atmosphere in the office, which is likely to cause blood poisoning."

Mr. D. Ockerman, tax collector, who occupies an office in the north western corner of the building, in an interview with a reporter of THE ONTARIO to-day said that his health had not been impaired by the impure air in the building. If the building was kept clean he did not think there would be any damage. The bottom of the cells he said was not clean nor never was and he thought the cells could be improved in their present location, by the use of disinfectants.

"Is the air in your office offensive?"

"No, except for a few minutes in the morning when the office is first opened."

"Did Mr. Tannahill ever complain of the office?"

"No, I think not. He found the air at times which came through the furnace pipe offensive, but that has been stopped up."

THE POLICE DEPARTMENT.

From the location of the building and the cells it must be admitted that the occupants of the police quarters, city clerk's office and the Police Magistrate's office are in the greatest danger of being injured by the stench from the cells and basement. A reporter had a talk with one of the constables to-day, and learned some points of interest in connection with the subject. In answer to an inquiry if there were any members of the force ill at present from the effects of impure air, the officer replied: "I can't say as to that, but I do know that one member of the force has contracted a lung disease since he came here and another officer is under a doctor's care most of the time. Six or seven years ago poor Billy Daly, then employed on the force, died of typhoid fever, contracted I believe while in this place, and ever since then I have made up mind that if I should lose my life through the effects of this cursed place I will instruct my family to hold the city liable for damages. The place is not fit for human habitation. If the Aldermen would go into the cells any morning when there are five or six prisoners in over night, I think they would be convinced of what I say. If the cholera breaks out in Belleville you will be able to get the first case in the cells. You know as well as I do how the late City Clerk complained of the foul air in his office as well as the late Mr. Holden, and I tell you its a shame for any council to ask us to sleep in such a hovel as this,—a place, as Ald. Hanley correctly stated, that is unfit for dumb brutes."

DESCRIBED AS A NUISANCE.

Mr. Thos. Watkin, market clerk, said: Its no business of mine. The facts are there to be seen for yourself, but I tell you the place is a nuisance. There is stagnant water in the basement now and has been ever since the drain was built. When it rains the surface water from the whole market square run into the basement and remains there for days. The sewer never was built deep enough to carry the water off. When it was being built the men saw that, but they covered it over and there it stands utterly useless. It looked to me when they were building it as if the men were trying to put in time, regardless of whether the expenditure of money benefitted the building or not."

JEALOUSY'S VICTIM.

A YOUNG LADY PUBLICLY THRASHED WITH A RAWHIDE.

A Paterson, N.J., despatch says:—Just as the young ladies in Johnson, Cowan & Co.'s silk mill at Riverside were preparing to leave the building last evening a coach was driven to the employer's entrance and out of the vehicle stepped a fashionably attired young woman, who, entering the building, made her way hastily to an to an upper floor, where in the midst of a crowd of busy women, she met Mrs. Fanny Fairbanks; a young married lady employed in the mill. "Will you go with my husband, will you?" the visitor exclaimed as she drew a horsewhip from the folds of her dress, and before Mrs. Fairbanks could defend herself or escape she received several blows of the rawhide across the face. The well dressed and now infuriated stranger chased her about the room, giving her no chance to escape until the other employees, after recovering from their amazement, seized her, and taking the whip from her, put her out. She jumped into the cab and was driven away. Mrs. Fairbanks received several painful cuts from the whip, but she was not very seriously hurt. Her assailant, she said, was Mrs. Mary Biedol, and she has a husband of whom she is very jealous, her acquaintances say unjustly so. Mrs. Fairbanks has not yet made a complaint against her.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

The Wisdom of a Cheese-paring Policy Questioned,

LETTER FROM EX-ALD. DICKSON.

Sir,—You report Ald. McInnich as having said in council at the last meeting on the 28th inst., "That Ald. Dickson proposed a rate of 19 mills in order to have a surplus amongst other things." Either you or he must be mistaken. I never advocated raising a surplus. I did advocate a rate which would raise the amount of our annual expenditure, (or nearly so,) so as to enable us to carry a portion of the so-called surplus derived from arrears of taxes, which the city had anticipated by borrowing from the bank, and on which we are paying high interest.

It is out of the question to talk about a surplus, with a debenture debt of over $400,000, an annual payment for interest thereon of over $25,000, which MUST be paid, and an annual sum of over $20,000 for sinking fund which LEGALLY OUGHT TO BE RAISED. With only a few miles of sewerage in a city having over 80 miles of sidewalk to keep up, with the pressing claims for better fire engine accommodation and new police cells almost a necessity, and no park of any kind. My plan was to provide for cheap taxation PERMANENTLY by the only practicable method by payment of our debt and reduction of the enormous load of interest we are carrying. The amount of our debt and the interest we pay are alike excessive.

In 1888 we have $18,000 and in 1888 $12,000 maturing. On the former WE PAY 7, AND ON THE LATTER 7½ PER CENT. PER ANNUM IN SEVEN ANNUAL INSTALMENTS. Then, in 1890 we have $100,000 at 6, and in 1891 $30,000 at 7 per cent. If we could finance to pay off the first two amounts as they mature, our annual payments would be reduced $2,160. The other two sums could be re-borrowed at, say 5 per cent., making another annual saving of $1,600. The next maturing debentures is in 1894, $100,000 at 7 per cent,

I cannot help but think it is a mistaken policy to think of and provide for only the present year. Repudiation is not tolerated here, and if we, as a municipality are going to compete with other places we must have modern improvement facilities and even luxuries. We need very badly a SYSTEM of sewerage, one main sewer down Front street from the Upper bridge, and two east and west, under Catharine and Hotel streets, and Bridge street. A small park also is very much needed. Cells and fire-hall are necessities. I do not mention waterworks because they ought to be had without taxation, No one will come here from choice to live unless we can supply these necessaries for the enjoyment of life. Now we are so crippled with a heavy load of interest that we are handicapped, just living from hand to mouth. Instead of lightening the load we are adding to it. In 1880 we added a debenture debt of $68,871, for 20 years at 6 per cent., to pay overdrawn bank account. We haven't a dollar to spend for an emergency, not even to pay $500 as reward offered for evidence to convict the incendaries, if it should be earned and if an accident should occur necessitating extra expenditure, such as the building of a bridge, we would be hard pressed. A uniform rate of from 17 to 18 mills for four years would enable us to pay off the $30,000, make the PERMANENT reduction mentioned, and put us in a capital position to float the reissue of debentures. Our financial position is not nearly so bad as that of many other places, and if manfully faced would soon be under easy control and enable us to raise money for public improvements instead of for interest on public debt.

I may be permitted to compliment myself upon the result of the one-assessor system, which I advocated for four years in the Council, but which was voted down each time I introduced it. The present Council has put it in practice and the Chairman of Finance is reported by you in saying "that the increased assessment on income and personal property in a great measure accounted for the decrease in the ratio this year." This "income and personal property" has heretofore entirely escaped taxation and the extra burthen has been thrown upon real estate. Now nearly one-half of the number and amount of assessments of realty is for less than two thousand dollars each. That, as I repeatedly argued, is because the industrial, mechanical, and laboring classes, which have no "income or personal" property, have been paying taxes, not only for their own real estate but also for the "income and personal" property of the wealthier citizen.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'This is insufferable!' cried the Creole, throwing down the pen. 'Mr. Folmsbee, why am I thus insulted?'

'Mr. Scladden, explain this behavior, or by Heaven! I'll—I'll kick you out of the place,' ejaculated Mr. Folmsbee, even his quiet nature taking fire. 'Miss Juliette Beauchamp, as the eldest sister——'

'Miss Juliette, though the eldest sister, has no right to sign the deed. Her signature as you know—or should know—ain't worth the ink, even, it'd take. It ain't no good at the foot of these papers. Her place I reckon,' and he tapped a particular portion of the deeds, 'is here among the livestock. Miss Juliette is now my property.'

Uttering a piercing shriek, Pauline leaped to her feet.

Her eyes were full of anger.

The dove had turned to the tigress.

'It is false—false! Give me those deeds. Longueville shall not belong to such a man.'

'It is true,' was the cool rejoinder. 'Your hand, miss, has signed your sister over to me.'

'It is false!' repeated Pauline, turning excitedly to her companions. 'Help me, why do you not help me to say so?'

But Juliette stood silent and erect.

Her cheeks were deathly white, her eyes were calm with the very concentration of indignation while her lip was curled with scorn.

Mr. Folmsbee had also risen but looked in no state to echo Pauline's energetic protest.

A dreadful fear had seized him, a fear that made his ruddy face pale, and his voice tremble as he spoke.

Vague—vague past rumors were thronging to his brain, until then, long forgotten, ever unbelieved.

'Good God, man!' he cried; 'what do you mean, what dare you mean?'

'That Miss Beauchamp's signature, duly witnessed has made this estate, and all thereupon mine; that,' and the evil face grew more evil yet, 'she has has no longer the power to remove the smallest trifle from it.'

'True,' coincided Jacob Folmsbee, hoarsely; but Miss——'

'Listen. I'll explain—oh, I haven't the least objection. Colonel Beauchamp had a daughter by a bond slave—a bond slave whom he so loved that he would have married her, but she died before he had made her free or his wife. She left to him a daughter, whom he intended to, legitimise and render free, but Colonel Beauchamp was a man of delays, and of so kindly a disposition, that he shrank from causing pain. He put off the period from day to day, until he again married; then he feared to let his young wife learn his first union. Things were allowed to go on. The second wife died; then more than all the father dreaded to wound the proud spirit of the child he fondly loved, and finally determined to never to let the secret of her birth reach her ears.

'The knowledge shortened his own life; he died. His will was opened; in it he commanded his daughters at once to depart for England, before the estate was sold, as he desired it to be. Why? He knew his illegitimate child, the offspring of a slave was safe, was free in Britain. That child was foolish enough to return.

The instant she placed her foot on this estate she once more became part of its goods and chattels, and as that,' proceeded Jabez Scladden, bringing down his splayhand decisively on the table and leaning nearer, 'has become mine, Mr. Folmsbee, I reckon you can't say no; she's my property, my slave. I've put the case pretty clear now haven't I, sir?'

'Truly, yes, If he cou'd prove all this, and was there a doubt?

A scream of agony burst from Pauline's lips as she flung herself on her sister's bosom.

'It is not true,' she cried. 'It cannot be. I will not believe it, it shall not be. Oh, Juliette, my dear, my sister, do not look thus. Speak to me.'

But the Creole's only rejoinder was quietly, but firmly to put her back.

She was as white as cold as motionless as marble; she uttered no sound. Her brilliant eyes were riveted upon Jabez Scladden with so strong, so terrible an expression that even he quailed before it.

Suddenly, with a convulsive gasp, she ejaculated in low hard accents—

'Your slave? Never!'

Then she dropped prone to the floor, as though struck by a heavy fatal blow.

Jabez Scladden made a movement towards her, when he found himself confronted by Pauline. Her gentle features were flushed with anger, her whole manner was changed as, her arm extended in commanding, imperious tones, she exclaimed—

'Stand back, villain. Recollect the proviso. For three days, you dare not touch anything or any body on this estate. Begone!'

CHAPTER XXIII.

DESPAIR—HOW TO ESCAPE—KEZIAH'S COMMUNICATION.

When Juliette recovered from the death-like swoon, she found herself alone with Pauline.

Before the latter's authoritative demeanor Jabez Scladden had even quailed. He knew too she had right on her side, and he was not a man to run his head against that most adamantine of walls—the law; consequently he permitted himself to be beckoned from the room by the amazed horror-stricken Jacob Folmsbee.

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians: "What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, debetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.," and they will tell you:

Mandrake! or Dandelion !"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is

Harmless to the most frail woman, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients

"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other Kidney diseases' liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women have gone nearly crazy ! ! ! !

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefullness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.

Erysipelas!

"Saltrheum, blood poisoning dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact, almost all diseases frail"

Nature is heir to

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile poisonous stuff with 'Hop' or 'Hops' in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasted system by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5,00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

FISHING.

Maybe this is fun, sitting in the sun,
With a book and parasol as my angler wishes
While he dips his line in the ocean brine,
Under the delusion that his bait will catch the fishes.

'Tis romantic—yes, but I must confess
Thoughts of shady rooms at home somehow seem more inviting.
But I dare not move. "Quiet there, my love,"
Says my angler, "for I think a monstrous fish is biting."

Oh, of couse, it's bliss—still how hot it is!
And the rock I'm sitting on grows harder every minute,
While my fisher waits, trying various baits,
But the basket at his side, I see, has nothing in it.

It is just the way to pass a July day—
Arcadian and sentimental, dreamy, idle, charming,
But how fierce the sunlight f l , the way that insect crawls
Along my neck and down my bac really quite alarming.

"Any luck ?" I gently asked of the angler at his task,
"There's something pulling at the line," he says: "I've almost caught it ;"
But when, with a blistered face, we our homeward steps retrace,
We take the little basket just as empty as we brought it.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

SIDNEY COU

The Sidney council met at the Town Hall on the 4th August. Members present—S. T. Wilmot, Reeve, H. G. Bleecker, 1st Deputy Reeve, Henry Fenn and John A. Holgate, councillors. Mr. Bleecker presented the petition of John W. Einkle and others, asking the council to open the road between Lots No. 18 and 19 in the 1st con., running to bay shore. The road surveyor was instructed to examine and report at next meeting. Mr. Holgate presented the petition of C. R. Bonesteel and others asking the council to open allowance of road between the 1st and 2nd con. across Lots No. 13, 14, 15 and 17. Petition granted. Clerk to advertise and get out the necessary notices before the passing of the by-law. Mr. Bleecker presented the petition of W. H. Bonesteel and others asking the council to open the road allowance between the 2nd and 3rd con. from Jas. Hogle's residence until it intersects the side line between Lots No. 9 and 10 in the 2nd con. Mr. Fenn presented the petition of John W. Harder and others, asking the council not to open the road referred to in the petition of W. H. Bonesteel and others. Petitions laid over until next meeting. The road surveyor presented his report, which was received, read and adopted. Mr. Vretekey was allowed to fill a ditch in with stone in front of his place. The Committee on Township Officers resumed when E. D. Mallory was appointed collector. Mr. Bleecker introduced a by-law to levy and collect the taxes for 1884, which was read a third time and numbered 271, the rate being five mills on the dollar. W. D. Ketcheson was allowed to open the ditch along the road and to throw the dirt on the new road. Several small accounts were passed when the the council adjourned until the first Monday in October next.

Somerville Journal.

'What is the effect of ice-cream on the teeth ?' a Somerville dentist was asked the other day.

'Bad, decidedly bad,' was the reply, 'The lactic acid contained in the cream injures the enamel. Moreover, ice cream is exceedingly detrimental to the complexion. There was a beautiful rosy-cheeked young girl came to my office last summer one day to have a tooth filled. She had dazzling white teeth, but one of the molars was beginning to decay. She informed me that she attributed the decay of the tooth to ice-cream, of which she was in the habit of taking large quantities, her betrothed being an exceeding generous young man. I warned her against the use of the confection but it was of no use. Her beau encouraged her, and to day she hasn't a tooth in her head, and her complexion, once like 'a red, red rose, that's newly sprung in June,' is now a dull whitey brown. Fact. You ought to warn young ladies against accepting invitations from their beaux to eat ice cream.'

HOARSENESS AND FAILURE OF voice from congestion of the vocal cords follicular disease of the fauces, or ministers sore throat, are often the results of bronchial troubles, extending up the trachea and larnyx, affecting the whole mucus tract of the air passages. These diseases are the outcome or expression of nerve debility and blood impoverishment from overworking the system and excessive use of the organs involved. Here constitutional treatment is required to restore nutrition and nerve power, and WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya has been successfully used by singers and public speakers.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

MR. MOWAT'S RECEPTION.

The character of a Provincial demonstration in honor of Mr. Mowat and in celebration of the Provincial victory in the Boundary case can be made more perfect if the following suggestion is adopted. Have the hon. gentleman, if he comes by way of New York, enter the Province at Prescott, or even Kingston, and thus proceeding to Toronto afford the cities and towns along the line an opportunity of according the Liberal Premier the welcome which it is in the hearts of his admirers to extend. This would render the great demonstration at the capital the culmination of an enthusiastic welcome.

Speaking for the Liberals of this and adjoining ridings we can say they are anxious to be permitted to join in a grand local welcome to Mr. Mowat as well as in the ovation at Toronto.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Hamilton Times statistics editor having returning from an alpine tour relates that Switzerland contains 1,002 hotels, with 58,137 beds. The number of bugs is apparently beyond calculation.

* * *

MR. F. HARLIN, a native of Sweden, has just returned to Winnipeg from a trip west to Maple Creek, where it is intended to establish a Swedish colony on lands secured from the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company. The Swedes will make good settlers.

* * *

THE archbishops and bishops of the anglican church were in favor of the franchise bill with the exception of Dr. Ellicott, bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, who is known as "Horsepond Ellicott," from his having advised the people of Gloucester to duck Joseph Arch in a horse-pond if he ventured to come into their neighborhood.

THE agricultural statistics of Ireland continue to show a steady decrease in the number of separate holdings. In 1883 the number was 567,725, being 6,482 less than in the previous year. The number of larger holdings had, on the other hand, increased as follows: Those above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, by 495; above 50 and not exceeding 100 acres, by 84; above 100 and not exceeding 200 acres, by 12; and above 200 and not exceeding 500 acres, by 84.

IN 1881 during a debate on the boundary matter, Sir John Macdonald speaking of Mr. Mackenzie's selection of counsel to conduct the Dominion case before the arbitrators, said:—

"An inferior man, though a respectable man in his way, Mr. McMahon, was chosen to conduct the whole case, instead of employing the best legal ability in the country, instead of the Minister of Justice himself conducting the case before the arbitrators."

And yet this consistent premier himself deputed Mr. McMahon to appear for the Dominion Government before the Privy Council last month.

CURIOUS, isn't it, that the independent and Grit journals are so thoroughly posted on the internal workings of Sir John Macdonald's mind? They always know exactly what the old man thinks about any and every conceivable question.—Hamilton Spectator.

It's just as easy as to tell what the Hamilton Spectator will say on the tariff when news arrives which knocks its favorite theories on the head. On any question Sir John thinks first of all what move would tend to strengthen himself and his party in power. Then he begins to think how he can reconcile his action with a desire to benefit the country, and that is where his inventive genius comes in. Oh yes, there is no difficulty in the ordinary newspaper metaphysician taking this great schemer's mind to pieces and analyzing it.

If your children are troubled with worms, give them Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; safe, sure, and effectual. Give it a trial and be convinced.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

DEMANDING A REMEDY.

Cotton manufacturers now acknowledge that protection has ruined the industry. They are now casting about for some means to rescue, if that be possible, the wreck from breaking up entirely in the hope of repairing it and of once more establishing it on fairly profitable basis.—Montreal Witness.

THE "MAIL" AND THE BOUNDARY.

Mr. Mowat is a gentleman, a Canadian, an honest man, who has given his best years to the service of his native Province. One would imagine from the columns of the Mail that he was worse than a horse thief. Mr. Mowat has always put his case as the friend and advocate of Ontario, but never as the enemy of the Confederation; the Mail while pretending to put the case of the Dominion was stating the case of the French Bleus, and acting the part of an enemy of the Province. There was treachery in every line the Mail wrote on this question, that worst form of treachery, begotten of partizan spite and sycophancy.—Toronto World.

THE TOLL GATE QUESTION.

We should like to see the Legislature take this question in hand. The condition of every toll road in the country should be investigated by a commission in the same manner as was done in England a few years ago when provision was made for the extinguishment of turnpikes there. A date, varying from one year to ten or fifteen years ahead, should be set, at the expiration of which every toll road should be made free, and in the meantime the trustees should be required to extinguish their debts. Such a movement would be extremely popular among the farmers, who after all, have to pay most of the money which is wasted in toll collecting.—Toronto Globe.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns, and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

A QUEBEC SCANDAL.

Elopement of a Merchant's Clerk, Wife, Nephew and Governess.

Montreal Star.

Fashionable society of the ancient capital was shocked nearly two weeks ago by the double elopement of the wife of a wealthy retail dry goods merchant with his clerk, and of the nursery governess, a pretty girl of some nineteen summers, with the nephew of the husband. The case was placed in the hands of Detective Fahey, who, after a clever piece of detective work, found the erring four in New York. It seems that a young man named Smith, formerly employed in a St. Lawrence street dry goods store in this city, left here and went to Quebec. Procuring employment in a large dry goods store in the ancient capital, he soon ascertained that the merchant was possessed of a charming wife. The husband recently went on a protracted spree, and the opportunities were not wanting to increase his tender acquaintance which had already sprung up between the clerk and the wife of his "boss." Madame, irritated at the conduct of her husband, resolved to flee, and soliciting the assistance of her lover, who only too eagerly assented to her plans, the two prepared to elope.

A young nephew was also taken into the scheme, and so favorably impressed was he with it that he determined to follow suit. The nursery governess, who belongs to a respectable Quebec family, was finally let into the secret, and after a little solicitation agreed to fly too. Before the departure of the four Madame secured $3,000 of her husband's money. Accordingly, on the 15th inst. they quietly disappeared, taking with them Lettia, the seven year old daughter of the heartless mother. The husband on finding out the flight communicated with Detective Fahey, who succeeded in tracing the fugatives to Sherbrooke. Here it was learned that they had gone southward. The detective, accompanied by the injured husband and a friend, then proceeded direct to New York, Coney Island, Manhattan Beach and other resorts were visited on Sunday, the 15th inst., but still no trace of the lost ones. Monday was devoted in promenading Broadway, and in the evening the various concert saloons were visited without success. Learning from the police that the objects of their search had been seen in a street in the West End, they engaged a room in the locality indicated. All Sunday was spent watching for the quartet, but with the same ill success. On the following day the missing ones were observed walking leisurely along the street. Following them until Fifth Avenue was reached, Fahey stepped up and touched the young clerk on the shoulder, calling him by name at the same time; a scene of confusion followed. The wife fell at the feet of her husband and begged for mercy, asserting that her relations with the young man had never been dishonorable. The clerk was searched, and $600 only was found on his person the remainder of the $3,000 having been spent. He was then allowed to go with a warning. The nephew took advantage of the confusion to escape. Mother, governess and child were taken back to New York. The governess will be placed in a convent. The couple propose to start a French restaurant in New York, and Detective Fahy was presented with $500 for his signal services.

CURBING THE NOBLES.

John Bright urges the Reform of the House of Lords.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 5.—There were 20,000 people at the Reform meeting last night. John Bright said the Tory majority in the House of Lords was actuated by the same bitter hatred of Liberals as in 1882. Who were the Peers? he asked. They were the spawn of the blunders, wars and corruption of the dark ages of our history. They had entered the temple of honor, not through the temple of merit, but through the sepulchres of their ancestors. They were no better than their fathers. Some of them were worse, for their privileges had produced ignorance and arrogancy. Reform of the House of Lords was urgent and inevitable. The creation of new Peers to pass the Franchise Bill would only get rid of the present difficulty. The limitation of veto power of the Lords was wanted. Should the people submit, or should they curb the nobles, as their fathers had curbed the kings of England?

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain said if the Lords remained obstinate the agitation would continue to the bitter end. He looked forward with eager hope to the result of this agitation. England would never be subservient enough to the insolent pretentions of the herditary class. The speakers were frequently and enthusiastically applauded. A resolution was adopted denouncing the Lords for rejecting the Reform Franchise Bill.

DASTARDLY DYNAMITERS.

Three Packages of the Deadly Explosive Discovered

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Three packages of dynamite wrapped in the Irishman newspaper, were found in a letter box at Nottingham postoffice Sunday night. The packages contained a pound of dynamite and were furnished with fuse and cap. It is supposed they were intended to explode by fall or when they were stamped. The quantity of dynamite was sufficient to wreck the building. The police have received information that a Catholic priest is coming to England from America in disguise, as the emissary of the Irish vigilance committee.

Daly, the convicted dynamiter, says he was one of the four conspirators whose movements were directed from America. The bombs found at the time of his arrest were handed him on the street in Liverpool by a fellow conspirator, who hastened away. The bombs were not for use in Birmingham, but in London, where Daly would hand them to another conspirator. Daly suspects that one of the conspirators turned informer. Members of the society who have arrived from America have their eyes on the man and will 'interview' him.

GRACE AND DISGRACE.

A COMPLICATED CASE OF BIGAMY AND LARCENY.

At St. Thomas despatch says:—A most complicated case of larceny and bigamy has been brought to a focus in this city. About a year ago a man named Grace was married by Rev. T. Hutchinson. Two weeks ago a woman claiming to be the first wife of Grace arrived in this city and threatened him with arrest for bigamy. Grace immediately left for the United States and has not since been heard of. Grace No. 2 then went to Aylmer to visit some friends there, leaving her house here locked up. During her absence Grace No. 1 went to the second-hand store of Chas. Begg in this city, and taking him to the house of Grace No. 2 they forced an entrance and appropriated the furniture, which she sold to him for $10. Two days ago this Grace No. 1 was arrested here for horse stealing and taken to Fort Erie. The Grace No. 2 returned to the city from Aylmer and on ascertaining the state of affairs swore out a warrant against Chas. Begg for house-breaking and larceny. Begg was arrested at 3 o'clock this afternoon and lodged in the police cells.

TOO MUCH HASTE

Now Evident in the Construction of the Canada Pacific.

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—Sheriff Sweetland has just returned from a trip to Manitoba and the Northwest. He was interviewed yesterday morning. He says the evil effects of undue haste in constructing the Canadian Pacific Railway are everywhere apparent. West of Brandon there is no travel on the line save "deadheads" which means Government officials, Mounted Police and railway employees. Those who were employed building the road, chiefly foreigners, left as soon as the work was through. From Moose Jaw to Medicine Hat there is not one settler, and the country is unfit for agricultural purposes, the soil being hard clay. Silver City, where nearly one thousand miners and others are located, is deserted, and complaints about mismanagement by the subordinates the Interior Department are everywhere being heard among the settlers. Immigration is suspended, and many are leaving for the States. The Sheriff made a trip around the north shore of Lake Superior on his way home, and says there is not one acre fit for cultivation in the vicinity of the line. Instead of this section being finished in the course of a year or so, four will not be sufficient to complete it from Sudbury to Michipocoten, the most difficult portion of the work being not yet surveyed. The people of Winnipeg and the West, irrespective of political creed, are unanimous in denouncing this rapid construction of the line, and look upon the building of the part north of Lake Superior as a crazy action on the part of the Government.

It has cured hundreds of cases where all other remedies have failed. Sold by all druggists.

PRESERVING CUT FLOWERS.

At this time, when cut flowers fade so soon, it is well to know that if a small bit of the stem is cut off and the end immersed in very hot water, the flower will very frequently revive and resume its beauty. Colored flowers are more easily rejuvinated than white ones, which are apt to turn yellow. For preserving flowers in water, finely pulverized charcoal should be put into the vase at this season. Where vines are growing in water, charcoal will prevent foul odors from standing water.

His face was as brown as a nut, his moustache was bleached by the sun and his clothes were well-worn and dusty. The tire of his wheel was bound on with ropes. He showed evidences of a long ride. A reporter learned that he was Thomas Stevens, who is making a tour around the world on a bicycle. He said, "I use a fifty-inch Columbia and will get a new one in Boston or London. I make between fifty and sixty miles per day." He started from 'Frisco.

Two infants died to day of cholera infantum—a disease with which children are attacked at this season of the year. Mr. Richard Warham's child was the first death reported, and soon after Mr. M. A telegram from Toronto announces the death of Mr. J. W. Gatling, a gentleman well know here as the promoter of the Gatling gold mine in Marmora. He has been ill about two years. He was born in North Carolina, and was about 60 years of age. Col. Prince, U. S. Consul, has gone to Toronto to take charge of the body.

The funeral of the late C. W. Bell took place this afternoon from his residence, West Commercial Street, to the cemetery. There was a large attendance of mourners and friends. Owing to the absence from town of so many members of the bar no concerted action was taken by the remainder, but those in town were present individually.

Mr. W. Flint Jones will open a first-class dry goods store during the first week in September in the premises lately occupied by Mr. T. L. Bayeur, corner of Front and Bridge Streets. Mr. Jones is too well known to the readers of THE ONTARIO to require any extended notice here. He has had a long experience in the business, and from his past record customers may expect fair and honest dealing.

Yesterday a number of law students went up the bay on a yacht, when one of their number made a dive feet first but he rescued himself without even causing the Camp bell to be rung for aid. In a few moments the maxim "misery likes company" was verified when a second fell in, and as he scrambled up the side of the yacht he extended the Wright hand of fellowship by which he was hauled on board.

The police yesterday discovered a man gazing intensely on the city buildings with the air of an Irish landlord, occasionally dotting down some figures on a piece of paper. When asked what he was doing he remarked that he had been sent from Toronto to have the building removed. He had delirium tremens. When arrested he gave his name as P. H. Ryan, a P.L.S., of Toronto. He passed the night in the cells and was discharged by the Mayor to-day.

NERVE PAIN CURE.

Polson's NERVILINE cures flatulence chills and spasms. Nerviline cures vomiting, diarrhoea cholera and dysentery. Nerviline cures headache sea sickness and summer complaint. Nerviline cures neuralgia, toothache, lumbago, and sciatica. Nerviline cures sprains, bruises, cuts, &c. Polson's Nerviline is the best remedy in the world, and only costs 10 and 25 cents to try it. Sample and large bottles at any drug. Try Polson's Nerviline.

"Facts are stubborn things," and sufferers from chills and fever generally find their complaint a very stubborn fact, until they commence the use of Ayer's Ague Cure. That medicine eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and invariably cures even the worst cases.

The reason why "Nonesuch Washing Compound" should be used in preference to all other washing preparations. First, it is perfectly harmless. Second, It saves more than half the labor. Third, It is the cheapest in the market. Many more could be given but this should be sufficient. For sale by all Druggists.

THE BICYCLE PARK.

Last Night's Promenade Concert a Great Success.

A good sized crowd of several hundreds found its way into the Bicycle Park last evening and admired the picturesque effect produced by a hundred lighted torches and numerous chinese lanterns. The Oddfellows Band were there and the bicycle club in full force. The races were on "time," or in other words a certain time being given for a mile, the rider who rode nearest to that time won the race even though he might be last. Messrs. Garratt, Jamieson and Tammadge acted as judges. The 3:30 race brought out the "flyers," but Foster coming in last hit the time nearest and took the prize. The 4:00 class was taken by West. The race was spoiled by a kid attempting to run across the track just before the wheels came along. One of the bicycles struck the boy and Mr. Thompson tumbled, as did Mr. Geo. Reid who was immediately behind him. The unspeakable small boy and both riders were unhurt, but the catastrophe "buckled" Mr. Reid's wheel. The 4:30 race was entered by a crowd and they all rode round too slow at first. Finally West forged ahead and came in first, but Scantlebury who was second came nearest the time and got the prize. The circle was again given to the promenaders and Prof. Riggs ravished their ears with some choice music.

The entertainment proved a great success, everybody apparently enjoying it to the utmost. It was intended to be the first of a series if it met with public approval, and there is now no doubt that the Bicycle Club will continue the entertainments weekly, every Tuesday. The program of races will probably be made more exciting by having them tests of speed, the ordinary race, and added to this such races as, with out hands, one legged, side saddle and so on.

ONE-WHEELERS.

Mr. Fred Hope represented Trenton.

The club drill two, three and four abreast was very pretty.

Vice-Pres. Carmichael abstained from entering any of the races—but he is training.

The grand stand was remarked to be a galaxy of beauty. The ladies are warm admirers of the wheel—if not of the wheelmen.

Mr. T. McCormack rode the late first lieutenant's late wheel which gave him a superior confidence to that of most new riders.

The club was honored by the presence of his worship the Mayor, in a fall overcoat, Rt. Rev. Mgr. Farrelly, and many other distinguished citizens.

Mr. G. W. Macully, Pavilion Mountain, B.C., writes: "Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is the best medicine I ever used for Rheumatism. Nearly every winter I am laid up with Rheumatism, and have tried nearly every kind of medicine without getting any benefit, until I used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It has worked wonders for me, and I want another supply for my friends. &c."

Mr. T. C. It never fails to root out all diseases from the system, cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, etc., purifies the blood, and will make you look a picture of health and happiness.

SHANNONVILLE NEWS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

SHANNONVILLE, Aug 6.—On Sabbath next the first quarterly meeting for the year and under the new order of things will be held in the Melrose church. Quite an interest has been awakened in this meeting as it will be the official inauguration of the Union movement on the Shannonville circuit. As there will be no longer any presiding elders to have charge of our quarterly meetings, the first quarterly sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. C. Ash, Superintendent of the circuit. Quite a little opposition has been offered to the Union on this circuit, but present indications are that intelligent, godly men are recognizing the hand of God in the movement, and are prepared to give it their hearty sanction and support. Hostile elements are being brought into harmony, and the outlook for the future is decidedly hopeful.

Rev. J.C. Ash will preach a sermon to young men in the methodist Church in this village next Sabbath evening.

R. L. Lazier and wife who have been absent at Massina Springs for the last month are expected home on Thursday and a hearty welcome awaits them.

The Hallelujah Band, of the Bridge Street Church, Belleville, will, by special request, conduct three services on Sabbath, the 17th inst., in the Spencer Methodist Church on the 1st line of Thurlow, Shannonville circuit.

Joseph Russan Percy, writes: I was induced to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for a lameness which troubled me for four or five years, and I found it the best article I ever used. It has been a great blessing to me." Frauds may imitate Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in appearance and name, but in everything else they are dead failures.

As well expect life without air, as health without pure blood. Cleanse the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

THE LOST LITTLE GIRL.

Mr. Badgley of Ameliasburg still Searching for his Missing Child.

A CHARLEY ROSS MYSTERY.

From our own Correspondent.

SHANNONVILLE, Aug 6.—It will be remembered by the readers of the ONTARIO that about two years ago a little child about two years of age, daughter of Mr. Badgley, was lost in Ameliasburg, and that the country was searched from end to end for traces of the little girl, whose parents were distracted over their great loss. Some thought the gypsies had stolen her, while others believed she had tumbled into a hole in the marsh. At all events from that day to this her disappearance has remained as deep a mystery as that of Charley Ross.

STILL SEARCHING.

The occurence is now revived by the following circumstances. With malicious intent, or as a very unseemly joke the parents and friends of the child lost two years ago in Ameliasburg have been informed that the child was in the possession of Mr. Stock of this village, and several visits have of late been made to the place with a view to the recovery of the lost. On Saturday last three men from Ameliasburg came to Mr. Stock's house and in the absence of both the parents, made diligent enquiries about the children. The one was a Mr. Badgley, the father of the lost child, another was a Mr. Sprung, said to be a constable, and the name of the third has not transpired. The effect of the visit upon the father was likely to show him that he had been unkindly victimized, as there was no child in Mr. Stock's family that could possibly answer to the description of his child. The one in Stock's family of the same age is a fine little boy while the lost child was a girl.

THE MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

Victor Badgley was a farm laborer in the employ of Mr. Sylvanus Sprague, living about midway between Roblin's Mills and Union. In August, 1882, his wife and only child, two years and four months old, went down to Jacob Vanwarts who lives on the road allowance below the Union school house. About 11 o'clock the child was playing outside with a little boy four years old, when the latter went into the house for something to eat which which was given to him, and another piece was sent out to the little girl outside. The child who took out the piece came in again almost immediately and said that Effie was gone. Search was made at once but to no avail. A little to the eastward, commences one of those extensive marshes which stretch down to the waters of Big Bay. A path eastward from where the child was playing leads along the shore of this marsh. To the westward is the old camp meeting ground, on Mr. C. H. Sprung's lot. All the woods swamps and marsh for a considerable distance around were searched, the water holes dragged, and everything done that could be thought of without any traces being found. It seemed impossible that a little girl of that age could go far away in so short a time and it seemed strange that on so calm a day and evening her cries were not heard. Her fate will probably never be cleared up.

SPORTING NEWS.

Yacht club meeting at Hambly's to-night.

The yachts from Kingston are expected to reach here this afternoon.

The yacht Katie Gray has dropped out of the regatta circuit. Mr. Phelps, the owner, has been in poor health for some time, and at the special request of friends has decided not to make the circuit with his craft. He has gone down the river from Kingston.

At the entertainment given by the young and hospitable yacht club of Kingston, Commodore Biggar responded to the toast of "the Bay of Quinte Yacht club." Mr. J. B. Walkem presented the prizes. The purse of $120, in the first class race, was awarded to the Norah. Mr. Walken said this boat did nobly and was worthy of the prize it secured. The remark was received with applause. Mr. Balkwill, accepted the purse. Commodore Biggar, of the Iolanthe, was handed first prize in the second class race. A finer boat it was observed, had never been seen in the Kingston harbor. These two flyers certainly deserve all the praise that was lavished on them. They are a credit to Canadian yachting.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are, terribly exhausting of vital stamina. Its true specific is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies female ailments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

THIEVES IN A FLOUR MILL

Discovered by Mr. Lazier, Shannonville—They Escape.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SHANNONVILLE, Aug. 6.—The episodes of our village life are becoming decidedly sensational. The following will serve as a sample for the week: On Tuesday night after Mr. John Lazier had locked up the grist mill for the night he had occasion to return to look after some papers he had forgotten. On opening the door he found that there were burglars in the mill. He at once called a few men to his help, and it was thought the thieves would certainly be captured, but in the meantime they had made good their escape through a small trap door in the lower floor, and under the arches of the mill. Within sight and sound of their would-be captors they escaped in a small skiff and by the same means as they had entered the mill, leaving behind them a bag of flour which they had filled from the bin, and a dark lantern. As the escape was so skillfully managed it is thought the whole affair was in familiar hands and that many a bag of flour and feed have gone by the same means.

AROUND ABOUT US.

Burglars entered the office of the Central Ontario Railway Station at Consecon, Tuesday night and succeeded in carrying off a small iron chest used as a safe for books and papers, but it was afterwards found in a field. There was no money in the chest.

CHEESE MARKET

PETERBORO', Aug. 6.—At the fortnightly meeting of the cheese board, 2,210 boxes were offered for sale, of which 79 were white. Sales were made of 557 at 10½c, and 185 boxes at 10⅝c. The balance was held against bids of 9¾c to 9⅞c.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine, combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts, creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine; sold by all druggists.

AN END TO BONE SCRAPING.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctor told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, 3 bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg is now sound and well.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask or the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

The Creole still laid on the floor her head having been raised on cushions, when her eyes opening they gazed vaguely around, then rested with interrogative wonderment upon the tear-stained countenance of her half-sister. Pauline could not answer even by a look and she averted her face with a fresh burst of weeping. It recalled every sting to her unhappy companion. Partly starting up she covered her eyes with her hand, while a cry of horror escaped her lips.

'Oh, Juliette! Oh, my darling—my sister,' began Pauline, quickly encircling her with arms.

But the Creole avoiding meeting her glance, pushed her back ejaculating in agony—

'Do not speak; not a word, I command you. Do not mention it; I remember all—it will drive me mad. Oh, God, that it might.'

For a space she remained silent, her face concealed, Pauline was also mute, ignorant what to say. Abruptly the Creole looked up.

'Why do you keep by me?' she inquired almost fiercely addressing her, 'Why do you not go as all will now? I am a thing to be shunned, an object to be despised, a being to be pointed at with scorn. Leave me.

Shunned, despised! Never, by me, Juliette,' responded Pauline, quietly, pain in her soft tones. 'To me you are and ever will be a sister.'

'Your sister!' broke in the Creole, with a harsh, hard laugh. 'I the sister to the heiress of Colonel Beauchamp; she, the sister to a slave, a being to be bargained for and sold—the slave of Jabez Scladden!'

'Juliette,' implored Pauline in agony, has this terrible event destroyed your reason? Is that the cause why you lacerate my heart by such awful words?'

'Lacerate your heart? Then in what state is mine?' was the hot retort, Imagine our stately friends in England—how will they regard me now, the bond woman —the illegitimate offspring of—a slave? You call me sister, would you then?'

'On my soul I would.'

'You think so now. but when all turn from me, or worse, kill me with their pity and patronage, make me perhaps a curiosity, a show, then you would blush for me.'

With mute gentle reproach in her eyes, Pauline bent them upon those of the Creole, which seemed to blaze with fire.

'Juliette, you know not what you say,' she remarked; I will take no notice of your present words. I am too conversant with the noble justness of your disposition not to be aware that when you are more composed, you will regard them with equal pain as myself. What has occurred has been so horrible that anything you utter is excusable.'

The speech was so tenderly, so touchingly spoken that it changed the Creole's wild humor.

Dropping her head on the girl's shoulder, she burst into a passion of tears.

'Good gracious, Pauline,' she cried; 'I do indeed wrong you. I am unjust; forgive me. My brain is on fire, it makes me angry towards all, even you. Bear with me. Oh, God!' she added with a bitter cry, 'what am I to do?'

Poor Pauline had no answer to make to that wild final interrogation. Her reply to the proceeding one was to place her arms around the Creole, rock her aching head on her bosom, and soothe the beating temples with soft cool kisses.

Great Heaven, what was she to do?

As the half-sisters remained thus, a thought which never would have found birth in Pauline's kindly mind. came to that of Juliette and aroused again her jealousy, her hate for the sweet girl beside her.

Ever since their father's death, she—she who had always taken the lead, she who had acted even as the superior, upon whom her sister in her weaker nature had even leaned for advice, even at times with fear—she had in fact been this sister's slave, a woman whom in America she could sell at her will, whom in ignorance she had sold that very day.

At the idea, involuntarily the Creole drew herself from the fond embrace. She imagined that the same thoughts must have occurred to Pauline, or would in the course of time.

'This is no period for moaning,' she remarked, with something of a return to her habitual, energetic manner though marked by a certain hard concentratedness. 'I must act, act at once, if what this man declares is true. It—is it? What do you think Pauline?' and she riveted a penetrating glance upon her companion.

The other met it unflinchingly. What had happened had evidently drawn forth in her a power an energy which until then had lain dormant.

'Dearest Juliette, I would give up everything gladly, could I repeat what I declared to that man—that it is false. Only my simple declaration is no more than Mr. Scladden's, and the time is too short for useless declarations.'

'Then you believe it demanded the Creole with bitterness.

'I believe that you are my sister,' was the firm response; and whether this man be right or wrong, you will still continue to be so.'

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, debetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar] to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"

Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.." and they will tell you :

Mandrake! or Dandelion !"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is

Harmless to the most frail woman, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years and given up by physicians, of Bright's and other Kidney diseases' liver complaints, severe coughs, called consumption, have been cured.

Women have gone nearly crazy ! ! ! !

[From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness, and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.

Erysipelas!

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile poisonous stuff with 'Hop' or 'Hops' in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk ; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience,' says an eminent Physician, convinces me that, the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wast by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and t all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward he goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure See adv't in nother column.

THE GIRL GRADUATE.

She has hair of flaxen yellow, she has eyes of sapphire blue,
She has cheeks the softest, daintiest, like velvet to the touch ;
She knows more than I, or twenty others like me ever knew—
The trouble is she knows a lot too much.

She has graduated cleverly. has taken her degree ;
She can talk in seven languages, and read a dozen more ;
But how would she comport herself if taken on my knee—
How act if she were kissed behind the door ?

Can botany, zoology, astronomy and such
Add grace to what dame nature took such pains to make so well ;
I wish I knew a little more, or she not quite so much—
My favorite flower was never a Blue Bell.

I've only got a single hope to put my faith unto—
One hope, as faint and visionary as a morning dream—
Perhaps she'll drop her classics for a good, old fashioned woo,
And be won from mathematics by ice cream.

Perhaps the day I kiss her she may coyly kiss me back,
Like a girl whose only language is her graceful mother tongue ;
Perhaps—but only fancy, if I haven't got the knack
Of wooing, as they wooed the Greeks among.

No matter, sink conchology (except her sea shell ear),
Sink botany (except the flaxen glories of her hair),
Sink languages (except enough to tell her she is dear),
I'll study for the ordeal and dare.

I've written my proposal, and I have her sweet reply,
I've won her, and I'll wear her, for in deed I love her well ;
But how vain were all my doubtings ; she's as ignorant as I—
She accepts me, and she cannot even spell !

AMONG THE LIONS.

CROCKETT'S, THE LION KING, COOLNESS IN DANGER.

A lion king well know to two hemispheres was Crockett, whose mother has been formerly know as Miss Cross, the Nottingham giantess. She was six feet nine inches in height, and proportionately large, but very handsome and prepossessing. Crockett was a musician in Sanger's circus but was suffering from a weakness of the chest, which his performance on the band instrument increased. He was offered the position of lion king principally because of his handsome and imposing appearance. He accepted it and displayed rare courage and coolness, only one instance being given where his nerve seemed to fail him. One of the tame lions at Sanger's used to be taken out to personate the British lion lying at the feet of Britannia (Mrs. George Sanger) during the show parades. One morning the tents having been pitched just outside the town of Weymouth, when the keepers went to take out Britannia's docile attendant, they found all the five lions fighting fouriously, their manes up, their eyes flashing and their shoulders all scratched and bloody. Not one of the keepers even Crockett would dare to go into the cage. But Mr. George Sanger, the proprietor, seized a whip, sprang in among the beasts, drove the lions on one side, and the lioness, who was the object of their contention, on the other, and separated them by boards quickly passed into the cage for the purpose. Crockett had by this time recovered his nerve, and an hour later put these same lions, in spite of their sullenness, through their usual lists of feats, before a crowded audience. Another instance is given wherein Crockett's nerve did not fail him in the face of terrible peril. While Batty was managing the circus at Astley's the six lions one day got loose, through, it was supposed, the intentional carelessness of one of the grooms, who had been fined by the manager for neglect of duty. Before Crockett, who had been sent for in hot haste, could reach the theatre, the lions had killed a keeper and half eaten him, and were roaming about the auditorium, roaring to get at the horses. Crockett went in among them quite alone with only a switch in his hand, and in a few minutes had safely caged them all without receiving a scratch. These lions were afterwards sold to the American circus of Howes & Cushing, performing in England, and Crockett came back with them to this country, and travelled with them for two years at a salary of $100 a week. One day when the circus was performing in this city he fell down while passing from the dressing room to the ring and died on the spot, of heart disease, it was thought.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A ST. ANN'S VICTORY.

Mr. John Morrison, well known in St. Anns N.S., had serious Kidney Complaint that bordered on dropsy. After hope had nearly fled, he was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.
The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—
I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.
Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

HOARSENESS AND FAILURE OF voice from congestion of the vocal cords follicular disease of the fauces, or ministers sore throat, are often the results of bronchial troubles, extending up the trachea and larynx, affecting the whole mucus tract of the air passages. These diseases are the outcome or expression of nerve debility and blood impoverishment from overworking the system and excessive use of the organs involved. Here constitutional treatment is required to restore nutrition and nerve power, and WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya has been successfully used by singers and public speakers.

DIVORCE IN FRANCE.

The most spirited contest that has occurred in France since the formation of the republic has been over the divorce bill which has just become a law. The ultramontanists, who regard the Catholic church, religion, and morality as identical, brought every force to bear in order to defeat it. They declared that it was an organized revolt against the religion of the country; that divorces were not granted in any Catholic country for any other cause than those recognized by the church, and that the Catholics of England and Ireland never availed themselves of the provisions of the divorce law in force in those countries. It was freely stated by them that the measure, if it became a law, would result in debasing France among the Catholic countries of the world. They showed that every divorced couple would be summarily dropped from the church and that they would take their places among Protestants or unbelievers; argued that a civil divorce law in France would be the occasion for moving for one in the other Catholic countries of Europe; appealed to the hatred of the French toward the Germans, and showed that the work of the Reformation had resulted in many divorces and millions of skeptics. They published the account of a traveler in Germany who saw a woman in a beer-garden, enjoying a game of cards with three men, one of whom was her husband, while each of the others had been till a separation was allowed by a divorce court. They declared that a divorce law would destroy all the sacredness of the marriage contract and blot out everything that made home beautiful. They made a point that most most of the advocates of the measure were infidels or freethinkers. This is not strange, since over seven millions of the people of France at the time of taking the last census declined to subscribe to any religious faith.

The divorce law of France resembles that of England in most respects. There is no divorce by mutual consent, for prolonged absence, or on account of adultery by the husband, unless the act was committed in the home. Divorces are allowed for cruelty, and are allowable on the condemnation of either party for an infamous offense. The husband or wife divorced for infidelity can not marry the accomplice in guilt, while the wife is liable to imprisonment for the crime of adultery. If French dramas, poems, and novels are faithful exponents of the social condition of the country, the divorce courts will be kept very busy. Most of the novels are based on the infidelity of husbands and wives, the comedies representing the intrigues of married men, and the tragedies the falsehood of married women. Legal separations are about as common in France as divorces are in the United States and Germany. On an average, six thousand are granted every year. So far as children are concerned, they are in a worse condition than if their parents were divorced and entered into new marital relations. Legalized separations, are also very common in Italy, Austria, Spain and Portugal. The statistics of illegitimacy in all these countries show that looseness prevails among a large proportion of the inhabitants. Women who are legally separated from their husbands are in no respect in a better condition than those who are divorced. In many ways they are worse off. They can not marry as they are already wives. They can not visit their children if they are in their father's house without being liable to scandal. Many doubtless hope to become reconciled to their husbands, but the cases of happy reconciliation are very rare.

A SEVERE reproof to Sir John Macdonald and the Tory party which refused to ratify the Ontario Boundary Award is conveyed in the following incident reported by Hon. Mr. Mills, one of Ontario's counsel before the Privy Council. The Lord Chancellor remarked that Imperial Legislation was necessary, as otherwise the party who did not like the conclusion would say that he was not bound by it. Mr. Christopher Robinson, counsel against Ontario, said he supposed no one felt any apprehension on that score. The Lord Chancellor retorted that he did not express apprehension, but he supposed no one had any apprehension before, when the Award was assented to.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

HE WROTE "ELECTIONEERING PAMPHLETS.

There was a time when an honor or a decoration from Her Majesty to a Colonial subject meant something—when it was regarded as in some sense the reward of high intellectual acquirements or eminent public service. But can anybody tell us what it represents in Mr. MacPherson's case? Has he ever distinguished himself in the public service?—Montreal Herald.

FOR GORDON'S RELIEF.

THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT VOTES A CREDIT OF £300,000.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Gladstone, in moving a credit of £200,000 to provide for an expedition to the Soudan, in the Commons said the purpose of the expedition was merely to relieve Gordon not to crush the Mahdi. It would be sufficient to secure good government in Soudan. The evacuation of that country was now out of the question, England was bound to protect Gordon. Gladstone intimated that he was asking the members to vote rather on the principal involved than on the exact figure which he anticipated the expedition would cost. His intention was to obtain authority to redeem pledges already made. It was undesirable to enter into details at present, Labouchere objected. The vote asked for he believed was a mere sop. Next year the House would be asked to vote £0,300,000 to carry on the work. The credit was agreed to 174 to 14. The minority was composed of Parnelites and a few radicals. No Conservatives were among the number.

$50,000 FOR A HUSBAND.

A SUIT FOR ALIENATION OF A HUSBAND'S AFFECTIONS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Sarah B. Harrison has sued Mrs. Frederica W. Waring, the widow of Wm. E. Waring, an architect, laying damages at $50,000. The cause of the action is the alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, Wm. H. Harrison, of 95 Rodney Street, Williamsburgh. Mrs. Harrison is 56 years old and Mrs. Waring 40. At her husband's death in October, 1882, Mrs. Waring, it is said, received an estate of $500,000. Mr. Harrison and Mr. Waring were cousins, and before the death of the latter the families were intimate. Mrs. Harrison avers that her husband has made his home at Mrs. Waring's house, 273 Lexington avenue, in this city, and that his time has been almost altogether occupied with Mrs. Waring. to the neglect of his wife and family. On one occasion Mrs. Harrison found her husband, she says, at the Lexington avenue house at an early hour in the morning, and upbraided him for his conduct, but he refused to go back to Brooklyn with her. Mr. Harrison's eldest son was employed by Mrs. Waring, but he left her in consequence of the relations which existed between his father and her. Mrs. Harrison makes answer that he has merely acted as a friend to Mrs. Waring, and that his wife's inordinate jealousy was the cause of the trouble.

NOVEL PRIZE FIGHT.

A Wildcat Pitted against Three Bulldogs Killing them all

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., Aug 5.—One of the most remarkable fights in the history of sporting occurred at Coal Valley, twelve miles north of here, last night. It was a fight for $500 a side between a wildcat, or mountain lynx, weighing twenty-two pounds and three bulldogs. The cat was owned by Tom Dixon, a local sport, and the dogs by Jerry Hamdon an Englishman. The cat was caught in a trap in the Greenbrier mountains on Wednesday. At 5 o'clock time was called and the cat and a dog were placed on opposite sides of the pit, which was sunk several feet below the level of the ground. The cat was fastened by a chain to prevent its escape. The dog after being loosed stood for a moment. contemplating his strange adversary: then with a growl he sprang towards the cat The latter slipped nimbly aside, and with an oblique spring alighted on the dog's back. The fight grew furious. The dog rolled over and over, but was unable to dislodge the cat. Finally he secured a hold on the feline's leg, and held on for dear life. The cat now backed the dog into a corner and tore its leg loose. Bull darted across the pit as though to escape, but turning suddenly caught the cat on the left shoulder. The cat twisted its head around and catching bull by the neck, began to tear the flesh. In two minutes the dog was dead. The round lasted 11 minutes. The cat appeared very much distressed and was bleeding freely.

A dog of some local celebrity was next introduced into the pit under a bet of $50. The fight was fully as terrific as the first, but at the end of seven minutes the second dog was dead.

Pat Rooney, a Charleston sport, who was present, had with him a dog which had beaten every dog it had so far tackled. Rooney offered to wager $100 that the cat could not kill the dog in fifteen minutes. The cat after the most furious fight of the day killed his third antagonist in thirteen minutes. It is estimated $3,000 changed hands on the fights.

A fight for $500 a side, between a wildcat and a farmer's dog, has been arranged for Saturday next. One thousand persons witnessed yesterday's fight.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR MORPHINE.

Let any one who feels limp and out of sorts go to some hilly place where there are woods to fill the air with oxygen and sit in a sunny spot with a narrow bag of ice on the spine. The chest will expand and the lungs put forth all their power to inhale. If there be a microbe in the system (so copiously is the oxygen let in) it must almost directly burn up. The sense of vitality is so great that one is under the illusion of being youthful again. A gentle warmth pervades all the body; the skies look bluer, the trees greener; one is more alive to the exuberent joy of the song-bird, to the brightness of the flowers, to the fragrance of the country; and if the coarsest fare were served at the next meal, so sweet would it taste that one would feel inclined to say grace after meat in a hearty spirit. My advice to fashionable women is to drop morphine and betake themselves to rural solitude, to this ice-treatment. Le premier pas coutera; but when once taken, all will be enjoyment after.—Paris Letter in London Truth.

Don't think because young men are young they are fools. They probably are, but you were once young yourself.

Don't take the front seat in ballet shows Your bald head reflects the light unpleasantly.

Don't say vulgar things before ladies and excuse yourself on the ground that you are old enough to be their fathers.

Don't forget that age must respect itself before it can command it from others.

Don't sour the world on you by souring yourselves on the world.

Don't fool with temptation.

Don't be too wise.

Don't let your love of the world make you forget that a man never gets too old to die.

Don't try to be a boy. Your grandsons will attend to that part of the business.

Don't let the evening of life be less joyous than the freshness of the morning gave you vigor to work through time; and the quiet of the evening should give you peace and rest through eternity.

WHAT A GIRL DID.

A Henderson Harbor despatch says:—Quite a sensation was produced at the Harbor by the capsizing of a sailing skiff, a mile from shore, containing M. Linup. Three boats started for the rescue. Two boats contained two men each. and the third only Miss Lena, daughter of J. Maynard, proprietor of Paradise Park. Miss Lenya, although but 14 years of age, outstripped her competitors, pulled in young Linup and conveyed him to shore all right.

ROW ON A STEAM BOAT.

A Lad Handcuffed and Chained and Handed to the Police,

A row, which threatened to be serious, occurred on the Hero last night coming up the bay from Simcoe Island. Two or three boys had been drinking pretty freely, and caused a disturbance. A report states that Alfred White, son of George White, of this city, aged about 15 or 16, interfered and tried to take one of the boys up stairs, when the captain coming down stairs, suspected that White was one of the lads raising the row and proceeded to put him off the boat at Bath. White resisted and it is said he struck the captain, who, however, succeeded in putting him on the dock. As the steamer was leaving White jumped on again when he was handcuffed and chained to a post until Picton was reached when he was ordered to be locked up. The fracas delayed the boat over an hour, and created for a time the wildest confusion. Those from here who saw the row think the Captain was hasty and too severe, but as his explanation is not at present obtainable it would be well to suspend judgment until the other side of the story is heard.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien went to Picton this morning to appear on behalf of White, at the trial. His fees were raised by subscription on the boat from those sympathising with the lad.

NOTES AND PARTICULARS OF RACES.

The third regatta of the Lake Yacht Racing Association and ninth annual regatta of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club will take place on Massassaga Bay to-morrow afternoon, and with fine weather, there is no doubt an interesting race will be witnessed. In order to give all those who wish to witness the regatta an opportunity to do so, Mayor Dunnet has issued his proclamation for a half holiday. The steamer Quinte will make trips at regular intervals to the point, while the steam yacht Annie Gilbert will take those who wish around the course. The yachts will be started at 12 o'clock noon, and when the race is completed should the wind not continue a tug will bring the yachts back to the city.

THE PROGRAM.

This Regatta is open to all yachts on the chain of lakes, and is governed by the sailing rules and regulations of the Lake Yacht Racing Association, and under the direction of the Regatta Committee of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club. Prizes to the amount of $450 will be offered, as follows:

Entries—Iolanthe, Gracie, of Belleville, Surprise of Trenton, and Laura of Kingston.

In each class at least five yachts to start or no fourth prize will be awarded.

SOCIAL FEATURES.

In the evening a banquet will be given at the Dafoe House to the visiting yachtsmen. The reception committee is composed of Messrs. D. B. Robertson, F. S. Campbell, S. R. Balkwill, J. H. Starling, and James Jenkins and they are determined that the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club shall not be behind the clubs of Oswego or Kingston in entertaining its guests. It is proposed at the banquet to have the dining hall suitably decorated while the tables will be ornamented with the various cups, medals and other trophies won by the club yachts.

YOTS THAT ARE YOTS.

In the first class race the costliest boat will be the Aileen, owned by John Leys, Commodore of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, Toronto, and W. G. Gooderham. She cost $10,000, cutter rigged, and was built in 1882 from designs made by Watson, of Glasgow. She is of medium capacity, has a measurement of 60 tons, a standing keel, and has twenty-eight tons of lead on her keel. She carries the championship flag of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club and her owners hold the Prince of Wales' cup awarded by the same organization. In her initial race this season ta Oswego she took the first honors. She is decidedly handsome, is well equipped, and has a crew of twelve.

The Norah is familiar to citizens. She was built in 1878, at Trenton and named the Bloodhound. In 1881 Mr. Bell bought and rebuilt her, at the same time changing her name. Mr. Bell this season fitted her out with new canvas and at Deseronto lately he had her scraped and leaded and put in shape for service. Luck seemed to be with her, as before Mr. Bell left for Kingston a horseshoe was found, and the first thing he stumbled upon there was the curved iron dropped from another horse's hoof. Both these now hang on the cabin door. The 'Mascotte' on board the craft, is a pretty black dog. The crew numbers thirteen.

The Verve is a Scottish craft, brought to this country by Robert Cochrane. She has a good record, both in the old country and Toronto harbor.

The Garfield, the fourth boat in the race, belongs to the genial Commodore of the Kingston Club, Dr. Curtis. She was built at Portsmouth in 1878 by Capt. Pierce. In 1881 she was rebuilt and named the General Garfield. She has a good record, having taken no less than three first prizes, three seconds and one third. In 1882 she won a silver cup, and made the unprecedented time of 41 miles in 4 hours and 10 minutes twenty miles being dead to windward.

The Iolanthe was built by Cuthbert in 1883 and in her maiden race took second money, She was second at Toronto and Cobourg in 1883, and at Oswego last week took first place.

The Gracie, was built by Mr. R. Roy, her owner, who has every confidence in her ability to hold her own. Her crew is seven.

The Laura, of Kingston, was built in 1883, by W. Robinson, and is owned by T. McK. Robertson. She has been in several races and taken first place in most of them. She is very pretty and fast.

The Surprise, of Trenton, was built by Cuthbert as a racer. She has won many races and is now owned by a triumvirate of which Mayor Richardson is the head.

RAMBLER'S WHEEL CLUB.

Arranging for a Grand Meet on the Civic Holiday.

Vice-President Carmichael was in the chair at last night's regular monthly meeting of Ramblers' Wheel Club held in their own rooms. A number of communications were read including the resignation of Secretary-Treasurer, J. W. Snider dated at Napanee, which was coupled with his best wishes for the prosperity of the club. Mr. Geo. Reid was unanimously elected Secretary, and Mr. W. Way Treasurer, the double office being thus divided. Mr. W. Greatrix was without opposition elected to fill the vacant office of 1st Lieutenant. Messrs. R. Mathison jr. and C. Scantlebury, of this city, and Mr. B. W. Reynolds, of Picton, applied for admission to membership and were duly elected by ballot. A letter from Mr. J. S. Muirhead, Capt. of the Ariels of London, Ont., announced the abandonment of their proposed trip to Montreal, and thanked the Belleville club for its promised welcome. An invitation from the Demonstration Committee of the Knights of Labor to participate in their grand parade on the morning of the Civic Holiday was cordially accepted.

It was decided to hold a grand bicycle meet in the Bicycle Park on the afternoon of the Civic Holiday, Aug. 18, beginning at two o'clock. A number of valuable gold and silver medals will be raced for, the winner of the gold medal presented by Mr. A. Robertson, M. P. becoming the champion two mile wheeler of the city and county. In addition the third exciting contest for the Corby Cup will take place and promises to be the finest bicycle race ever run between Toronto and Montreal. If Mr. Greatrix, the present holder of the cup wins this race the trophy of the five mile championship will be his for good.

It was also decided to hold the second weekly promenade concert on Tuesday, if possible, the success of the first being so gratifying to the citizens generally.

DAIRYMEN GETTING RICH.
Progressive dairymen who are only satisfied with the best results, are adding to their wealth and conferring a benefit on society, by the rapid improvements they are making in the art of butter making. This class use Wells, Richardson & Co's, Improved Butter Color, and know by actual test that it fills every claim made for it.

O'CONNELL'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Excursion to Channel Grove—An Enjoyable Time.

The excursion yesterday on the Hero to Simcoe Island by the Sons of St. Patrick was attended by nearly four hundred people and a more delightful outing could not be desired. The weather was perfect, and with the Oddfellows' Quadrille Band on board the sail along the picturesque shores of the bay was a rare treat. The steamer arrived at the Island shortly after dinner, where between two and three thousand people were greeted participating in the celebration of the O'Connell anniversary. The island never before presented such an animated scene. Pretty maidens with their dude beaux were in one place tripping the light fantastic, others were reclining in the shade of tall pines, while merry laughter resounded from shore to shore.

There was a long program of athletic games and sports which was not finished until dark. The Hero, landed her excursionists here at an early hour this morning. An unpleasant incident of the trip is referred to elsewhere.

EXCURSION TO STURGEON POINT.

The excursion to Sturgeon Point on Saturday morning affords a good opportunity to visit that delightful and healthy resort. The tickets are good for 10 days. As the Bobcaygeon man truly remarks the man who works ten or eleven months in order to save a little pot with which to give his family a few weeks' holiday rest, recreation and jollification, will enjoy what pleasures are to be obtained in this world and will undoubtedly stand in well for the next. For the brain-worker an occasional remission of toil is a necessary condition of continued vigor. The heightened tension of modern life has especially accentuated the need for occasional periods devoted to recreation and reaccumulation of energy. All workers, if they are to last, must have holidays. This is the holiday season and let every one take advantage of it. Throw care to the winds, and let gas and water rates stand till next quarter. Tog up your family in their old duds and and come to our back lakes. Come and fill your lungs with pure ozone; your pretty little tumtums with good, wholesome food; your minds with renewed vigor; and your hearts with fraternal sympathy with all mankind. This is the period for recreation. See to it that it is observed. Far better is health in a cottage, than wealth in a lunatic asylum.

BIRTH.

WALKER—On Tuesday, Aug. 5th, the wife of Mr. W. H. Walker, of a son.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public, and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strength en the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine, sold by all druggists.

From our own Correspondent.

MADOC, August 7.—Some farm hands were engaged in working the hay-fork at Mr. S. Rollins' barn yesterday afternoon. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS· THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-ursitate, They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances, The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup: it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa. Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swaton, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask or the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

The Creole pressed the other's hand in her own.

'Forgive me,' she murmured. 'Go on.'

'I think,' proceeded Pauline, 'that Mr. Scladden is scarcely one to make a statement without dear, it was true or difficult to prove otherwise. The question is, have we the time to wait to disprove it? In three days——'

She stopped.

Her voice failed.

In three days Jabez Scladden enters Lengueville as its legal owner,' the Creole concluded; adding. low and fiercely, through her white teeth, 'and mine.'

'No!' ejaculaten Pauline, 'That he shall never be.'

'He never shall,' remarked her companion, 'while my life is in my own hands.'

Oh, Juliette; you would never——'

'Live', interrupted the Creole, 'to belong to Jabez Scladden? No. You shudder how then would you prevent it.

'A vessel sailes from New Orleans tomorrow; we will go by it.'

The Creole broke into a mocking laugh.

'Very well, if it could be done, but it cannot. Mr. Scladden has gone, certainly; still, do you not imagine, sneak as he is, he is ever on the watch? Not a movement of mine but he will know.'

'And if he did,' exclaimed Pauline, nothing is his for three days.'

'Nothing he may touch or use but all his nevertheless,' responded Juliette, quickly. 'He can remove nothing, and you have less right than he. Should he intercept my escape, he could have me arrested, and by the law's aid, cause me to be dragged back. No, I have suffered ignominy enough without that.

She was no longer fierce or wild in her misery.

She was quiet, self-possessed, her brain clear and keen.

'Good Heaven! in that case what shall we do? cried Pauline, aghast. You will not stay here?'

'Not another night, if possible,' was the reply. 'I shall endeavor to escape though not by such means. I must fly to some free state. If I fail as I have said I still hold a means of release in my own hands.'

Her companion shivered.

'In mercy do not think of that!' she exclaimed. We will escape. Oh, that Eustace were here.'

The sudden change in the Creole's expression scarcely showed she echoed the wish.

She said somewhat coolly—

'What could he do? Nothing.'

'Nothing perhaps,' responded her sister secretly pained at her tone; 'still we are alone here, and in the hour of trouble it is ever a comfort a support to possess a sincere friend, to act and advise.'

'A sincere friend,'

The words darted through the Creole's brain like an electric shock.

They recalled the singular occurrance of the previous night.

Was she utterly friendles?

Could she imagine it after that mysterious note?

Had not the writer already proved one?

Whoever it might be, it was solely by his means that she had been saved from falling an immediate prey to Jabez Scladden's treachery—for treachery she knew it was—while her very soul sickened in recollecting his hideous leers, which she could read plainly now.

He had inveigled her back to America for his pleasure to undergo a destiny as shameful as humiliating.

At the remembrance of the letter, Juliette hesitated whether to acquaint Pauline with the circumstance.

She decided in the negative.

Not only had a barrier in the person of Eustace Belmore, risen up between her and her half-sister, to the annihilation on her part of all confidences, but she recollected the writer's trust in her secrecy.

No; of a cruelly jealous disposition, in her own misery and disgrace the Creole was growing rapidly the deeper to hate her more fortunate companion.

She felt she was alone, isolated henceforth, unsympathized with and unsympathizing.

Everything she did must be of her own act, and upon her own responsibility.

After this determination Pauline's presence became a restraint, and insupportable infliction.

Consequietly rising the Creole said—

'Pauline, you who are all generosity, will not take it unkindly, I know, but for a space I feel I must be alone' I always think best in solitude, an there is need to plan rapidly, While I am absent, pray seek Mr. Folmsbee. Who can tell he may have something to suggest.'

Her sister arose with evident reluctance.

Vital Questions.!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves, and curing all forms of nervous complaints giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops! ! !"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all the most eminent physicians: "What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention, or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu !"
Ask the same physicians
"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever, ague &c.," and they will tell you:
Mandrake! or Dandelion !"
Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable.
And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless to the most frail woman, the weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

Women have gone nearly crazy ! ! ! !
From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefullness, and various diseases peculiar to women.
People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism, inflammatory, and chronic, or suffering from scrofula.
Erysipelas!
"Saltrheum, blood poisoning dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact, almost all diseases frail"

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes. accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. ONLY A BOY.

Only a boy, with his noise and fun,
The veriest mystery under the sun ;
As brimful of mischief, and wit and glee.
As ever a human frame can be.
And as hard to manage as—ah ! ah, me !
'Tis hard to tell,
Yet we love him well.

Only a boy, with his fearful tread,
Who cannot be driven, but must be led ;
Who troubles the neighbors' dogs and cats,
And tears more clothes and spoils more hats,
Than would stock a store
For a year or more.

Only a boy, with his wild, strange ways
With his idle hours on busy days ;
With his queer remarks and his odd replies,
Sometimes foolish and sometimes wise,
Often brilliant for one of his size,
As a meteor hurled
From the planet world.

Only a boy, who will be a man
If Nature goes on with her first great plan—
If water, or fire, or some fatal snare
Conspire not to rob us of this our heir,
Our blessing, our trouble, our rest, our care,
Our torment, our joy,
"Only a boy !"

EFFECTS OF SUNSHINE ON THE CROPS.

The observations in regard to the different amounts of sunshine in different years, carried on by the Bureau of Industries at various places throught the Province, possess a value other than the gratification of curiosity in regard to the comparative sunniness of the various districts. It is only of recent years that the bearing of sunshine on the size, earliness, and ripening of fruits, and other vegetables, has been brought before the attention of scientific agriculturists. The full significance of sunshine in vegetable growth is yet far from being understood, but sufficient is known regarding it to justify the conclusion that direct light received from the sun has a most important bearing on the quantity and quality of crops. 'Cultivated plants,' wrote COUNT DE GASPARIN many years ago, 'will not ripen their seed without the direct light of the sun, and the longer they are deprived of it the smaller the quantity which they they will mature.' Average temprature is not all-important consideration. In France in 1865 the grape crop and quality of the wine were inferior to those of either of the succeeding years which were much cooler during the season of vegetation and a study of the whole meteorological phenomena of the three years failed to furnish any reason for the wine difference in quality except that in 1875, notwithstanding greater heat, the number of hours of sunshine was much less than in either of the following seasons. Last year in Ontario the shortness of the crops was ascribed to coolness and excessive rainfall rainfall and May and September frosts, but there are other years on record when all these unfavorable phenoma were quite as marked without very greatly diminished the yield. The Bureau reports show that in addition to the other unfavorable influences at work, the number of hours of sunshine was nearly one-fifteenth less than in the previous year. Had the sunshine been equal to the avarage, it is quite possible that many plants which were immature when caught by the September frost would have been ripe. Recent investigations in France show that it is not merely the heat rays that are unnecessary to plants, but also the neutral light rays, which have a chemical action the effects of which are not yet understood. What is known regarding the effects of sunshine on vegetation goes a long way in explaining the superior quality and yield of cereals and vegetables in Northwest over the yield in climates which have no more favorable weather conditions in other respects. Sunny as the climate of Eastern Canada, it is much surpassed in this respect by Manitoba and the Northwest, and the fact should not be overlooked in estimating the agricultural capabilities of the Prairie Provinces.

A RICH LITTLE GIRL.

The richest little girl in the world is the seven-year old daughter of Captain George H. Perkins of of the navy, who is well-known in this city. She is worth $7,000,000 in her own name, the amount having been recently left her by her grandfather, William F. Weld; of Boston. Mr. Weld was the father of the little girl's mother, and when he died four heirs, including the child, came into possession of the bulk of his fortune, $28,000,000, which was divided in four portions. The sum of $20.000 and a valuable residence in Boston were bequeathed to Mrs. Perkins, wife of the Captain, and $20,000 annually to be used in caring for the little millionaire heiress until she reaches her legal age and claims her millions. This makes Captain Perkin's income in actual cash $40,000, without including his Government salary, or the income from his magnificent residence in Boston.—Washington Republican.

PURE BLOOD
Is the absolute necessity of health.
The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.
Gentlemen,—
I have used Shakar Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.
Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Blaite, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

DAVID A. WELLS ON CANADIAN PROTECTION.

An interview with the Hon. David A. Wells, the eminent American economist, has been published in a Montreal paper. Mr. Wells is now in the metropolis. He enquired why the wedge of protection had been permitted to insert itself in Canada. When told that the chief reason was the influence of the United States example and of the "jug handled free trade," the "fair trade arguments" and the "retaliatory" policy, he said that those arguments were very strong ones only from the standpoint of ignorance. A protective policy as a punitive measure in itself was ineffective. Theoretically and in the abstract the arguments could not be sustained. But ignorance was unhappily the general and prevailing state of people with regard to political economy, and it proved of practical value to countries negotiating for reciprocity to have some duties which they could abolish in return for the abolition of duties by another country. The United States is working on that basis with Brazil at present, by reducing the duties on coffee in return for a reduction of duties on certain American goods. When you have protective duties it is a good use to make of them, that of securing an abolition of like duties in another country by abolishing them.

Upon the question of reciprocity between Canada and the United States Mr. Wells spoke as follows:—In 1863, when reciprocity between the two countries was abolished, the trade amounted to over $60,000,000; afterward it fell to $35,000,000, or about one-half—I am speaking from memory—and ever since we have been getting slowly back to about the same amount of international business which was done twenty years ago. Some idea of the barrier which the protective policy of the United States and Canada raises between the two countries may be gathered from the fact that careful estimates, based largely upon the railway traffic, show that for every four million people in the United States there is an interval business of ten thousand millions of dollars, counting values over and over again as that kind of business compels, as a result of their dealings with the rest. The people of Canada number about four million and a half—according to the last census, so it may be seen how much business has been stopped by the artificial barrier which the protective tarih has raised between the two peoples. If an earthquake were to occur along the whole border of the United States and Canada, and throw up a mountain barrier which would enhance the cost of transportation from one country to the other, of forty per cent. cost upon the goods, what a meeting of boards of trades, of congresses, and of parliaments there would be, and what a demand for engineers in order to take steps to tunnel the barrier or otherwise reduce the cost of transportation. Yet that which if done by an earthquake would be regarded as a calamity when done by ourselves voluntarily is regarded as a benefit."

Being asked what he thought of the future relations of Canada to the United States the distinguished visitor replied: "The future of Canada is, I think, bound up with that of the United States, but perhaps more immediately in a commercial sense than in a governmental one, I have always thought that the two countries are destined to be one, but the policy which will bring it about is not one of force but of commercial amity. It will be the old story of the wind and sun in their design to make the traveller take off his coat. The Anglo-Saxon race will, however, become more united some day—by what ties it is impossible at present to foresee, and then it will dominate the world. With regard to free trade, if the United States and the British Empire were both free trade there would be nothing for the rest of the world to do but to adopt free trade also."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The latest acquisition to the Canadian press in Ottawa, cannot be congratulated upon the style of personal journalism which is exemplified in its columns. Malignantly misrepresenting the professional career of a brother journalist, is not a legitimate occupation, and the Ottawa Sun, we are glad for the reputation of Canadian pressmen, is alone in presuming to compel the public to read such vile attacks, actuated as they must be by personal motives.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

A BAD TARIFF.

It is a singular commentary on the claim that the high taxation tariff would preserve Canada for the Canadians, that the Ontario Car Works at London with room for 500 hands have been so lacking in business that lately they employed only 70, and have now had to assign. All the while the Canadian Pacific Railway has been ordering its cars from the United States.—Toronto Globe.

INDEX OF THE EXODUS.

There are 12,000 French Canadians voters in Maine, and nearly 75,000 in all the New England States. The Canadian vote, i.e. the vote of Canadians who have taken out their papers as American citizens is also heavy in Minnesota, Dakota, Illinois, Iowa, New York and California. In fact the Canadian vote has become almost as powerful a factor in some States as the Irish vote in certain districts in England. There must be something wrong with a country from which its people are fleeing. Sir John should appoint a royal commission on the subject.—Winnipeg Sun.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns, and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

ONTARIO CAR WORKS.

The Collapse of an Industry which will be much felt.

A London, Ont., despatch says:—The assignment of the Ontario car works, though not altogether unexpected by some was to some a painful surprise. The works were established in 1881 and gave employment to about 300 hands the greater par of the year. The presence of so many additional mechanics in London East, necessitated the building of numerous dwellings. When the establishment was booming, running with 590 employees night and day, the monthly pay roll since the starting averaged $5,000. In 1876 the works were burned down but speedily rebuilt; and have been in more or less constant operation ever since. The company changed hands two years ago but has been under the management of Thos. Muir ever since its inception. Latterly, owing the lack of business employees have worked a good deal on short time, and the force reduced to seventy men. Wages have been about $1.40 a day, although of course skilled mechanics earn more. At present the establishment will be run by the assignee until the contracts are completed.

LITERARY NOTES.

The leading article in the September Manhattan will be a poem, 'The Chalice Bearers,' by Mrs. E. S. McChesney: illustrated from drawings by Jessie Curtus Shepherd.

'Nance,' by Hope Ledyard, is the title of a short story in the September Manhattan, and turns upon the devotion of a wife to an unworthy husband.

An anecdotal tricycling article, profusely illustrated by Joseph Pennell, will appear in the September Century. It records the incidents of a journey from Coventry to Chester, treating of Izaak Walton's country, with its quaint, old-fashioned inns sequestered villages where the curfew still rings at sunset, the bicycle races at Derby etc. As Mr. Pennell is an expert and and enthusiastic wheelman, his dozen or more pictures will have a special interest in the line of character sketches.

THE DUTY OF A NEWSPAPER.

The Toronto Monetary Times ventures upon a difficult task when it undertakes to lay down a rule of conduct in regard to the management of a public journal. Referring to a recent article in the Hamilton Times our contemporary says:

> Possibly some of the readers of the Hamilton Times experienced cold comfort on reading in its columns the other day that "the Times never regarded the Mutual Marriage Aid Association as likely to be a stable institution." If that were the case, why did not the Times long ago display courage enough to express its conviction respecting that humbug?

To the fairness of this criticism, the London Advertiser objects in the following terms:

> There is such a thing as a libel law, and the Times or any other paper might believe a thing to be a rank humbug without being able or willing to go to the trouble and expense of proving it. Then again; a paper might consider a scheme a veritable swindle when it was as honest as daylight. It is a little too much to expect a newspaper to be responsible for every statement in an advertisement. We have at present in the Advertiser two advertisements each advising the reader to travel to a certain point by a certain route, the routes being rivals. There is nothing objectionable in that, and no paper published on earth, not even the Monetary Times, would refuse to take both advertisements simultaneously. No reputable paper would publish an advertisement of what it knew to be a swindle, but no paper can undertake to expose the business methods of its patrons.

TROUBLE IN IRVING'S COMPANY.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The trial of the divorce suit brought by Emma Tyars, against her husband, Frank Tyars, both members of the Lyceum Theatre Company, began yesterday. The defendant testified that he had intercepted a letter from his wife to Haviland, another member of the company, while the company was in Boston. He went to Haviland's room where he assaulted and disfigured him. Haviland admitted that improprieties had taken place between himself and plaintiff. The plaintiff denied the charge, and declared that there was a conspiracy to deprive her of her child.

"GOOD-BY, KATE."

A Young Dry Goods Clerk's Deliberate Suicide.

HIS LETTERS TO HIS FRIENDS.

TROY, Aug. 7.—Knickerbocker Griswold, whose parents live in South Toledo, Ohio, came here about three years ago and found employment at Wm. H. Frear's dry goods store. He was afterwards placed in charge of the kid glove department. His wife accompanied him here, and soon after their arrival a son was born to them. The couple did not live happily, and in a few months Mrs. Griswold separated from her husband and returned to Ohio, but Griswold contributed regularly to the support of the child. In February Griswold took out a policy of insurance on his life. Recently he learned that his wife intended to institute proceedings for a divorce, and this seemed to weigh heavily on his mind. On Saturday he went to Smith & Wellington's law office and had his will drawn, bequeathing the insurance money to his mother and sister, and in the event of the death of either one of them before him it was to go to the survivor, or should both die before him the money was to be paid to his cousin, Mrs. Kate M. Faye, who boarded in the same house with him in Lansingburgh. The money to his credit in the Lansingburgh bank and his personal effects were also bequeathed to Mrs. Fave.

Yesterday afternoon Griswold complained that he was not feeling well, and obtained leave of absence. He went to his boarding house, and after the family had retired, he made careful preparations to kill himself. He penned telegrams to his parents and others, saying:—John has just shot himself. Will write you soon.' To each of these despatches he signed his cousin's name. Then he undressed himself, and took out the suit of clothes in which he desired to be laid out, and placed them on a chair. Then he took his memorandum book which, was found on the floor in his cousin's room today, and wrote in it a letter to his cousin, of which the following is a copy:

> DEAR KATE: When you read this I will be cold and lifeless. Forgive me, dear Kate, God alone knows what I suffer. I have $150 in the bank, and whatever change I have is in my pocketbook. See Mr. Townsend and give him $10; also thank him for all his past kindness. Have him break the news to Mr. Freer and explain matters. I have laid out the clothes I would like to be laid out in. I would like to be buried in Oakwood, but if you think best send my remains West. Oh, Kate, if I could only keep from this rash act, but cannot. I know you will feel this more than I shall feel the pain. Yes, Kate, you have been mother and sister to me, and may our Heavenly Father bless you with a brighter life than I have been permitted to enjoy. Good-by. I'm off.
> JOHN.

It is supposed that when he finished the letter he placed the pistol to his breast and fired, killing himself instantly.

THE MOWAT DEMONSTRATION.

Hon. E. Blake has consented to act as Chairman of the Mowat Reception Committee.

At a meeting of the Reform Association of North Oxford the following among other resolutions was carried unanimously and with great enthusiasm:—"That in addition to the demonstration to be given in honor of Hon. Mr. Mowat by his constituents in North Oxford, the Reformers of this riding cordially approve of the public Provincial reception to be given to that hon. gentleman in Toronto about the 16th September, on his return from England.

TOO TRUE TO BE SAD.

He was a busy man and she was a society woman. One evening he suddenly looked up from his paper and said:

'By the way, didn't we have a baby in this house about the time Midland broad gauge went up to ninety-eight?'

'Yes,' see said, 'Oscar was born the night of the Everingham reception.'

'Boy, was it?' he said, with a show of interest. 'I had forgotten; must be about 7 months by this time. Where is he?'

She touched a bell, a servant appeared, and she ordered Oscar to be brought into the presence of his sire. Instead of whom, the weeping nurse appeared alone, and with many tears confessed that the infant Oscar had been kidnapped in the park six weeks before, and that the most careful search, aided by advertisements in the daily papers, had thus far failed to reveal his whereabouts. Thus we see that wealth is no barrier to sorrow, and even into the homes of the rich and the great, trouble creeps with its stealthy tread, and sometimes breaks up a whole evening of enjoyment.

RESULTS TELL.
The proof of the pudding is the eating, and the proof of the extraordinary power over pain of Polson's NERVILINE is in using it. Polson's Nerviline never fails to perform wonders in every case of pain. It cannot fail for it is composed of powerful pain subduing remedies. It goes right to the bottom, and and pain is banished at once. Nerviline cures all kind of pain, internal or external. Go to any drug store and get a 10 or 25 cent bottle, and be delighted with its promptitude in doing its work.

ABOUT COUGHS AND COLDS.

Coughs and colds are prevalent now, especially among children, too often from the ignorance or carelessness of their elder guardians. Many mothers appear to accept with resignation the repeated and violent colds from which their children suffer, as providential and unavoidable. A cold is by no means always due to exposure. Indigestion, constipation, a lack of scrupulous cleanliness, the unwise habit of sleeping in much of the clothing worn during the day, unaired bed chambers—all or any of these things may have far more to do with your child's tendency to cold than the keenest breath of the bracing winter air. And in great measure these things are under your control. Mothers should understand that it is a fact, whether they see how it is or not, that numerous colds and sore throats are directly traceable to indigestion and dietic errors. Quantities of greasy food, fried meats, pastry and the like, ill-ventilated rooms and continued constipation, have to answer for many cases of croup and putrid sore throats. All these things weaken the system and render the system far less able to resist changes of temperature. Give every bedroom a thorough airing every day, more especially if children are obliged to sleep together or with their parents. This is to be avoided if possible; if not, always lower a window slightly from the top—or if this cannot be done raise it from below. There is frequently bad air enough generated and breathed in the sleeping apartment of a family with small children to supply them all not only with colds, but with a number of so called 'malarious' diseases to last a year, perhaps longer. Neglect of bathing is another prolific source of colds. A child from three to ten years old should certainly receive an entire bath twice a week in winter. A warm bath at night, taking special care to avoid any chill after, will frequently break up a sudden cold. Let them play out of doors as much as possible taking care to have their feet warm and dry A flannel suit and rubber overshoes will often save much cough medicine and doctor's bills. Keep them warmly clad, but do not be content with thick coats and worsted hoods, while short skirts barely cover their knees leaving the limbs chilled.—American Agriculturist.

THE DUDE AND THE INDIAN.

On Fort Wayne train approaching Chicago, there was a short statured, straight haired, copper colored Indian, going back to the reservation after a trip to the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa. He wore a nice suit of clothes, which fitted him badly, and a paper collar, without any necktie. He attended strictly to his own business, and was unmolested until a young sprig came into the smoking car from the sleeper. 'An Indian, I guess, said the young chap, as he lighted a cigarette. And then approaching the son of the plains, he attracted general attention with strange gestures:—'Ugh, heap, big injun! Omaha? Sioux? Pawnee? See great father? Have drink firewater? Warm Injun's blood!'

The copper colored savage gazed at the young man a moment with an ill-concealed expression on his face, and then he said with good pronunciation;—'You must have been reading some dime novels, sir. I am going back to my people in Montana, after spending three years in the East at school. I advise you to do the same thing. No, I do not drink whiskey. Where I live gentlemen do not carry whiskey flasks in their pockets.'

The cigarette was not smoked out, and amid a general laugh, a much crestfallen young man retired to the sleeping coach.

A WOMAN FRIGHTENS A PANTHER

What came near being a tragedy occurred on Salt River on Thursday a week ago. Mr. Shiver, well know in this part of Florida, was absent from home on business and his wife after attending to the household duties, had seated herself near the door at her sewing, while her little one played around on the floor near at hand. Hearing a slight noise, Mrs Shiver looked around and saw crouched within a dozen feet of her and her baby an immense panther, ready to spring. With a shriek she sprang to her feet and dashed the heavy shears with which she was cutting her work, in the panther's face, snatched her child and rushed back into the house. The panther disconcerted by the sudden attack and the noise, beat a deliberate retreat for the swamp.

QUEEN CITY NOTES.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—The final meeting of the Humber Relief Committee was held yesterday, and a statement was prepared which will be submitted to the citizens in a day or two. It was announced that the Grand Trunk Railway Company had paid, in settlement of all demands to the survivors, the sum of $78,000.

Alfred Jenner, in the employ of McCrecken, Gall & Co., Soho Street, while working a sharper yesterday one of the knives broke and a piece of the flying instrument buried itself in the young man's arm, inflicting a dangerous wound. The doctors fear that he will be crippled, as two of the tendons are severed.

A six year old boy named Willie Grange in charge of a careless young woman, fell off the Brock street wharf yesterday and but for the sagacity of a fine setter belonging to a bystander, would have been drowned. The dog bravely kept the little fellow's head above water until his master came to their rescue.

Mr. T. C. Wells, Chemist and Druggist, Port Colborne, Ont., writes; "Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsia Cure sells well, and gives the best satisfaction for all diseases of the blood." It never fails to root out all diseases from the system, cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, etc., purifies the blood, and will make you look a picture of health and happiness.

"Facts are stubborn things," and sufferers from chills and fever generally find their complaint a very stubborn fact, until they commence the use of Ayer's Ague Cure. That medicine eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and invariably cures even the worst cases.

THE BICYCLE PARK.

The promenade concert announced for Tuesday evening in the Bicycle Park will surpass the previous successful affair very considerably. The club has contracted to have a service of pipe laid around the grounds and the park brilliantly illuminated with gas thrown from strong reflectors. This, because the illumination by torches was not considered bright enough. The Oddfellows band will play a new program of quick music and the wheelmen will bring on exciting and amusing races, improving in this respect on the program of last Tuesday. They will include an obstacle race for the first time, and in the fast races the man going the fastest and coming first will win. Full particulars will be given to the public who it is hoped will appreciate the enterprise of the bicycle club in undertaking at great expense to provide these evenings of pleasant entertainment. The expense of taking the gas into the grounds will be large but the Ramblers do nothing by halves.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. Mr. Smith—'Ah!'

'Oh, you need not appear so amused. That only shows how plebian are your tastes. If you had any descent to boast of you would be delighted with the fact that your wife was a direct descendent of King William the Conqueror, a glorious ancestor whose leading characteristic I firmly believe I inherit.'

'I should be delighted, more than delighted, my dear, if you had only been a descendant and an inheritor of the leading characteristic of the other King William.'

NEHEMIAH GILBERT'S GALL.

Picton's Blonde Barrister Elopes with His Servant.

A FORMER BELLEVILLIAN'S BADNESS

From our own Correspondent.

PICTON, Aug. 8.—A prominent lawyer of the town, Nehemiah Gilbert, son of J. A. M. Gilbert of Belleville has eloped with a servant girl whom his wife had discharged, leaving Mrs. Gilbert and four children in a deplorable state. The Times of to-day has the following particulars: The girl's name is Annie Gerow, and she had been in Gilbert's employ for several months, but was discharged by Mrs. Gilbert about two weeks ago. On Monday evening Gilbert and Miss Gerow were seen together in a skiff on the bay. Tuesday morning her parents were inquiring about town after their daughter, not knowing where she had spent the night, and it transpired that Gilbert had not been at home Monday night, and that BOTH HAD DISAPPEARED.

Neither has been heard from since, and it is believed that they went down the bay to get in the track of some vessel that would convey them to Oswego. Gilbert leaves a wife with four children, the oldest but twelve years of age and the youngest a few weeks old. He leaves also a lot of unpaid debts, and carried with him money he held in trust for different persons, the total amount variously estimated at from $2,000 to $4,000. The largest sum was $900 belonging to Mrs. Basel, of Bloomfield, daughter of Mr. Stewart Wilson, Sr. The scoundrel and made no provision for his wife and children. He studied law and practiced for a time in partnership with Mr. S. B. Burdett. He came to Picton about two years ago, and was understood to have a fair practice. He is a stout florid man, about 5 feet 5 inches in height, and 35 years of age, with light hair and red moustache. The Gerow girl is a rather pretty, modest and immature damsel 18 or 19 years of age. A great deal of indignation is expressed against Gilbert, together with sympathy for his wife, who is an exemplary woman, and with her young children is left helpless and dependent on the kindness of relatives and friends.

SPOKES FROM THE WHEEL.

It is proposed to have a Ramblers Club run on Monday evening from the park to Mr. W. H. Ponton's taking in the lawn social and aiding the good cause to which it contributes.

The program and outline of arrangements for the grand Springfield tournament Sept. 16, 17, 18 and 19 has been received. This is the first and only four days tournament ever held. The list of races is the largest in the world, and the most varied. There are 36 events.

As compared with the sport of horse trotting and racing, it remains to be seen whether cycling contests will continue to be more popular. Certainly there is something quite as inspiring in a contest of intelligent men as in a race of hard driven horses. Yacht racing, in which many good people are interested, has its limitations, and the yachtsman has no reason to despise the cyclist. It is the boat builder and rigger that has more to do with his success than any skill or exertion of his own. Boating and canoeing are also limited, because boats and canoes are impossible where there is no water. In the intelligent use of muscular force they come nearer to bicycling than any other sport.

Should this meet the eye of the bicylist, who had the misfortune to be thrown over a garden wall last Monday on the road to Shannonville, he can have the few items he left on payment of the cost of this advertisement. At the moment of sending to the paper the following articles or otherwise have been found; Three teeth with gold plate attached, a monogram T. U., one gilt button, a mouthpiece to a horn (? bugle), a portion of a scalp, half an eyeglass, a portrait of a young thing in fancy attire, a card case (no cards inside), a hotel bill (unpaid apparently) a tailor's bill (also unsettled and attached to a summons), a portion of a silver ring, a nine carat gold ring, with a colored glass in as a stone. An active search will be made for any other valuables missing.

NICK, BUT NO TICK.

Somerville Journal.

'No sir, said the barber to a suspicious-looking customer, who affably remarked, as the lather was being laid on that he supposed there were a good many men who failed to pay their shaving scores.

'No, sir, I used to give credit, but I never do now—in fact nobody ever seeks to tick any more.'

'How's that?'

'Well, you see,' said the barber, trying the edge of his razor on his thumb nail. 'I had a set of stiffs who used to ask me to chalk it down. I got tired of keeping books, and I adopted a new system. Whenever I shaved one of these old standbys I put a little nick in his nose with my razor, and kept tally in that way. They got so they didn't want to run bills.'

There was a tremor in the customer's voice as he asked from beneath the lather:

'Do you object to being paid in advance?'

BROCKVILEE V. BELLEVILLE.

The Small Town Beats the City in one Direction.

Brockville Times.

With the establishment of a thorough system of water supply throughout the town, a new era of comfort and progress should dawn upon the citizens of Brockville. The building of water works had long been a necessity, and the authorities are to be congratulated on the realization of the oft-expressed wish of the citizens. The successful experience which attended the inauguration of the works on Monday have demonstrated to every observer the ease with which a desirable end may be accomplished when willing hands assume the control of any public enterprise. In thus catering to the requirements of a growing and enterprising community, the promoters of the Brockville water works have not taken any strides in advance of the age. Towns of smaller proportions even than our own have long ago seen the wisdom of a pure water supply, and we are tardily joining the lists of the municipalities which have obeyed the behests of a popular need. At the inception of a regularly organized system of water supply it may not be inappropriate for us to refer to a few of the leading advantages gained by the citizens;

For household purposes generally the value of a pure water cannot be over estimated. Filtered water for cooking or ordinary drinking purposes if preferable to water drawn from wells which may possibly be polluted, from undiscovered sources, by decaying vegetable or animal matter. In some cities the use of well water is absolutely forbidden, the proximity of sewers and cess pools rendering such sources of supply constantly liable to contamination. With metal pipes carrying pure water into the houses of Brockville, we may expect a decrease in the number of malarial complaints, which too frequently presage the ravages of typhoid fever or diphtheria. It has been scientifically demonstrated that, in the cities where a carefully filtered supply of water is furnished to the citizens, the morality from malarial diseases is reduced to a minimum.

No perfect drainage can be secured in a closely populated town without repeated and thorough flushing of the sewers. This is only possible in places which are fortunate enough to possess water works, and it is an advantage of special importance. Proper drainage is essential to the health of the town, and with the introduction of the new water works we hope to see an end end of the old system of plank drainage in Brockville. Tile drainage is ultimately cheaper, much more durable and satisfactory, and easier kept free from obstructions. It commends itself to the authorities in this age of progress.

Greater protection against fire will naturally be the outcome of the establishment of water works. The force which propels the water through the pipes, can be used, in cases of emergency, to eject a stream from the nearest hydrant upon an incipient fire. This will not obviate the necessity of maintaining the fire department in its present state of efficiency, but will prove a valuable aid in the working of the same.

(Several other minor advantages are also mentioned.)

WHAT THE WIFE MUST ENDURE.

In a decision rendered at Trenton, N. Y., granting a divorce to the husband in the case of Hann against Hann, where the ground alleged was desertion by the wife, Vice Chancellor Bird says:

'Home may be unpleasant; there may be unexpected toil; there may be hardships too much for a weak or sensitive nature to bear; there may be neglect that wounds deeper than a serpent's sting; there may be broken promises that turn all the ardent love of early wedlock to unrelenting hate; yet neither one nor all of these is sufficient to constitute a legal excuse for a wife to leave her husband.'

HIS AMENDMENT.

Sam Kalleton, a member of the Arkansas Legislature, was very fond of offering amendments to bills introduced. That was the limit of his legislative capacity. One morning, after a night's hilarity, he entered the legislative hall just as the chaplain was asking Divine aid. The old man took a chew of tobacco and listened attentively until the chaplain closed his petition with an effective recitation of the Lord's Prayer. 'Mr. Speaker" said the old man, rising. 'I move to strike out the words 'daily bread,' and insert 'as much bread as may be found necessary for twenty days' We have already done enough for the flood sufferers."

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient, while small doses frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-uscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the

Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa. Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swaton, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Why do you hesitate?' inquired Juliette curiously.

Pauline was silent a few seconds, then grasping the other's hand, exclaimed falteringly, tears in her voice—

'My darling you just used words that terrified me. Promise, oh! I entreat you not to attempt that.'

'Suicide?' smiled the Creole. 'I promise faithfully, for two reasons. I shall run no danger, at least until we meet again. First, because I possess no means at the present moment to perform the deed; secondly, I love life too well to cast it away because of such a man as Jebez Scladden. Trust me that resource will only be adopted when all else fails. Then go.'

Stopping she kissed her sister's white forehead, then, startled by a step in the verandah, fled fom the room.

Passing swiftly to her own apartment, Juliette entered and was about to close the door, when to her vexation, she beheld the negress Keziah, standing with her arms folded across her breast by the window.

'I wish to be alone, Keziah,' she said, 'you need not remain.'

The negress raised her head, and there was an expression on her dark features Juliette had never beheld on them before.

It shewed sympathy, mingled with deep sorrow.

'Yes, Miss Julie,' responded the servant bowing respectfully; 'but first, may Keziah have just one little word with you?'

The Creole regarded her attentively, struck still more by the ebony face.

'If not very important, Keziah,' she replied, 'I would prefer your deferring it.'

'It is very important,' remarked the negress with emphasis; 'very important to you Miss Julie, Keziah must speak for she loves you.'

'Ah!'

'Will you hear me?'

'Yes; proceed.'

Noiselessly the negress crossed the room, and shut the lock of the door.

The Creole watched her with surprise blended with curiosity.

It was a mystery.

Keziah turned threw a hurried glance round, as if to be sure they were perfectly alone, then abruptly flung herself at her mistress's feet and with a countenance denoting the acutest sorrow, ejaculated, as she embraced the Creole's knees—

'Oh, dear, dear missy Julie, dear, Miss Julie, Keziah knows all—all that they have done, and what they have dared to call you. She knows——'

'How?' cried the Creole, the color mounting hotly to her cheek as she started back. 'Do even you dare——'

'Oh, Missy Julie, don,t be angry with poor Keziah,' proceeded the negress, tearfully. 'Her heart bleeds for you. Her eyes weep, but she also rejoices—yes, Miss Julie, rejoices, for she can save you; or, rather, Keziah comes the messenger of one who has the power, before to-morrow dawns, to have rescued and placed far beyond the reach of the villain Jabez Scladden.'

'What!' ejaculated the Creole, her interest instantly awakened. 'You are acquainted with someone who can rescue me? You have come from——'

'Him,' concluded Keziah, nodding her woolly head.

'Him!—whom?' interrogated Juliette bending forward.

'Your sincere friend,' said the negress,

'Ah! the writer of the letter.'

'I don't know nothing of any letter, Missy Julie, but that's what he called himself. He says he has twice proved himself so already, and you will not fear to trust him.'

'Twice!' cried Juliette, starting. 'Keziah, the address,' she added; 'tell me what do you call him?'

'Massa Stuart Loring.'

Uttering an exclamation, the Creole staggered back, repeating in amazement—

'Stuart Loring—again!'

CHAPTER XXIV.

DOUBT—DECISION—KEZIAH TRIUMPHS.

For some moments the Creole regarded the negress with silent astonishment; then she ejaculated—

'Keziah, what do you know of this man?'

'Nothing, Miss Julie,' was the prompt rejoinder.

'Nothing! And yet you act as his messenger?' remarked the Creole suspiciously 'explain.'

'Yes, dear Missy; Keziah will tell how it all happened. Last night, when I went to my own room, after leaving Pauline I was goin' to close the window, when I saw a man standing below. I was about giving a big scream, Missy Julie, but he made a sign for me to be silent, and I heard him whisper—

'Make no noise for your life. Don't you know me?'

'He turned himself to the light, and I exclaimed—

'Massa Loring!'

'Yes,' he answered,

'And then, Missy Julie, he asked if I loved you. I told him of course Keziah did. Hadn't I been your nurse when you were a baby?

'Well,' he said, 'come down. I must speak to you. A terrible danger, perhaps, is threatening her, but if you really love her you and me may avert it.'

ADVERTISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"The Remedy so favorably noticed in all the papers,

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for Nervous Exhaustion and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column

FLIRTING FOR FUN.

Ah! there's wondrous magic
  In the glance of a woman's eye,
Ah! there's wondrous power
  In the depth of a woman's sigh.
With her sigh and with her glances
  And her coyly winning ways,
Will the cruel charmer tease me
  Till my heart is all ablaze;
And when all my fond soul's fired
  By the lightning of her eyes,
And when my madly throbbing sighs,
  Leap to meet her trembling sighs,
Then with crimson corals pointing
  Careless of the wrong they've done,
Does the darling humbug whisper,
  "Pshaw! I'm flirting—just for fun!"

MR. SPURGEON ON THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER.

Mr. Spurgeon's fiftieth birthday has been the occasion of special attention being given to his work, All the most prominent English papers have editorially and otherwise spoken of him in the most complimentary terms and some have sent representatives to interview him. The following is selected from the Pall Mall Gazette:—

'Then you have not been modified in any way as to the efficacy of prayer?' asked the visitor.

Mr. Spurgeon laughed. 'Only in my faith growing far stronger and firmer than ever. It is not a matter of faith with me, but of knowledge and every day experience. I am constantly witnessing the most unmistakable instances of answers to prayer. My whole life is made up of them. To me they are so familiar as to cease to excite my surprise; but to many they would seem marvellous, no doubt. Why, I could no more doubt the efficacy of prayer than I could disbelieve in the law of gravitation. The one is as much a fact as the other, constantly verified every day of my life. Elijah, by the brook Cherith, as he received his daily rations from the ravens, could hardly be a more likely subject for skepticism than I. Look at my Orphanage. To keep it going entails an annual expenditure of about £10,000. Only £1,400 is provided for my endowment, The remaining £8,000 comes to me regularly in answer to prayer. I do not know where I shall get it from day to day. I ask God for it and he sends it. Mr. Muller, of Bristol, does the same on a far larger scale, and his experience is the same as mine. The constant inflow of funds—of all the funds necessary to carry on these works—is not stimulated by advertisements, by begging letters, by canvassing or any of the usual modes of raising the wind, We ask God for the cash, and he sends it. That is a good, solid, material not to be explained away. But quite as remarkable illustrations of the efficiency of believing faith are constantly occurring in spiritual things. Some two years ago a poor woman accompanied by two of her neighbors, came to my vestry in deep distress. Her husband had fled from the country; in her sorrow she went to the house of God, and something I said in the sermon made her think I was personally familiar with her case. Of course I had known nothing about her. It was a general illustration that fitted a particular case. She told me her story, and a very sad one it was. I said, 'There is nothing we can do but to kneel down and cry to the Lord for the immediate conversion of your husband.' We knelt down and I prayed that the Lord would touch the heart of the deserter, convert his soul, and bring him back to his home. When we rose from our knees I said to the poor woman, 'Do not fret about the matter. I feel sure your husband will come home; and that he will yet become connected with our church.' She went away and I forgot all about it. Some months after she reappeared among her neighbors and a man whom she introduced as her husband. He had indeed come back, and he had returned a converted man. On making inquiry and comparing notes we found that the very day on which we had prayed for his conversion, he, being at the time on board a ship far away at sea, stumbled most expectedly upon a stray copy of one of my sermons. He read it. The truth went to his heart. He repented and sought the Lord and as soon as possible returned to his wife and daily calling. He was admitted a member, and last Monday his wife' who up to that time had not been a member was also received among us. That woman does not doubt the power of prayer. All the infidels in the world could not shake her conviction that there is a God that answereth prayer. I should be the most irratational creature in the world if, with a life every day of which is full of experiences so remarkable, I entertained the slightest doubt on the subject. I do not regard it as miraculous; it is part and of the established order of the universe that the shadow of a coming event should fall in advance upon some believing soul in the shape of prayer and realization. The prayer of faith is a divine decree commencing its operation.,

SHE COULD TURN A "SUMMERSET,"

Boston Journal.

Ofttimes a little word dropped from careless lips reveals to him who hears it the whole inner life of the speaker. It is not always safe, however, to base an opinion of a person upon such a foundation as the following incident will show:

Yesterday afternoon a horse car was slowly bumping along towards the South End, and among the passengers were two refined looking young women, who were holding an animated conversation in one corner. Their words were inaudible to the rest of the passengers, owing to the noise of the car wheels and the groaning and creaking of the vehicle. All of a sudden, however, the car stopped, and, thrilling across the momentary silence, came this remark from the prettier of the pair:

'You just ought to see me turn a summerset!'

The effect was extraordinary. Two light minded young men at the other end of the car laughed aloud; a clerical looking person opposite the pair half rose, as if meditating flight and then sat down again; an aged and severe aspected dame glared at the speaker through spectacles which focused her gaze until it bored its way like a gimlet and the faces of the two young women turned to a charming roseate hue.

And yet the speaker was not a circus-rider, a trapeze performer or anything else odd, unfeminine or indelicate. She belonged to one of our best families, and having just returned from the gymnasium, which her sex in this city are now so sedulously cultivating, was describing to a friend her triumps on the parallel bars.

THE COURT COMES INTO THE POOL.

Policeman Skelling of New York city, arranged Charles W. Higgins before Justice Powers at the Jefferson Market Police Court Monday. Skelling said he had found Higgins lying drunk upon the street Higgins denied this, and said that he was a respectable man, but a poor one.

Has he any money?' asked the Justice of the policeman.

'Only a few cents,' said Skelling.

Discharged,' said the Justice.

Higgins was leaving the room smiling and closely followed by Skelling when the court officer told the Justice that the prisoner had $900 in his pocket when he was arrested.

'Bring that man and policeman back' ordered Justice Power. Did I not understand you to say, Officer Skelling, that your prisoner had but a few cents?'

'Yes, sir.'

'How much money' (addressing the prisoner) 'have you now?'

'Forty-five dollars and some cents.' was the reply.

'You will pay the Clerk $10, and, officer, leave your name with the Clerk.'

THE DETECTIVE PINKERTON.

Many of the stories told of Allen Pinkerton, the great detective who lately died in Chicago, are characteristic of the man. Among others it is said that when the Michigan Central railroad first started there was a good deal of opposition among farmers and others. Trains were wrecked repeatedly, and the opportunity for plunder attracted the worst characters of the country. Allen Pinkerton was sent for, and undertook in person to ferret out the guilty parties. He finally learned of a plot to wreck a certain train. Repairing to the spot after night he found a culvert where he concealed himself. Groping in around in the darkness, he found several crowbars and knew then that he was in the right place. He had been waiting for hours when three men approached the culvert. Pinkerton had doubled himself up in a corner to remain undiscovered. The men took the crowbars and proceeded to tear up the track. Single handed as he was, he followed the men and declared them to be his prisoners. In the dark of the night, the pistols were whipped out and a fight begun, in which Pinkerton killed two men and wounded the third, who escaped in the darkness. Hardly had Pinkerton ascertained that none of the rails were yet displaced when the train thundered by in safety. That was the last organized attempt at train wrecking.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Ralfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE CHIEF Tory organ thinks it disloyal to Belleville because we hazard the assertion that the High Taxation policy has done us no good. The same organ abuses the Liberals of England because they declare against their system of government as regards the hereditary power of the House of Lords. Are not the English fouling their own nest?

AN ASSOCIATION of Canadian Etchers has been formed in the City of Toronto, having as its object the advancement of original etching in Canada, by periodical meetings and exhibitions. The intention is to meet together in a friendly and social way, at least once a fortnight, at which time members may advance each other and the art by mutual criticism It is proposed to hold a winter exhibition.

AFTER ALL, as Sir John's supporters are Tories first and Canadians afterwards, it is not at all probable that the collapse of the N. P. or his disastrous defeat on the boundary and other questions will jeopardize his control of the political loaves and fishes.—The Week. Won't they. The days of corrupt government in Canada are numbered and a rally round the Chieftain isn't going to postpone the inevitable.

OUR ESTEEMED local contemporary squirms a good deal over our exposure of its hollow defence of the policy of high taxation as applied to this city. We will ask the organ if, prior to 1878, it did not shed great tears over the condition of Belleville's industries? The reply will be, "Oh yes we did, but the industries were terribly depressed." Just so, and the industries of the whole country may be so described to day, and Belleville is no exception.

E. A. BLOODGOOD, a woman, protests in the August Lippincott against the extension of the suffrage to her sex. She is very plain-spoken and declares that if the time ever comes when women will receive the reins of government, "we shall see the peculiar failings and faults of which women have their share made the medium of inevitable public disaster. We shall see a country ruled by impulse, and the doing of right or wrong, justice or injustice, decided by a headache or a fit of hysterics." This is terrible if true.

THE NEW model creamery now being constructed at the Ontario Agricultural College, at Guelph, is nearly ready for work. The system on which the creamery is to be conducted is the Fairlamb system—that of collecting the cream only from the farmers, thus leaving them the skim-milk for their stock. Any other plan would be impracticable in a stock-raising country such as that of which Guelph is the centre. Mr. J. H. Wanzer, of Darlington (Wis), who furnished the plans, will pay the College a visit soon to see that operations are properly begun. A building formerly used as a cheese factory is being remodelled for occupation as a creamery, and the expense will be minimized.

THE Winnipeg Sun, an avowedly independent journal, in regretting Mr. Blake's inability to carry out his proposed visit to Manitoba says:—"Mr. Blake would have been able to see for himself how grievously this region has been misgoverned in the past and how disastrously it is affected to-day by the tariff, by the appointment of corrupt and incapable officials, by favoritism in the granting of valuable timber limits and cattle ranches and by the curtailment of its constitutional rights. As he cannot come, we must just trust to him to make himself acquainted with these subjects as best he can, and place reliance also upon those members of his party who have some personal acquaintance with Northwest matters."

THE Tories of West Middlesex maliciously brought 125 charges of electoral corruption against Hon. G. W. Ross who redeemed West Middlesex for Mr. Mowat and good government. Half of these charges were of a personal character. When the court investigated the charges not one of them could be sustained; they were totally foundationless. In fact the only cases of corruption brought out in evidence were shown to be on the side of the Conservatives, a number of witnesses confessing that they had been offered sums varying from $10 upwards, if they would vote for the Conservative candidate. This is another election record clearly showing the different methods of carrying constituencies practised by the Liberal and Tory parties. Such a complete vindication of the personal integrity and high character of the Minister of Education must be gratifying to his many warm admirers of all shades of thought.

A THIEF IN A COFFIN.

Carried into the Church Which he Tries to rob.

City of Mexico, July 31.—This town, the scene of many peculiar crimes, is just now agog over the performances of a thief, which are generally admitted to pass anything on record. A few days ago several men went to the priest in charge of the Santa Cruz Church in this city and asked permission to hold funeral services over the remains of a deceased friend at four o'clock the next morning. There was nothing unusual in the request, for many people in the country bury their dead early in the morning before mass, and the priest gave his permission agreeing to be present. The men said they would like to leave the corpse in the church over night, and to this the clergyman also assented. Some time after dark the men appeared at the church bearing a coffin, which they carried up the main aisle and deposited in front of the altar. They then withdrew promising to be there early next morning.

About midnight the sacristan was awakened by the barking of his dogs, and feeling that something must be wrong, he dressed hastily and stepped from his room into the chancel. A dim light was burning near the altar, by means of which he could see a figure moving slowly on the other side of the chancel. Making up his mind that robbers were in the church he ran quickly to his room for a pistol, and then made a search of the church. No one was to be seen. On the altar he found everything safe, but when he came to examine the images of the saints he soon saw that the costly jewels with which they had been ornamented were gone. He then redoubled his efforts to find the thief, but after half an hour passed in searching every nook of the great edifice, he was more mystified than ever, for he not only could not find the offender, but he could discover no place where he could have come in or gone out. Just before he determined to give the alarm he thought of the corpse lying down below the rail in the shadow, and the idea came to him that perhaps there might be something wrong about it. Lighting a candle, he stepped softly to the bier and peered into the face of the supposed dead man. As he looked he noticed that the eyelids of the "corpse" twitched nervously under the light, and at the same instant his own eyes fell on some of the glittering jewels which lay beside the man in the coffin.

Overjoyed at finding the thief, the sacristan thrust his revolver into the face of the "corpse," and ordered him to get out. The cold steel on the man's forehead convinced him that the order must be obeyed and a most extraordinary resurrection took place then and there. When the man had gained his feet the sacristan, still covering him with his pistol, gathered up the jewels and then marched the culprit to the priest's house, where he was turned over to the police. Several soldiers were then stationed in the church, and when the thief's confederates arrived in the morning they were taken into custody. At first they denied all knowledge of the conspiracy but after a little one of them confessed and told the whole story. He said they intended to go through the forms of a funeral ceremony and then carry their friend out to the cemetery, and after letting him out of the coffin, bury it and leave the country as readily as possible. They will be severely punished.

ITALIAN ROUGHS.

A band of Poe's enemies took food and drink outside the walls of Rome on a Sunday and then entered town through the Angelic gate, within a stone's throw of the Vatican. On seing the police and the soldiers guarding the Vatican entrance, the band of fire-eaters shouted: 'Spies, assassins, death, away with them!" and set to work caning them and stripping off their cockades and epaulets, but were figally arrested and imprisoned. Such rows are frequent in the neighborhood of the Vatican, and Leo XIII should certainly be attacked by the roughs if he entered the streets.

OBJECTIONS TO MOTHER HUBBARD.

A MARRIAGE JOURNAL.

Though there does not seem to be room for another "society" journal in London, a new candidate for public favor is announced. The name of the paper, 'Orange Blossoms: a Marriage Chronicle and Social Review,' sufficiently indicates its character. One feature which the proprietor proposes to introduce is the regular reproduction of photographs of fashionable brides.

A pretty, modest-looking dress for one of those gray days so frequent in the summer is of gray nun's veiling, so far as the skirt and pouf are concerned, while the bodice is of thin taffeta black silk, with tiny white stripes, opening on a gray waistcoat. A gray blonde fichu passes under the basques of the bodice in front and is knotted behind, thus forming on the sides tiny lace paniers. The high crowned gray straw hat is trimmed with white and black braid.

Here is a sweet ball dress. The short skirt is made entirely of fluffy plaits of white tulle, enclosed in front by an ample tulle veil, embroidered with white and silver thistles. An ivory poult-de-soie second skirt, very short indeed, forms tiny paniers, and is bordered by a wreath of small roses with velvet foliage of a brown tint. The bodice is of ivory poult-de-soie, with drapery of tulle embroidered with miniature silver thistles. Is not that a poetic gown?—London Truth.

LADY DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.

In announcing a few days ago that a lady had for the first time gained the degree of Master of Arts in an English university, we stated that no lady had yet attained the doctorate. The period before the achievement of this additional honor was destined, however, to be very brief. The London University can now boast of a lady Doctor of Science, Mrs. Sophia Bryant, assistant mistress in the North London Collegiate School for Ladies, Camden road, a school which has been so long conducted under the superintendence of Miss Buss.—London, Eng. paper.

WOMAN'S SIXTH SENSE.

Here is a singular instance, says the Boston Courier, of the working of that subtle, fine sixth sense, which is apt to affect women more than men, and which is so mysterious in character that we often incline to deny its existence at all. A lady sat sewing quietly in her sitting room, and in an inner chamber the nurse had just put the baby to sleep and laid her in her basinette. As the nurse came out of the chamber she said to her mistress:

'The little thing is asleep for three hours, ma'am, I'll warrant.'

The nurse went down stairs, and for a about a minute the mother sewed on. Suddenly a desire seized her to go and take the sleeping child from her crib.

"What nonsense" she said to herself. "Baby is sound asleep. Nurse just put her down. I shall not go."

Instantly, however, some power stronger even than the last, urged the mother to go to her baby, and, after a moment, she rose, half vexed with herself, and went to her chamber. The baby was asleep in her little bed, safely tucked in with soft white and pink blankets. One small hand was thrown above the little brown head. It was half open, the exquisite fingers slightly curved, and the palm as rosy as the depths of a lovely shell.

"My baby!" whispered the mother adoring the little sleeper as mothers will. "My own, little baby!"

She bent over suddenly a third time, impelled by that mysterious force which was controlling her, and, for no apparent reason, took the sleeping baby in her arms and went swiftly into the other room. She had scarcely crossed the threshold when a startling sound caused her to look back. Through a stifling cloud of thick gray dust she saw that the ceiling above baby's cradle had fallen, burying the heaps of rosy blankets, and lying heaviest of all upon that spot where, but for her mystic warning, her little child would even now be lying.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are, terribly exhausting of vital stamina. Its true specific is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies, female ailments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

SALVATION ARMY SCANDAL.

TORONTO, Aug. 19.—The commander of the Salvation forces in Parkdale, an ex-barber of Stayner, Lieut. Adamson, is in disgrace, have been discovered in a too intimate acquaintance with a couple of the female warriors. As the scandal is freely talked about and canvassed it is alleged that others are equally guilty, and that the uniformed young men in the corps are dyed in systematic sin. It is not improbable that more revelations will see the light shortly.

AN ALMOST FATAL ACCIDENT.

A serious, if not fatal accident occurred on the schooner Delaware yesterday afternoon, while lying at Downey & Preston's dock. The cargo of coal having been discharge W. Bartley, a son of the captain, and the mate were engaged sweeping the deck, when they began playfully striking each other with their brooms. Bartley's heels struck the comings of the hatchway, and he fell in the hold a distance of ten feet, lighting on his neck and shoulders in the bottom of the vessel. Dr. Willson was summoned and he gave it as his opinion that the spine had been injured. The wounded man was taken to his home in Napanee on the Deseronto. Four tenders were received for the construction of the tank as follows:—Thomas Harris, $145,00; James Munley $99; James Robertson $94.50; Patrick Byrnes $104 The lowest tender was accepted on condition that proper sureties should be furnished The city is to supply all the material.

BELLEVILLE'S REGATTA.

The Norah Leads in First and Surprise in Second.

VERVE AND IOLANTHE SECOND.

The half holiday yesterday afternoon was generally observed. About two thousand people attended the regatta at Massassaga, and thoroughly enjoyed their short stay on this beautiful pic-nic ground. There was also an excursion to the Point, from Picton, and a Sunday School pic-nic from here swelled the crowd on the grounds to thousands. The yacht club had the steamer Quinte chartered for the day, and on every trip she brought large crowds of pleasure seekers and interested yachtsmen from the city. But it was a poor day for a yacht race. The wind was light and variable and there was not sufficient closeness in any of the first-class yachts to arouse the faintest enthusiasm on the part of the onlookers.

THE FIRST CLASS RACE.

There were four entries in this class, viz:—Norah, of Belleville; Aileen and Verve, of Toronto: and Garfield of Kingston. The start was made a few minutes before one o'clock, the Belleville boat leading. The light breeze off the north shore was barely sufficient to fill the sails as the yachts headed for the buoy off the Prince Edward Shore. The Norah gradually increased her lead until on arriving again at the starting buoy she was ahead of the others twenty minutes. With a fine spread of canvas and Billy Black at the tiller there was now no doubt of the result of the race, and the Norah won easily. The Verve and the Aileen were working hard for second place, but the wind was not strong enough for the cutter and the former took second money. The Garfield, a light weather boat, was not handled apparently as well as she might have been, hence she lost a place in the race. On the first round she lost her square sail boom and on the second turn her gaff topsail stay and afterwards her balloon jib. She was second in rounding the home buoy after the first ten miles, but on the second round in nearing the buoy off the north shore she got becalmed for a while, as did the Gracie at the same place. On the last round she closed the gap between her and the Toronto yacht considerably, but it was too late. The owner of the handsome yacht Norah and the crew who sailed her are entitled to the greatest praise for the magnificent race they sailed. Besides winning first money Mr. Bell also won the challenge flag of the Club held by the Cygnet.

The following is the time:

The yachts turned the starting buoy on the first round as follows:

Norah	2:16
Verve	3:09:50
Aileen	3:10:50
Garfield	3:21:40

On the second round at this buoy the Norah led the Aileen by about 25 minutes. The Verve was close after them. As the Garfield turned the starting point the Norah was on the home stretch.

	START.	FINISH.	ELAPSED
Norah	12:57:30	5:34:30	4:37:00
Verve	12:58:26	6:27:54	5:29:28
Garfield	1:01:36½	6:38:41	5:37:04½
Aileen	1:01:44	6:15:10	5:13:26

The Norah beat the Aileen 36m. 26 sec; the Aileen beat the Verve 16 min. 2 sec., but having to allow her tonnage the Verve won second place. The Verve beat the Garfield 7 min. 36½ sec.

SECOND CLASS CONTEST.

In this race there were four entries, Iolanthe and Gracie, of Belleville, Surprise of Trenton, and Laura, of Kingston. They are all pretty evenly matched, and in a light wind any one of them has an equal chance of winning. The Iolanthe, of course, is the fastest boat with a fair breeze, and even yesterday no one expected the Surprise would capture first money. The race was very close throughout. The start was made about twenty minutes after those in the first class, and before the second buoy off the Shannonville river was rounded the Iolanthe was second to the Norah, but she lost the wind here for some time while Capt. Cuthbert on the Surprise was luckily favored with occasional "puffs" which sent him along at a lively rate, The Iolanthe, however, continued to lead, but having to allow the others tonnage, she failed to win first money. The race was an exceedingly close one, taking into account the tonnage allowance.

The score is as follows:

The yachts made the first round as follows:

Iolanthe	3:07:20
Surprise	3:10:00
Laura	3:15:30
Gracie	3:20:30

	START.	FINISH.	ELAPSED
Iolanthe	1:18:00	4:49:00	3:31:00
Laura	1:18:35½	4:50:23	3:31:47½
Gracie	1:18:49½	4:59:22	3:40:32½
Surprise	1:19:09½	4:51:52½	3:32:43½

The Iolanthe, allowing tonnage allowance, won second money by six seconds. The Laura got third place.

The Iolanthe beat the Laura 47½ seconds and the Laura beat the Surprise 55½ seconds. The Surprise beat the Gracie 7m. 49 sec.

THE DINNER IN THE EVENING.

In the evening the yacht club entertained the yachtsmen from abroad at a complimentary dinner at the Dafoe House, which was attended by seventy-five in all. The dinner was prepared in first-class style and those present discussed the menu with a hearty relish for nearly an hour. Commodore Biggar occupied the chair and Capt. R. M. Roy the vice chair. Among those present were Mayor Richardson of Trenton, Commodore Curtis of the Kingston club, Col. Lazier, W. Webster, J. L. Biggar, D. B. Robertson, city clerk, and other prominent citizens and yachtmen from Toronto and Kingston. After the toast of the Queen the Commodore called upon Mr. R. J. Bell, of the Norah, to accept the first prize in the first class race. This announcement was followed by deafening cheers Mr. Bell in accepting the prize and the flag expressed the wish that the challenge flag would remain here in the future, "for" he said, "in the past we have only seen it on the day of the regatta." The Norah had not sailed so well in the past two years as he would like, but those who witnessed the race that day must be convinced that the Norah was in her proper element. He expressed a desire that the Lake Yacht Racing Association would continue to prosper and become a thorough organization. Mr. Black, sailing master of the Norah made a few remarks, stating that for the third time he had won the championship flag of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

Mr. Evans accepted the money on behalf of the Verve, winner of the second prize. He hoped that next year the Association would appoint an officer to measure all the yachts whose certificate would be above suspicion by all yacht owners around the lakes. Capt. Miles of the Aileen accepted the third prize. Mayor Richarson of the Surprise was awarded first prize in the second class race and made an appropriate speech. He spoke very highly of Capt. Cuthbert's skill as a builder and proposed a toast in his honor which was drank with considerable enthusiasm. The Commodore then exhibited the Fisher Cup won by the Atalanta, one of Capt. Cuthbert's boats, at Chicago two years ago, which called for an outburst of applause. The veteran yachtman acknowledged the honor thus done him in a brief address. The toast of "our visiting yachtmen" was responded to by Commodore Curtis (Garfield), Manly (Aileen), Evans (Verve), Robertson, King, and A. Horn (Laura). Richardson (Surprise). Messrs. A. Spangenberg and S. R. Balkwill sang, and after one or two additional toasts the company broke up shortly after twelve o'clock.

From the evident tokens of earnestness of purpose and depth of enthusiasm which characterised the first anniversary proceedings of the Church of England Purity Society last week, says a correspondent of the Record, we are amply justified in prophesying for that body a place amongst such organizations commensurate with the gigantic nature of the evil it seeks to combat.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

WHITBY, Aug. 9.—At five o'clock yesterday afternoon, while clearing up after his day's work in King's tannery, Henry Dalby, an apprentice, aged 17, carelessly placed his left hand on a four-inch belt and his arm was drawn around by the revolving pully. The thumb and tendons to the elbow were torn off and the arm broken at the wrist. But for the prompt action of a fellow workman in stopping the machinery the results would have been fatal. On being taken to his father's residence on Dundas street East, strange to say, it was found that a stranger who was taken sick there had died that same afternoon.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctor told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, 3 bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by B. Templeton.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without stomach medication by the Marston Treatment. effective, cheap, pleasant. cheap. Send for sealed treatise. MARSTON REMEDY CO., 91 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the

Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND's farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND's direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used

for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask for the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other. y 2m&w

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Missy Julie, that put me all in a tremble I thought of nothing but you; and opening the door I crept down the stairs and out into the verandah to him.'

'Yes; go on,' interrupted the Creole for the first time.

Her countenance was eager—her tones anxious.

'What did he say?'

'That after you left New Orleans yesterday, a horrible rumour had reached him about you Miss Julie. He didn't believe it true—he wouldn't. Still he couldn't help coming here to watch, and offer his help should trouble arrive.'

'Did he say no more?' demanded the Creole.

'Yes, Missy Julie, that he had already warned you as far as he dared.'

'He did; I owe him much for that,' murmured Juliette, rather to herself than to the negress. 'Go on Keziah.'

'He told me Missy, to, watch and, should distress come to you after the signing of those papers to give you this letter.'

'And you did watch?'

'I did Missy Julie. He said it was for your good. I was in the verandah all the time.'

The Creole's cheek was crimson.

Her first feeling was indignation; but she recollected that possibly her safety might depend upon Keziah's espionage.

Modifying her tone she demanded, impatiently—

'The letter— where is the letter?'

Fumbling among the folds of her skirts the negress produced it.

'Massa Loring said, Missy Julie,' she remarked, as she handed it, 'that he entreats you to keep his presence at Longueville a secret from all, even Missy Pauline for your safety as well as his.'

Rather irritably the Creole motioned the attendant to be silent, as she received the missive, and moving to a couch near the window, began to peruse it.

Rising from her knees, Keziah drew aside and eagerly watched her.

The expression of her features had totally changed.

Vindictive, cruelly hungry, they let not a single emotion that swept over the splendid features escape.

It was the tiger-cat watching its prey before it pounded on, rent, and devoured it.

The words, however, riveted all Juliette Beauchamp's attention.

She forgot Keziah's vicinity as she read

'DEAR MADAM,—Forgive me; do not let me incur your anger by a comparative strange touching upon a subject so delicate. But I would be your friend, where apparently you need one. I learn my fears are realized. You are in distress—danger; nevertheless, I will save you, if you will permit me, if you will trust me; surely, after the past you may. I know your enemy—a man as wily as he is repulsive and revengeful—a false friend a dangerous foe—a difficult man to outwit. Still give me permission to be your friend and he shall be outwitted. Every portion of the estate is watched by his emmissaries—every portion save one, the walnut grove. Trust me; send me word, a simple consent by your servant, who, I imagine is faithful, and at eleven to-night, swift horses shall be waiting at the grove ready to carry you into a free settlement out of your enemy's grasp. Should you confide in my assistance, will you go alone, or does your sister accompany you? She will scarcely like to remain to face the low-bred fury of such a man as the present owner of Longueville. I entreat you to regard my proposal with favor, when I swear that before to-morrow's dawn you shall be free.

'Yours sympathetically and devotedly,
'S. L.'

Before Juliette had finished the perusal of the above her mind was made up.

She would trust Stuart, Loring.

She had cruelly needed a friend; and lo! Heaven had sent her one whose sincerity, after the past, she could no doubt.

She only hesitated once; that was when she imagined the reason of Stuart Loring's friendship, his love for her.

She shuddered.

The thought of love from any other than Eustace Belmore was abhorrent to her.

Nevertheless, she felt it would be insanity to reject the help he offered, placed as she was.

Besides if he were false, could her destiny be worse than the one now threatening?

She must accept, or remain the slave, the helpless victim of Jabez Scladden.

The latter was not to be thought of.

She would go; and, of course Pauline would accompany her.

She must.

The Creole would not leave her behind to meet and enjoy the presence of Eustace alone.

She hoped however, of her own despair without persuasion, her sister would consent,

For that to be the case she must studiously keep secret the name of her friend Stuart Loring.

Did Pauline learn that, she would never quit Longueville.

She would seek her at once.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

WHY IS IT SO?

Some find work where some find rest,
And so the weary world goes on;
I sometimes wonder what is best,
The answer comes when life is gone.

Some eyes sleep when some eyes wake,
And so the dreary night hours go;
Some hearts beat where some hearts break;
I often wonder why 'tis so.

Some hands folds where other hands
Are lifted bravely in the strife;
And so thro' ages and thro' lands
Move on the two extremes of life.

Some feet halt, while some feet tread,
In tireless march, a thorny way;
Some struggle on where some have fled;
Some seek, where others shun, the fray.

Some sleep on, while others keep
The vigils of the true and brave;
They will not rest till roses creep
Around their names above the grave.

THE PRESS ON THE FRANCHISE DEMONSTRATION.

Yesterday London witnessed a great and imposing spectacle. There have been pageants of greater grandeur, and processions of greater brilliancy and more elaborate display, but the spectacle of yesterday was unique of its kind. It was a demonstration made by the people and for the people, and it exhibited every sign of spontaneity and enthusiasm. There are those who doubt the sincerity of demonstrations of this kind and question their expediency. These men were no roughs paid to shout at the word of command; they were no idlers gathered together to enjoy a holiday or an outing. The vast bodies which occupied and marched through the streets could not have been controlled by arbitrary authority, and any attempt to exercise such authority must have resulted in collision and confusion, and very possibly in serious disaster. No such attempt was made and the people, in consequence, controlled themselves. All was spontaneous, all was orderly, all was was good humored, and though the political significance may be more depreciated and misrepresented, its moral effect was unmistakable and immense.—Times (Ind Jingo).

THE AIR OF FREE MEN.

There can be no shadow of doubt that the demonstration of yesterday in London has proved a great and signal success. We declare it, without any hesitation, to be the most remarkable and imposing ever witnessed during the present reign in the metropolis, were it only on the score of the large numbers who took patient part in the procession, and the enormous concourse of spectators who with equal patience watched their slow and steady march to the Park. Dull, indeed, or hopelessly prejudiced, must that Englishman have been who, whatever his way of political thinking, could gaze upon so vast a company of his fellow-countrymen and not feel proud of their energy, order, and sobriety, and self-restraint. A drunken man was not to be seen, nor was coarse language heard; and there was no malignancy, though there was plenty of shrewd mother-wit current, and pungent political remarks. The people had the air of free men about them—the manner of those who are well assured that none but themselves can be their real enemies.—Telegraph (Lib. Con)

THE BOY.

"WITH ALL HIS FAULTS WE LOVE HIM STILL."

What an honest animal a boy is, anyhow, says the Burlington Hawkeye, What mean things he can do; what cruel tricks he can play on a fellow; how generous are his impulses; how brave and manly the better side of his nature; how much of his badness is pure thoughtlessness, the heedlessness of a young colt; under his noisy, rough, boisterous, turbulent surface what a sensitive shrinking heart there is, proud ambitious, timid, foolishly ashamed to show its better impulses, fearful that you may discover its ambitious dreams; he loves a boy who will make the longest jump or run the swiftest, and he hates with equal fury a sneak and a bully; he will throw off his coat and jump into a fight and take a 'licking' any time for a friend, and will walk around two blocks out of his way rather than meet a girl to whom he will be expected to speak; as different when you get him alone from what he is in a crowd, that you think he may be two entirely different boys. A strange, honest capracious, tender-hearted, tyrranical, loving, cruel, thoughtless, dreaming, shouting, complex animal, this boy of ours. Often badly taught, worse trained, half-deciplined, whipped and petted scolded and carressed, he tries our patience, destroys our quiet, wastes our money, wrings our hearts, neglects us, loves us, understands us better many times than we understand him, and we chide him to his face and praise him to our hearts; we follow him, humor him, and love him, love him, love him—God bless the boy, how we do love him.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 20th, 1884,

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Blafe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE COTTON INDUSTRY.

The manufacturers of white cottons have decided upon the course they will pursue to overcome the evils of over-production. They have determined to export their surplus stock, or, at least, to experiment with that end in view. A shipment of white cottons has been made to England, where they are to be sold to the best advantage. Commenting on this the Montreal Witness says there are Canadian manufacturers who are protected against English manufactures by about thirty per cent duties actually shipping goods to England, at a time when cotton goods are extremely low in price in England as well as elsewhere These Canadian goods will be sold in England at a lower price retail than they can be bought for wholesale, or even manufactured at, in Canada. But the worst is not yet told. Canadians pay these mills large subsidies in the form of duties and the mills sell to outsiders at a lower price than to those who subsidize them. Canadians are actually paying money in order to sell English people cotton cloths cheaper than they can make them themselves, Why do our manufacturers sell at lower figures to English people than to Canadians. Because, in their own words, they do not want "to break the home market, upon which they are dependent for their profit." This means that they make Canadians pay not only a profit upon the goods they themselves consume, but they hope to make them pay a high enough price to make up the losses incurred by selling goods below cost in England.

The following statements are found in the Montreal Star, a good N. P. organ: "The condition of the cotton and woollen trade is causing great anxiety in commercial circles. A gentleman who is conversant with the matter says the trade is very much worse than it was twelve months ago. The production of cotton and woollen goods has been more than equal to the demand, while large stocks that were held a year ago have not been decreased, but are if anything larger than they were at that period The travellers who are out on the road report that large stocks have been carried over by retailers from last year, which circumstance affords no hope of a large increase in the fall consumption. The manager of an eastern cotton mill in referring to the trade, says that he never saw such a collapse in anything as there has been in the cotton industry for the last twelve months. When his factory started they were selling cotton cloth for 26c and 27c per pound. To-day they were glad to get rid of some goods which were now a drug on the market at 19c and 20c. Raw material too is costing 1c. per pound more than it did a month ago.

TWO HOME-COMINGS.

The news is published that Sir David Macpherson—we are getting used to it now—is coming home. He is not the same man he was when he left us. Not by any means. He returns if not an "armed warrior" at least "a plumed knight," though what all this fuss and feathers is about no one seems to know. There is another home-coming of a man who, however, returns without any nickle-plated handle to his name, having no alphabetical abridgment attached to his patronymic. But he has earned a title to undying fame. Oliver Mowat, Premier of Ontario and Defender of her Rights will live in history as Ontario's best friend and faithful advocate, a man whom the people, the common people, delight to honor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Letters have been received at Ottawa from the counsel of the Dominion in the recent hearing which as good as give up the boundary case to the province and Mr. Mowat.

Says a correspondent who was present during the argument before the Judicial Committee:—It was quite evident before the close of the hearing that the Committee had a strong opinion that the awarded boundaries were, on the whole, just and right, and that there was no solid reason why the award should have been objected to. So the award is upheld and the high characters of the arbitrators who, Mr. Dalton McCarthy said, passed it in a day over a bottle of wine, vindicated.

Samuel Galvin, aged 18, was convicted in New York Tuesday, of deliberately arming himself and shooting a personal enemy in a public street three times, wounding him dangerously. At the trial, Col. Fellows, the assistant district attorney, made an eloquent address, in which he attacked dime novel literature, blood curdling dramas and the exhibition of "wild western life," so called, which were recently given in that city, wherein mounted cowboys and Indians fought sham battles. He asserted that the effect of such shows was to implant in youthful spectators burning desires to inflict injury for revenge.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns. and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

DEFENCE OF CLEVELAND.

The Scandal as Viewed by the Governor's Supporters.

WHAT THE CANDIDATE SAYS.

New York Evening Post.

The Boston Journal, which has had a great deal to say about what is called ',the Cleveland Scandal,' asks us to investigate the matter for ourselves, and says it 'knows it can lead to only one result,' relying on our promise not to 'support a notorious libertine and profligate' as a candidate for the presidency of the United States. There has been from the beginning but little to investigate, and that little we have investigated to our own satisfaction. It is admitted by Gov, Cleveland's friends that twelve years ago he formed an irregular connection with a widow, with two children, the eldest 14 years old; that she was a person of intemperate habits, and that the paternity of a child born subsequently was doubtful, but he accepted it, and made provisions for the child; that after suffering much annoyance from her—one of the natural and common penalties of such errors—and after satisfying her brother-in-law, who appeared on the scene as her protector, that he had behaved fairly toward her, he laid the whole matter before Mr. Burroughes, a lawyer of high standing in Buffalo; that Mr. Burroughes advised him to leave it to him, and thereafter took charge of it: that he (Mr. Burroughes), conceiving the mother, for the reason given above, unfit to have the custody of the child, placed it in an orphan asylum, the mother consenting thereto, and making, as we understand it, a legal surrender of the child for that purpose, and occasionally visiting it at the asylum afterward; that she subsequently stole and carried it off from the asylum; that Mr. Burroughes was notified of the facts by the authorities of the asylum; whereupon, acting on his own responsibility and without Mr. Cleveland's knowledge, he employed a detective to discover and look after the child; that in one of the detective's visits he found the mother suffering from delirium tremens, and threatening to kill the child, which lay on the floor; that he carried her off then to the Inebriate Asylum for treatment, and she stayed there until she was cured, and no longer, and that the child was restored to its previous guardians. The lawyer who acted for the woman in one stage of the affair has formally and it writing repudiated any charge of seduction or breach of promise of any kind. The family acknowledge that Mr. Cleveland treated her generously. So much for the charge of seduction and kidnapping which many newspapers have been spreading.

'Well, but,' we shall be asked, 'does not the charge against Cleveland, as yourselves state and admit it, disqualify him, in your estimation, for the Presidency of the United States?' We answer frankly:—'Yes, if his opponent be free from this taint, and as good a man in all other ways.' We should like to see candidates for the Presidency models of all the virtues, pure as the snow, and steadfast as the eternal hills. But, when the alternative is a man of whom, as the Buffalo Express, a political opponent, said immediately after his nomination, 'that the people of Buffalo had known him as one of their worthiest citizens, one of their manliest men, faithful to his clients, faithful to his friends, and faithful to every public trust,' and of whom the Buffalo Commercial, another political opponent said, that in opposing him 'it would not detract one jot or title from the well-earned fame of the distinguished gentleman who honored the opposition by bearing its standard,' a good son and good brother, and unmarried in order that he might be the better son and brother, against whom nothing can be said except that he has not been proof against one of the most powerful temptations by which human nature is assailed. Then we say emphatically no, ten thousand times no. We should be ashamed of ourselves if we had any other answer to make, and are shocked and amazed to hear that there are scores of clergymen all over the country advising people who care for morality to choose the trickster and jobber because he is chaste before the honest man, faithful to every public trust, because he has been weak before a passion of which everybody knows the force.

We had supposed the reason of this was so obvious that it did not need to be stated. Cleveland's virtues are those which bind human society together and in which States are founded and maintained. There has been no great benefactor of the human race who has not been truthful, faithful to his trusts, disinterested, self-denying. There are very few who have been chaste. Blaine's vices are those by which governments are overthrown. States brought to naught. and the haunts of commerce turned into dens of theives. The standard by which some ministers now propose to exclude Cleveland from high place would have prevented Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, Hamilton, not to go further, from taking any prominent part in the foundation of the American republic. It would have excluded from office in England nearly every great statesman and reformer of the last hundred years except, perhaps, Romilly, Wilberforce, and Gladstone. It would have visited nearly every prominent politician in the Republican party since 1860 with popular odium. It would, had the Democrats choosen to apply it, have defeated one Republican candidate for the Presidency by charges worse by far than Cleveland's, in that they added the sin of broken vows to the sin of incontinence.

We are not defending incontinence. Chastity is a great virtue, but every man knows in his heart that it is not the greatest of virtues, that the offenses against it have often been consistent with the possession of all the qualities which ennoble human nature and dignify human life and make human progress possible. It ought to be preached and practised by every man to the utmost of his ability, but no one ought to preach it with any other motive than the spread of virtue. We will not for our part help the Republican party at this crsis in an attempt to capture the Presidency for a trickster, as Joshua captured Jericho, by the aid of a harlot. Great as its faults are it deserves a less ignominious end than this.

WHAT CLEVELAND SAYS ABOUT IT.

General Horatio King, whose report of what he learned in Buffalo led to Mr. Beecher's return to Governor Cleveland's support, said to a reporter:—'After leaving Buffalo I went to Albany and saw Governor Cleveland. He frankly told me that my version of the stories was substantially correct, adding, 'I acted throughout as any honorable man should.'

AN EARTHQUAKE SHOCK.

FRIGHTENED NEW YORKERS FLEE FROM THEIR HOUSES.

New York, Aug. 10.—A few minutes after 2 this afternoon this city and the vicinity was startled by an earthquake lasting ten seconds. The sensation caused by it was so unusual and the shock so all pervading that a universal panic seized the population. The first impression that took possession of the people was that their houses were about to fall. They ran into the streets terror-stricken and with blanched faces, only to discover that all their neighbors were rushing out amazed and panic-stricken like themselves. As there no evidences of catastrophe confidence returned, but many people remained in front of their house for some time, dreading a second shock. None, however, came. The first intimation of the earthquake was a low rumbling sound, followed by a shock like that of a violent explosion, which caused the buildings to quiver. The rattling continued about eight seconds. The effect of the jar was much more perceptible in houses of light structure. In many instances a clearly defined rocking movement was felt, and dishes were shaken from the shelves. No damage of any kind has been reported. As far as ascertained the shock was entirely imperceptible on the water, and no tidal wave was observed here.

EATING HIS COMPANION.

A HORRIBLE STORY OF STARVATION AND CANNIBALISM.

A Winnipeg Man., despatch says:—W. C. McBridge, of Chicago, who has arrived here from a trip to the Rockies, brings word that a man named William Owens, a California miner, was found by some of the railway navvies near Kicking Horse River a few days ago in a famished and partially demented condition. Owens says he started on June 18th with Joseph Williamson from Kamloops on a prospecting trip expecting to strike the Columbia River, but their supply of provisions gave out before reaching there, They travelled six and a half without food, then Williamson lay down and died. Owen cut flesh from his companion's legs, which he ate, and proceeded on his tramp. He had been living for six days on human flesh when found, and still had a quantity of dried flesh in an old handkerchief. He was very weak and emaciated and told his story with difficulty. He repeated the horrible details on several occasions, and all who heard him are convinced the story is true. He had a large roll of bills with him. The police have taken the matter in hand and will investigate it.

A Brantford despatch says:—Chas. Moe boot and shoe merchant, of Toronto, was arrested here on Thursday night by Chief Griffiths on the strength of telegrams received from Toronto. It is said that Mr. Moe was in financial difficulties in Toronto, and it is supposed that, to evade these difficulties, he shipped about $3,000 worth of goods to St. George in the name of G. Taylor, and intended to leave the country. These assertions Mr. Moe denies.

REPUDIATING DAVITT.

Dublin, Aug. 11.—Mr. Biggar, M. P. writes as follows to the organizer of a meeting to be held at Monaghan on the 15th, at which Mr. Healy is to address the electors: "If Mr. Davitt is to be present I shall not attend the meeting. I dislike his opinions about naturalization of land and his general conduct in Irish politics, and I shall not in any way countenance him." This letter has caused a genuine sensation among all classes of Irish politicians. Its importance lies in the fact that Biggar is well-known to be the mouthpiece of Mr. Parnell.

Michael Davitt writes that the statement that he is at war with Parnell is a malignant fabrication.

LOCKED IN HER TRUNK.

The Painful Imprisonment of Miss Minnie Figman.

TUMBLED IN HEAD FIRST.

The Grau Opera Company performed 'The Mascotte' at the Park Theatre, Newark, the other night, and at the end of the play Miss. Jennie Pierce heard smothered cries coming from one of the ladies dressing rooms. She called assistance, and upon investigation, the sounds were found to proceed from a large trunk which stood upon the floor securely locked. It was pried open, and in it was found in an almost unconscious condition Miss Minnie Figman one of the company. The trunk is 3 feet 5 inches in height and nearly 5 feet long. I is watertight in order to protect the delicate dresses it contains when the singer is on the road. It was fastened by a new Excelsior spring lock and the lock was so strong that P. B. Coyle, the gas engineer of the theatre, was 15 minutes prying the lid off with a strong iron bar.

Miss Figman was unconscious when she was lifted out of the trunk. She was so nearly smothered that it was feared for a few minutes she would not recover. Manager Gray hastily called a physician, who administered restoratives.

'I was putting some articles of my wardrobe in the corner of my trunk.' Miss Figman explained, 'and I suddenly tipped over and fell in headforemost. I was terribly frightenrd by the bump my head got on the bottom, but I squirmed around and raised my head. Just then I saw the heavy lid falling, and I gave a loud scream which was fortunately heard by Miss Pierce. The next instant the lid struck me on the head. I fell back unconscious, and the spring closed back with a snap, so Miss Pierce said.

'They could not find the key of the trunk, and knowing that I must have air, Mr. Coyle bored augur holes in the trunk. I know nothing of what was done of my own knowledge, for I did not recover consciousness until they carried me into the green room.

A LIFE FOR A HAT.

Niagara Falls, Aug. 9.—Charles Reilly, brakeman on the M. C. R., running a freight between Montrose Yards and here, had both his legs cut off between the knees and ankles. It seems a passenger going west on the Pacific Express lost his hat after the train had left this station, and Reilly, with his companion, was sitting on the rear of the tender on the engine watching for the lost hat. When approaching it they both made for it, and in Reilly's hurry to get off first he stumbled and fell below the wheels the tender passing over both legs. The doctors in attendance have but little hopes of his recovery. He was 19 years of age, unmarried.

AN ERRING BARTON GIRL.

Milton, Aug. 9.—Chief Constable Bradley, having received from Chief Stewart, of Hamilton, a description of a 16 year Barton township girl named Mary Wilkins, who had eloped with a married man, and who had, it was supposed, come to this neighborhood, made inquiries and found the girl working for a Trafalgar farmer a few miles from Milton, while her parmour was working on an other farm a short distance away. The following from Belleville is taken from a number of the returns received by the Provincial Board of Health from the municipal and health officers:—"There is no Medical Health Officer, but an Inspector has been appointed, and has made a systematic health inspection of the municipality. AFTER THIRTEEN YEARS

Rev. Dr. Badgley Bids Farewell to Belleville.

SERMON IN THE TABERNACLE.

Rev. Dr. Badgley, who is about leaving to accept a professorial position in Victoria College, yesterday morning preached his farewell sermon in the Tabernacle before a large congregation, very many being Presbyterians in whose high regard the rev. gentleman stands. His text was, "Who has abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."—II Timothy 1, 10. He pointed out in an eloquent discourse the sensibility of man's nature to God's teachings and besought them to yield to the influences of the great Physician, whose power is over all. In conclusion he made a personal reference to his departure from Belleville where he has made thousands of friends and where he will always be remembered as a conscientious and christian gentleman. "I leave Belleville" he said, "with no ill feeling towards anyone. Converted in the old Methodist Episcopal church some thirteen years ago I have spent the best days of my life in the service of the Lord, and now that the time has come to leave this city, I feel that I will long remember the associations formed here by myself and family. Shakespere has said, "The evil men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." I hope my faults will be overlooked and that instead the good I have done will live after me and the evil interred with my bones. I hope you will forget the failings of myself and family and remember only the virtues of our life. In the same spirit I will try and forget yours. I shall go from this city with charity towards all, with a kind love towards all and with a hard feeling towards none; and in the time to come I trust we will all enjoy a meeting around the throne of grace During my thirteen years service in the church I have been in the pulpit on an average every second Sunday which was nearly as much as if I had been discharging ordinary ministerial duties, and it was on this account that I found myself unable to attend more frequently the social means of grace. Some have found fault with me owing to that; but the man who lives without enemies, is no man at all. I believe my labors have not been in vain in this respect and in leaving you I trust you will remember us in future at the throne of divine grace."

THE BIG DEMONSTRATION.

The grandest celebration ever witnessed in the Bay of Quinte district will be held in Belleville on the 18th inst., the date of the civic holiday, under the auspices of the Knights of Labor. There will be a procession in the morning, a picnic in the park after dinner, at which liberal prizes will be offered for games and athletic sports, and in the evening the celebration will conclude with a torch-light procession, a display of fireworks and an assembly. At the park addresses will be delivered by prominent speakers. Reduced fares on all railways and steamboats.

SPOKES FROM THE WHEEL.

The program for the grand racing tournament on the Civic Holiday will be out to-morrow. It comprises ten events which will be participated in by a much larger number than at the last meet. These events include an obstacle race and one without hands for the first time in the city. Mr. Treasurer W. P. Way has signified his generous intention of giving two medals for one of the races.

QUEEN CITY NOTES.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—Lieut. Adamson, of the Salvation Army, against whom charges of immorality are alleged, states there is no foundation for them.

A man and woman passing under the name of Sloane rented rooms recently on Frederick street. They had two young children with them, One was an infant, four weeks old, whom they constantly ill-treated. Yesterday the pair disappeared, leaving their unfortunate offspring to the charity of the city.

Mrs. Gilkinson and Miss Williams are both enthusiastic warriors in the Salvation Army, but even jealousy will creep into the fold, and these two ladies had a wordy war, which ended in the latter summoning the former to the court. Grossly insulting language was proved against Mrs. Gilkinson and she was fined $1 and costs.

'Is it because your moustache tickles so' she queried archly,

'No,' he said softly, 'it is because a fly likes everything that is sweet.'

'O you're too fly' was the light remark of the blushing damsel as she sought to look into the future.

WHO OWNS THE HORSE?

Exciting Contest at Trenton over Ownership of a Colt.

From our own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Aug. 11.—An interesting horse case was tried at the school house on the York road, a short piece above here, on Saturday, which it is probable will yet result in serious trouble between the parties interested. Some time ago a man named F. Youngs lost a gray colt which had been pasturing on the road about here, and until last Wednesday he had been unable to recover it. On that day he saw a man named Minns, living at Stockdale, driving a gray colt near Frankford, which he thought was the animal he lost. On Thursday in company with Chief of Police Hinde, of Trenton, he went out, and after carefully examining the horse, concluded that it was not his. On Friday Youngs' father drove to Stockdale and took the colt away, Minns not offering any resistance. Minns followed him to Trenton and swore out a warrant for his arrest. At the trial Saturday before Messrs. Young and McCaughey, J.P.'s, there were several witnesses on either side to swear that the horse belonged to their candidate. Among the rest were several women who familiarly referred to the colt as poor Maud or poor Minnie. The court decided that it had no jurisdiction to settle the case, and that Minns would have to seek redress in another court. The Chief of Police put the horse back in Youngs yard. Later on Minns went with a bailiff to seize the colt, but Youngs and the horse had left for parts unknown and have since not been seen.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

J. M. JOHNSON,

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Whatever the consequences,' she thought, rising, the letter grasped in her hand. 'I owe this man greater service than I can ever repay. I will rely upon him.'

As she turned, she beheld Keziah whose presence she had altogether forgotten.

The negress's expression of respectful sympathy had again returned.

'Have you any message for Massa Loring, Missy Julie?' she asked.

'Yes; do you know where to find him? Will he come here?'

'No, Missy Julie, it would not be safe; he fears to be seen by Jabez Scladden. Still he is close at hand,' replied Juliette reassuringly.

'Close at hand?'

'Yes, waiting your answer.'

'And you are to be the bearer?' demanded the Creole. 'How are you to find him when you have my decision?'

'Let Keziah hear it, and Missy Julie shall see. These is little time to waste,' she suggested meaningly; as her keen eyes darted a scrutinizing glance at the Creole.

The latter paused a second.

Did a presentment of the trouble, the misery which was to ensue from this consent vaguely reach her?

If so, it was too vague for effect, and she answered firmly—

'Tell Mr. Loring that I trust him, Keziah, that I accept his help in my need, and with my sister will be at walnut grove at eleven to-night, he may depend on it.'

The negress uttering a hoarse cry of joy flung up her arms, and struck her dusky palms in the air to show her satisfaction.

'Missy Julie, Missy Julie, you are right,' she exclaimed. 'Oh, Keziah could jump with delight. Saved, saved! Come dear Missy Julie, see how I will tell Massa Loring.'

She led the Creole to the window.

'Look,' she said.

She pointed forth in the direction of a hill, crested by a group of walnut trees beyond the boundary of Longueville of which it commanded a complete view.

'I see,' replied Juliette,

'He is there, waiting. Ah, missy, he is a real friend now to tell him you think so.'

Taking a morquito curtain, the negress ostensibly shook it from the window, but in doing so, let it stream fully out on the soft breeze three distinct times.

'That means Missy Julie, that you consent, and will be at the walnut grove at eleven.' remarked Keziah drawing in the curtain. 'Wait; we will see it Massa Loring has rightly understood.'

With curiosity and some anxiety, the Creole kept her eyes riveted on the trees.

Hardly had two seconds passed, when there rose above them a thin column of smoke.

Three times it occurred then all was silent.

'He understands,' exclaimed the negress.

'He does,' responded Juliette, and a chill seemed to creep over her.

Could it be only friendship which made this man take so much trouble about her escape?

Was there no other motive hidden from view?

The momentary suspicion the trepidation was succeeded by the recollection of Jabez Scladden's evil countenance.

It banished all scruples, and she said—

'Good, faithful Keziah, seek my sister, and secretly inform her that I must speak to her at once.'

'Yes, Missy Julie,' answered the negress as she folded the mosquito curtain.

She performed the task as a fisher might who gathered in his net full of the finny tribe, and as she did so she muttered soto voice—

'Caught, caught, Ah, ah! they are safe. No escape now.'

Juliette had resumed her seat on the couch; her forehead rested on her hand.

She was thinking—aye, with a smile—of what?

That out of the direst misery may arise some pleasure as a consolation.

Eustace Belmore might arrive in a day or two, but not to meet Pauline.

He would find them gone, the place deserted and their whereabouts a mystery.

They would be separated for a while longer at least.

'Who can tell what may happen before they again see each other?' she reflected.

May they ever do so?

At the same moment Keziah gliding down the stairs, was with a malicious enjoyment on her ebony countenance, muttering—

'Caught, caught—both. They are in the net, escape is impossible. Before morning, they will be in Massa Loring's power and Keziah will be avenged.'

CHAPTER XXV.

PAULINE CONSENTS—JULIETTE PAYS A SECRET VISIT.

Scarcely five minutes had elapsed before Pauline entered her sister's room, her features full of anxious interrogation.

'What is this Keziah has just whispered me, Juliette,' she exclaimed, in low, joyous accents: 'that you have good news? Can it be?'

'I hope so, dear Pauline,' responded the Creole smiling slightly drawing aside her skirts, she made room for the other beside her. 'But first tell me, you have seen Mr. Folmsbee; what does he say?'

ADVERSSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years."

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."
—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasting giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure See adv't in another column.

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL.

Hide away the callous essay,
Throw the slippers under your bunk,
The muslin fixings, white and dressy,
Fold and lay them in your trunk.

Put on your old—number six—shoe,
And thank the Lord you've graduated.

And learn to wash and bake and weep.

AN ELOPEMENT PREVENTED.

HOW LITTLE LIZZIE ADAMS WAS CAUGHT BY HER FATHER.

A Philadelphia despatch says:—Lizzie Adams, a rather pretty little miss of tender years, lives with her father in Elwood, N. J. The road to the sea shore passes in sight of the house, and for some time it been Lizzie's greatest joy to watch for a manly young brakeman who daily makes the trip to Atlantic City. That the flirtation was gradually ripening into love was discovered by the stern father who forbid his daughter to meet her brakeman lover, but Lizzie met the young man as often as possible. An elopement was finally agreed upon, and the time was fixed for last evening. Miss Lizzie packed some clothing into a bag and, taking this in one hand and a bundle under her arm, she crept away from her father's house and walked to East Elwood, two miles away. When the engineer of the Atlantic City accomodation had reached East Elwood, which is merely a flag station, he saw a young woman running frantically towards his train and signalling him to stop. The engineer applied the brakes, the train ran down the track a few hundred feet, and then came to a stand. Miss Lizzie ran on the rear platform where the brakeman was on the rear platform waiting for her. Joyfully he seized the bag and tossed it aboard. He was just helping the girl on the lower step when two men stepped out. One of them picked up the valise, and addressing the brakeman, said:

'I'll take care of this. You can go on, for the young lady is going home with me.'

It was the girl's father. Mr. Adams had got wind of the elopement, and with an officer, had boarded the train at Elwood, and was on hand just at the right moment. Miss Adams made no objection to returning. The brakeman pulled the bell cord, and in a moment more was whirling rapidly away.

SUNDAY RAILWAY TRAINS.

An interesting discussion on this subject has been renewed in Scotland. The Sunday train question has been fought over and over again in that country, through the press, in the civic councils and the pulpit and on the platform, the advantage remaining with the opponents of the innovation. Of course, there are what may be be called Sunday trains running in Scotland now. Trains leave Scotland for England on Saturday nights, arriving at their destination on Sunday mornings, and vice versa; Edinburgh and Paisly have trains on Sunday morning and evening, each way, with Glasgow, and there are some local trains. But says the Railway News: Generally, except for the English connections, the Scottish railways on Sunday are as much closed as the shops on the street.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shakar Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerly advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Balfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderso, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

"A CONSPICUOUS FAILURE."

The condition to which false cries and political trickery has brought the country leads the Toronto Week to remark :—"Under any other system than government by party for party, the doom of Sir John A. Macdonald's Administration would be sealed. The astute Tory leader went to the country in the last elections with a shibboleth that he foresaw would dazzle a people before whom they saw there was no great political issue, and whose first wish was commercial prosperity. It is unnecessary now to enquire whether the Premier really believed that the "National Policy" would be productive of the results prophesied by its advocates. It is sufficient to remember that the present Dominion Government was elected to office in order that they might carry out pledges to formulate and sustain that policy. Of its utter and conspicuous failure no person can be better aware than Sir John A. Macdonald himself—for even his bitterest enemies have ever credited that gentleman with practical common sense. For months the murmurs of disappointed farmers, disheartened mechanics, and disgusted factory-workers, who were promised a commercial millennium if they voted for the N. P., have testified to their disillusion ; and the unkindest cut of all was the cold-blooded manner in which a leading exponent of the policy virtually acknowledged its failure by cutting down the wages of employees, on the plea that business is not good enough to justify its owners continuing the scale which had been paid for some time past. The deplorable condition of the cotton trade in Montreal and elsewhere is causing serious uneasiness ; in the same place,as in the other leading cities of the Dominion, business men of all kinds are passing through a very serious time ; and now the much-vaunted panacea for all commercial ills receives its coup de grace at the hands of the Globe, whose commissioner—a Conservative, it is understood—on his return from a tour of the principal manufacturing concerns in Canada, is compelled to acknowledge the utter failure of high taxation. Many factories, he reports, are closed or are running short time; employment has become scarce, and a general reduction of wages has taken place since the high tariff came in."

ACCORDING to the Canadian statistical returns,says the N. Y. Sun,the imports of merchandise into Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, and the Northwest Territory from the United States, in 1883, amounted in value to $53,962,994, Our own accounts give the value of United States exports to the same regions at $38,326,696, against imports of $36,994,912, so that in either event the balance of the trade is in our favor.

THE QUEEN'S WILL.

The New York Sun's London special says :—"Labby" is responsible for the statement that the Queen has made a new will. She has certainly plenty of money to give away and certainly plenty of people to grab for it. Prince Albert left at least three million dollars. A miser named Nealed bequeathed to Her Majesty two million and a half dollars, and all her life she has been saving the greater part of her annual income. The demands on her will come from her numerous grandchildren.

THE COMING CARDINALS.

A Rome cable says :—At the coming Papal Consistory the Pope will create nine Cardinals two of whom will be foreigners ; Ganglbauer, the Archbishop of Venice,and Gonzalez, the Archbishop of Seville. The others are Italians :—Tindaro, the present Nuncio at Madrid, who will be called to Rome as a mark of displeasure on the part of the Vatican with Alphonso's government ; Capecelatro, the Archbiscop of Capua ; Celesil, Archbishop of Palermo ; the aged Mgr. Masotja, the famous Capuchin ; and three prelates who are at present Vatican officers, Gari, Laurenzi, and Verga.

Mrs.George Simpson, Toronto, says:"I have suffered severely with corns, and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

A DESERTED WIFE.

Sad Tale of a Hopeless Struggle For Existence.

HAMILTON, Aug. 12.—In the spring of this year a man named Kenneth Mackenzie in the employ of Mr. J. Martin, spring mattress manufacturer, ran away with a Mrs.Small and some money of his employer. He left a wife and baby. Since then Mrs. Mackenzie has struggled on as best she could to keep herself and child. She was frequently very sick. She generally kept her room until near noon, but yesterday no signs of her being about were heard. Mrs. Ledgerwood and other friends were there to see her, and becoming alarmed at receiving no recognition of their calls sent for Constable McBride, who forced the door about half-past 5 o'clock. The unfortunate creature was found with her head buried in the pillows and quite dead. Coroner Woolverton was summoned and expressed the opinion that she had been dead several hours. Leaning over the corpse of her dead mother was the 13 months old baby, with arms outstretched to be taken up. The child had been there all those hours without food. An inquest was held.

THE PRINCE'S POLITICS.

THE HEIR APPARENT SAID TO BE A FREE TRADER IN PRINCIPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 10,—An article, said to be inspired, has appeared in Lloyd's Weekly the chief organ of the working classes, on the politics of the Prince of Wales. The writer says the Prince has no belief in the policy of effacement of the Empire, and will not shrink when necessary from the assertion of an extension of the imperial responsibilities, though opposed to aggression, He is therefore drawn to the Radicals who have broken from the traditions of the Manchester peace at any price party. The article further recites that the heir apparent to the throne of England is a free trader on principle. and regrets the protection policy on the ground that hostile tariffs beget other forms of international hostility. He considered that many of the ideas now identified with socialism are thoroughly identified with practical Christian and constitutional forms of government He accepts the Pope's dictum that what is best administered is best constitutional monarchy, and is the most economical form of government.

DOMINION LICENSES.

A Toronto despatch says: —The provincial License Inspector on the 1st of June last declined to accept payment from persons who had been granted licenses under the McCarthy Act. Notwithstanding that these persons opened their bars and sold liquor under that authority only no action was taken against them. The Inspector has, however, addressed the following letter to them, which is in part a temporary recognition of their right to sell:

SIR,—in consequence of the submission of the license question to the Supreme Court by the different Governments, I am directed by the Honorable the Provincial Secretary to advise you that the license duty, $20 on account of the tavern license you now hold from the Dominion Board, will be required to be paid to me, I have to make returns of the same by August 2nd. Will you please give your attention ? (Signed) THOMAS DEXTER, Inspector.

In accordance with the above licensees have paid the amounts called for and received an acknowledgement from the Provincial authorities.

A SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

Accidentally Shot Through the Body by a Comrade.

TORONTO, Aug. 12.—James McGrath who is a maried man with five children, in company with John Colluck, nightwatchman for the Copland brewing and malting company. went out fishing and shooting at daylight yesterday morning. They were about to cast in their lines when McGrath who was in the bow of the boat, saw a crane flying past and told his companion in the stern to get his gun ready, at the same time putting his own gun to his shoulder. He was leaning forward when Colluck discharged one of the barrels. The gun kicked so hard that it knocked him backwards and as he was falling his finger touched the second trigger and the weapon was discharged, At the same moment McGrath partially arose from his stooping position and the whole charge of shot struck him on the back under the left shoulder, passing through the muscles and fleshy part and going through the arm between the elbow and shoulder. The injured man was conveyed to his home, when Dr. King undressed him and found that he had been mutilated in a shocking manner. He is in a critical condition.

SALVATION ARMY SCANDAL.

Peculiar Conduct of Lieutenant Adamson at Carlton.

The man who made the charges of gross immorality against members of the Salvation Army in the West End of Toronto indignantly denied to a reporter the statement of Lieutenant Adamson that he had been expelled from the army, and explained that he had in reality left them some time ago, in consequence of becoming disgusted with their actions and mode of procedure, but that he had offered no objection to his family attending, as he preferred to let them see for themselves. They had seen more than enough, and had all come out from the organization. In conclusion, this gentleman said :—"Just tell Major Combs, Capt. Wass, and Lieut. Adamson that I have not told one quarter of what I know of the workings of the Salvation army and the conduct of some of its members, but that if they wish it I will do so through the press, and I will not say a word that I cannot swear to."

When the reporter called on the lady who keeps the boarding house at Carlton, he found her with her sister at her father's house in the city, and upon being asked if she had signed the paper given by the Salvation army leaders, she replied that she had, but that she never meant it as a denial of the whole story, but simply as a denial that her sister was concerned in the scandal."

"My sister," she explained, "was not in my house when the affair occurred, but I had better tell you the whole story from the beginning. Lieut. Adamson and two of the female soldiers came out to Carlton to hold prayer meeting, and came to my place to board. I have several other boaders, and they were sitting about the front door when Adamson retired to bed. Sometime afterwards one of the female soldiers went into his room, and remained so long that the other boarders commenced to make unpleasant remarks, and as I didn't want my house to get a bad name I went to the door and ordered her out of the room which was all dark. She came out, but upon being handed some candies by a fellow boarder she ran back into the bed room to give Adamson some, as she said. I was very indignant with her. I got up early next morning, and while I was attending to the breakfast table my younger sister arrived from the city, and while she was passing through the hall she saw Adamson go into the bedroom occupied by the female soldier who had paid a couple of visits to his room the night before. Shortly afterwards she met him coming out, and at once spoke to him, telling him how improper it was for a man to visit a girl while she was in bed, and giving him a piece of her mind. He laughed, and patting her on the back said, "Oh, never mind, she has a headache and I was just praying to the Lord to make her better so she could go to prayer meeting." Not long after this he returned to the bedroom door and pushing it slightly open fell down on his knees and commenced to pray."

Major Coombs on being questioned replied that he with other officers had investigated the case and were satisfied that nothing criminal had taken place between Adamson and the girl. He regretted that they had been so imprudent in their conduct, and was fain to admit that they had been guilty of grave indiscretion in going into each other's bed rooms, which fact Adamson himself had acknowledged. He believed, however, that both were pure in their motives, and so far as he was concerned his conscience acquitted them of any immorality.

AN AFFECTING DEATH.

A Son Sacrifices His Life to Save His Father.

SHIPWRECKED ON LAKE ONTARIO.

On Saturday night. says the Kingston News, Joseph Mercier, who lives just below the corner of King Street, and his son Joseph, left in a skiff for Clayton, in tow of the steamer Hiram Calvin. That place was reached about ten o'clock, and after a trunk and a chest of tools were secured and placed in the boat, a brisk north wind blowing, sail was hoisted and the homeward journey was commenced at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. The boxes weighed about one hundred pounds each, and both men were heavy, the skiff had about all she could carry in calm weather. All went well until about day break, in the neighborhood of four o'clock, the men saw a steamer pass down the river at the head of Howe Island, but as they thought that she would create swells did not enter their minds they did not prepare the little craft to receive them, consequently some fifteen minutes after the steamer passed they were startled by a heavy wave striking the skiff and almost filling her. As quick as thought Joseph took in the situation. He saw that something must be done or the boat would go down, thereupon he seized the chest of tools and cast it into the river. His father was standing up at the time and the act of the son overbalanced him, and the result was the boat capsized and both were percipitated

HEADLONG INTO THE WATER.

The old man could not swim a stroke, but Joseph, who was an expert swimmer, did not forget his aged parent in his peril, and as quickly as possible was at his side and keeping him above the surface. With some difficulty he succeeded in getting his father upon the bottom of the boat, near the stern, and seeing that the craft would not sustain the two of them, he struck out and reaching the chest clung to it. In the meantime the father called loudly for help, but it was too early in the morning to be heard by those on shore. which was distant about a mile and a half. The weight of the old man on the boat sunk it beneath the surface and the water almost reached his armpits, This fact made Joseph uneasy lest his father might slip off and get drowned, consequently he kept asking him if he was all right and if he could hang on much longer. The young man no doubt began to despair himself, but he wanted to make sure of his father's safety, consequently he left the chest and swam back to the boat. He spoke hopelessly and said :—'Father, I'm sure we will be drowned ; there seems to be no help for us.' The father replied, 'Keep up your courage, Joe, but if we have to go down it will be together.' He then asked Joseph to get on the boat and see if it would bear them both, but the latter said no, that the attempt to get on it might cause him to slip off, and that he would go back to the chest. Then reaching up his hand he drew his father's head towards him, and putting his arm around his neck, and said : "Good-bye, father, good-bye ; hang on tight to the boat and I will go back to the chest.' The old man saw that his son was giving up all hope and besought him to come back to the boat and they could die together. to keep up his courage and bear the trial as long as possible, and they would soon be rescued. A yacht was observed about eighty rods distant,but those on board did not appear to hear the cries for help and no one went to the rescue. The young man had not clung long to the chest the second time, when he again enquired if his father was secure, and when told that he was,he replied : 'I'm taking the cramps, father, and can't hold out much longer.' 'Come to the boat, then,' replied the latter, and once more the son released his hold on the chest and started for the overturned skiff, which was about one hundred feet away. While he was swimming Mr. Mercier noticed him struggle hard and swallow water and he spoke encouraging words. How he wished he could swim, so that he could attempt to save his son's life. Joseph tried hard to reach the boat, but when almost within reach of it, he cried out, and dissapeared. Instantly the old man seized a rope that was attached to the skiff and jumped into the water, but failed to lay hold of his drowning son. who did not reappear after he went down. Had he succeeded in his attempt no doubt both would have been drowned and the particulars of the sad affair would never have been known. With great difficulty Mr. Mercier succeeded in getting upon the craft again, and soon after he observed a boat coming towards him from the island, and inside of fifteen minutes he was seized by rescuing hands.

KISSED HIM EAGERLY

THREW UP HIS ARMS.

Deceased was twenty-two years of age, an only son, sober and industrious, and thought a great deal of his parents. He was a ship carpenter by trade, having worked on Mr. Davis' dry dock, and also as fireman on a K. & P, engine.

Now that both Maud S. and Jay Eye See have carved new notches in the trotting record, it is time they came together in a genuine trotting contest, the only kind of a race which can afford a real test of the speed and stamina of the two horses. It is all very well and very grand and astonishing for Maud S. to do a full mile over the Cleveland track in 2.09¾, and for Jay Eye See to cut down his record to 2.10 at Providence. These are great performances, and reflect great credit upon both horses, for it is to be remembered that the Vanderbilt mare is by five years the senior of Mr. Cases gelding, and that 2:10 by a colt is, if anything, more extraordinary than 2:09¾ by a full aged mare. Goldsmith Maid trotted her fastest mile when 19 years old, and Rarus was 14 when he made his best time.—Chicago Mirror.

An important delegation of Canadian oarsmen have gone to Watkins, N. Y., to attend the regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen to-day and to-morrow. In the senior single, there are eleven entries, including Laing of Montreal, and Donohue of Hamilton. Finally in the junior single there are, among the thirteen entries, Harkley of Toronto club, and Stickland of Peterboro.

The beaming faces of the ladies towards the close of the lawn social at Mr. W. H. Ponton's last evening indicated the success which had attended their latest effort to add to the Hospital Fund. Fully 500 people were present. The handsome grounds were prettily illuminated and those present had a most enjoyable time. There was music by the Oddfellows Band and electric shocks from Mr. Greenleaf's battery. Refreshments were plentiful. A company of the bicycle club rode up and stacked their wheels on the grounds. The library of the house was thrown open and visitors were inveighled in by the young lady in charge of what was termed a museum, au unique collection of curiosities from the time of Solon down to the present day. Here also was shown the blood coursing through a frog's leg, the frog wondering all the time what was going on. The ladies are to be congratulated on their splendid success.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

Young Lady Supposed to Have Been Eaten by Bears.

PORT HOPE, Aug. 9.—The inhabitants of Lifford and vicinity were thrown into the most intense state of excitement on Wednesday night, August 6th, when Miss Colvin, a young lady, about eighteen years of age, was lost in the Manvers woods, which are about three miles wide and four long. It is said these woods are swarming with bears, and the supposition is that the young lady in question has been eaten by them. The circumstances are these:—She in company with her little brother went in search of the cows, but by some means they got separated. The boy reached home but the dogs that were with his sister did not return until late at night and they both appeard to be badly frightened. The general opinion is that they were chased by bears, and the poor girl has fallen a victim. Every person who could possibly leave their work are searching the woods for some traces of the lost. On Friday over forty people were engaged in the search all day, and a regular search has been determined on to-morrow (Sunday) if nothing is found to-day.

AN END TO BONE SCRAPING.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisborg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctor told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, 3 bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by R. Templeton.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the lifeand on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon reinvigorate. They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without stomach medication by the Marston Treatment, effective, cleanly, pleasant, cheap. Send for sealed treatise. MARSTON REMEDY CO., 71 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shews unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

Missionary to Swatow, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Nothing; that is nothing of any good,' was the desponding reply. He is even more useless than I. He can suggest nothing, do nothing, but walk up and down, his head between his hands, moaning fruitlessly and bitterly blaming——'

She stopped.

'Papa,' concluded the Creole, her fingers tightening convulsively.

'Yes, I cannot bear to hear him. Papa of course meant all for the best.'

'He may have meant,' rejoined the Creole, with sharp emphasis, 'but he performed a cruel kindness to me. Better had he left me to die, to starve, or——'

'Oh, Juliette!'

'There there,' interrubted the other checking herself, 'that is no subject for the present moment; the few hours that we have are too precious to loose.'

'True! and your news—your news, dear! I am all impatience,' cried Pauline eagerly.

'That in my terrible need, within the last half hour, Providence has sent me a friend; one who, knowing the horrible position in which I am placed, has offered me the means of escape.'

'Escape!' ejaculated her half-sister, in ecstacy. 'Thank Heaven! Tell me his name, that I may bless him in my prayers.'

The Creole hesitated one second, then replied firmly—

'David Ringseole.'

'The overseer?' cried Pauline.

'Yes. But hush; not so loud,' said the Creole, catching her arm. 'Would you ruin him as a reward for his generosity?'

'How do you mean?'

'That in a note which he entrusted to Keziah to deliver, which I will show you when we have more leisure, he has proffered me his help to evade my cruel destiny. He also informs me that Jabez Sceladden has every available outlet of Longueville watched, save one; that by the walnut grove, which has been forgotten, or is unknown. There, at eleven to-night, he promises to have horses ready to carry me into a free state, where I may laugh at the claim of that awful man.'

'How fortunate. How good of him!' cried Pauline, raptourously.

'He makes but one proviso. The strictest secrecy. Even if we meet him, we are to make no sign by word or glance that there is any understanding between us, for Jabez Sceladden's spies are everywhere, while the overseer's post at Longueville is a lucrative one which David Ringseole would retain. Should, therefore my enemy discover my flight has been assisted by Ringseole, Ringseole's reign here is over; he will be cast forth without even a character.'

'Do not fear, dear Juliette; you may trust my discretion. Good, kind old man he shall come to no harm through me,' cried Pauline energetically. But,' and she looked with tender reproach in the other's eyes, 'why do you say 'my flight,' 'horses waiting to carry me away?'

'What else, darling should I say?'

'Why, 'our' and 'us,' of course.'

'Our' and 'us.' Surely, you Pauline, would not undergo such fatigue when there is no necessity?' interrogated the Creole, with feigned surprise, while for the first time, her gaze faltered before the other's.

'Surely I would not leave you. Oh. Juliette, could you ever have thought that?'

'But why not, Pauline?'

'Because' and the tears leaped to her eyes, 'I love you.'

'I never doubted that darling,' responded the Creole with forced sincerity. 'But where is the need? Leave me to my fate, You are safe. We can meet hereafter.'

Leave you to your fate—safe! Yes, Juliette, but never in joy or suffering have we been an hour parted. Do you think I will allow it now? We go together.'

'My own sister,' exclaimed the Creole, pressing the girl with a sudden impulse to her bosom, 'it shall be as you said. I could not say No now, even if I had the desire.

So it was settled.

So Stuart Loring's scheme promised to flourish free of all obstacles.

So both victims as the negress Keziah had remarked were surely—surely drifting blindly into the fowler's net.

The events of the morning were more than sufficient excuse for the Creole keeping her own room; it was also natural that Pauline should bear her company.

Mr. Folmsbee consequently, left to ruminate upon matters alone.

His good-natured heart was stung to the quick with compassion and anger but not being of an energetic character, he felt himself helpless, weak and useless before the trouble.

Save to send up constant inquiries respecting the sisters, and making those energetic assertions too common to feeble doers, that 'something must be done,' 'something should be done,' though for the life of him he knew not what, being convinced that Jabez Sceladden had the law on his side.

Nevertheless the idea that so splendid a creature should become the prey of such a man was so revolting that hoping the law might fight the law better than he could he indited and despatched a letter by a swift messenger to his solicitor in New Orleans demanding his immediate presence at Longueville, on important business, that would admit no delay.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY

is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. MADOC NEWS.

From our own Correspondent.

MADOC, Aug. 11.—Merchants and business men are generally complaining of the dull times.

There were five funerals in and near the village last week.

Mr. Willis Hudgins has sold his bakery to Mr. Thomas Reynolds.

Mrs. Benson O'Hara was seriously ill last week but is somewhat better now.

The work upon the various building being constructed here is progressing nicely.

Two bicyclists from Belleville were here yesterday, having ridden all the way in four hours.

Mr. John Mouncey was married last Monday and left on a tour to Montreal and other places.

Mr. George Maybee and wife, from Napanee are spending a few days with their friends here.

Mr. Benson O'Hara leaves this afternoon for St. Thomas to attend the Grand Lodge of I.O.C.F.

Another change in the running of trains on the Midland, one train in the afternoon only going as far as the N. H Junction.

THE WHEAT CROP.

The report of the Bureau of Industries for August gives a cheering account of the wheat crop of the Province. The fall wheat appears to have made steady improvement throughout the season, and in localities where it was regarded as hardly worth saving in May, good harvests have been reaped. The moderately cool weather and occasional rain showers favored continuous growth and healthy maturity, and the grain is an excellent sample, being plump, hard and bright. In a few localities it was attacked by the midge and weevil, but the extent of injury by these pest is not appreciable on the aggregate crop. Reaping began in the southwestern counties of the Province about the middle of July, and by the 1st of August the bulk of the crop was cut and safely housed. The harvest weather being very favorable, the grain has been gathered in first rate condition. Accounts of the spring wheat are equally good, excepting for the northern and north eastern counties where its growth was checked by the drought of June. But even in these districts it promises a fair yield, while in the Lake Ontario, West Midland, Georgian Bay and Lake Huron counties it is reported to be better than for many years. It will be fully ripe about the middle of the month, and with a continuance of the present weather the quality will at least equal that of fall wheat. The following table gives the area and production of the crops of this year and last year—the production of the present harvest being based on the estimates of 1,150 correspondents:

	1884
	Acres.	Bushels.
Fall Wheat	864,961	17,408,356
Spring wheat	720,633	13,224 341
Totals	1,585,593	30,632,697
	1883
	Acres.	Bushels.
Fall Wheat	1,091,497	11,597,839
Spring Wheat	586,410	9,726,063
Totals	1,677,887	21,323,902

The bad harvest of fall wheat last year and the comparatively good harvest of spring wheat account for the decreased area of the one crop and the increased area of the other this year.

A 'DIVE-KEEPER'S' THREATS.

The efforts of the Rochester authorities to break up the dives in the Flower City is causing considerable alarm among the keepers of those infamous resorts. Police commissioner Rosenthal has received a notice signed 'A Divekeeper as You Call It,' which read as follows: 'Take notice: You are breaking up our homes and driving us out, taking our bread from us. We have done you no harm. Our motto is live and let live, but you can not live much longer than to make your will if you have not. Our first chance and you are a dead man. Prepare yourself to meet your fate at our first chance. Coroner Sharpe will hold an inquest over your remains. You will drop dead some place; we will shadow you day and night until you are shot dead. Take notice thereof and govern yourself accordingly.'

MURRAY & LANMAN'S FLORIDA WATER—The most delicate invalids, and greatest sufferers with sea-sickness, and those whose nervous systems are the most sensitive, prefer it before all others, and use it to the exclusion of all others, not for a time only, but always and continuously. The sense of smell never tires of its soft, refreshing odor.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health. The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Raffe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE MOWAT DEMONSTRATION.

In the demonstration now being arranged in honor of Hon. Oliver Mowat, upon his arrival from England, it is proposed that the Reform Associations of every constituency in the Province send delegates to Toronto, on Tuesday September 16th, to assist in the welcome that will be accorded to the Premier of Ontario, in the Queen's Park that afternoon. An opportunity will be afforded for the presentation of addresses from each of the county associations. It is expected that the officers of each county association will attend to the organization of the deputations in their respective localities. The Executive Committee are making arrangements for a large supply of suitable badges to be worn by those taking part in the demonstration. In order to assist in the more orderly arrangement of the procession, it has been suggested that each riding or county should have a banner furnished to their respective deputations, upon which might be inscribed the name of the county or riding.

In the evening a grand banquet will be tendered to the honorable gentleman in the Pavillion of the Horticultural Gardens. The price of tickets for the banquet has been fixed at two dollars. The Secretary of the Reform Association in each riding has been furnished with printed forms for applications for the banquet. As there will only be a limited number issued, it is desirable that those intending to be present should intimate to the General Secretary their desire to be booked for tickets at the earliest possible date. Arrangements will be made with the railway companies in due time for reduced fares.

It only remains with the Reformers throughout the Province now to make this demonstration the grandest political gathering ever held in Canada.

AN EXPERT OPINION.

The following paragraph appeared the other day in the Mail's "smart" column:

Mr. F. W. Glen makes the following astonisher in his attack upon the N. P.: "Three-fourths of all our manufacturing industries were established or very greatly enlarged during the low tariff period; not a single new establishment has been established under the present tariff." This is a free trade story. If three-fourths of the industries were established under the low tariff, and none were established under the high tariff, when were the missing one-fourth established? !

To this Mr. Glen who is a large manufacturer in Oshawa replies:—"The editorial columns of the Toronto Mail of the 11th inst., contains the above, in reply to which I beg to say that the remaining industries of Oshawa were established when the long-eared editor either wore short-legged pants or long white dresses." Mr. Glen thus summarises the present trade situation: Financially as a people we are drifting upon the rocks. The prospect of a magnificent crop will enable us to avoid them for the immediate present. Had the harvest proved a failure, we should have suffered such a financial crisis as we have not had since 1862. If we could be certain of a succession of good harvests, we could bear successfully the enormous strain now being put upon us; but the Government are, through excessive taxation and extravagance, draining the country of capital more rapidly and severely than it can stand. We must either change our fiscal policy or the first deficient harvest will force upon us a terrible financial collapse."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Toronto literary censor has discovered that Mr. Mowat, too, has no literary style. Mr. Dalton McCarthy, Q. C., has, we suppose, more than enough literary style yet the Lord Chancellor told him that his argument on the Boundary was "perfectly absurd."

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

A TEST VOTE.

The voting on the repeal of the Scott act in Halton will do much good. It will in a great measure, settle the fate of the Scott act in Ontario. If the people of Halton decide to repeal the act it will show that they, having had experience of the working of prohibition, have been forced to the conclusion that it is a mistake. If the act be sustained, that fact will carry with it the conviction that prohibition in Halton has been found to work well—that it has lessened drunkeness, and that it is therefore a desirable law.—Hamilton Spectator.

Charter for Drilled Camp Granted to No. 81.

Special to the Ontario.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 13—At the meeting of the Grand Encampment of I O.O.F. of Ontario here yesterday the delegates from Belleville Lodge No. 81, Messrs. R. Warham and Allen McFee, secured a charter from the Grand Officers for the formation of a uniformed drilled Encampment in connection with their lodge.

This news will be welcomed by the members of "eighty one" and by the brethren generally in Belleville. There is the best of material in this lodge to form a Camp. Over seventy members of the subordinate lodge have already sought membership and with the splendid room in the Robertson Block there is no reason why success should not crown the efforts of the promoters of this new uniformed encampment. The new uniforms will be ordered at once. It is understoop Capt. Adjt. Ponton will be the instructor.

The new Grand Encampment officers are:—Joseph Oliver, Toronto, Grand Patriarch; J. Welsh, Stratford, Grand High Priest; Frank Riddell, Grand Senior Warden: John Sinclair, Petrolea, Grand Junior Warden; M. D. Dawson, London, Grand Scribe and Treasurer; Dr. F. Rae, representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

LAKE YACHT-RACING ASSOCIATION.

Toronto World, Aug. 11.

The last race of the first circuit held under the auspices of the above association was held Friday last at Belleville. The association was formed for the furtherance of yachting interests in the great lakes, and at present comprises the Royal Canadian, the Toronto, the Oswego, the Kingston, the Cobourg and the Bay of Quinte Yacht Clubs, and will no doubt shortly be enlarged by the addition of the Chicago and other large yachting centres. The necessity for such an organization is quite evident, when we consider the want of uniformity of measurement and other points of difference between the competing boats. These wants the association supplies.

The regattas just concluded at Oswego, Kingston and Belleville, and those to come off at Cobourg and Toronto in September, are all sailed under fixed rules of measurement, etc., from which there can be no departure. Every yacht in Lake Ontario will know the amount of time allowance per mile that must be allowed to every other. The results of the racing so far have been very satisfactory, and a few conclusions may be drawn.

The chief yachts that have competed are the Aileen and Verye of the deep draught cutter build, the Norah of the heavy centreboard, and the Garfield of the light skim-dish order, all in the first class. The comfort in sailing and cruising in the two former was greatly admired by all who saw them, and their success in Oswego in the gale which they alone were able to weather, proved that for heavy sea-going qualities they could not be matched, In the inland comparatively calm waters of Kingston and Bay of Quinte, even with good wind could not not hold their own with the others, and had to take second and third places, besides being in constant fear of getting aground. It yet remains to be seen what the Norah and Atalanta can do in heavy sea weather; and yachtsmen will await with anxiety the talked-of meeting in September of the Aileen, Norah, Oriole and Atalanta on a big sea in a stiff wind on Lake Ontario.

To Commodore John Leys of the Royal Canadian yacht club, the first president; to Commodore John T. Mott of the Oswego yacht club, the vice-president, and to Mr. George E. Evans, the energetic secretary of the association, yachtsmen must be greatly indebted for the pains they have each taken in bringing about such a fraternity of feeling in the yachting circles of the lake.

A REVOLTING STORY.

Cannibalism said to have Prevailed Among the Artic Explorers.

SHOCKING REVELATIONS NOW MADE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The Times says documents in the possession of the Navy Department add to the record of the miserable human suffering already published in connection with the finding of the Greely relief expedition, most shocking stories of inhumanity and cannibalism. For the sake of humanity and the American people, the army authorities are endeavoring to keep the matter hushed, but in the investigation which is almost sure to come the facts will undoubtedly come out. The object in shipping bodies in iron caskets was to prevent exposure. It has been stated that after the game gave out in February, the members of the party lived principally on seal-skins, lichens and shrimps. As a matter of fact they were kept alive on human flesh. When the rescuing party discovered the half-starving survivors, their first duty was to look to two men who were insensible from cold and privation. One of them shrieked, as the sailors took hold of him, "Don't let them shoot, as they did poor Henry. Must I be killed and eaten as poor Henry was? Don't let them do it; don't don't!" After a brief investigation Schley felt that the man was speaking the truth, and that some of the men who perished had been stripped of their flesh to keep their comrades alive. Schley instructed two or three gentlemen, among them the doctor-surgeon of the Bar, to make a careful examination and and put their conclusions in writing. This was done. The bodies were dug from graves back of a permanent camp established in October, 1883, but it was found that most of the blankets contained nothing but heaps of white bones, many of them picked clean. Schley discovered that many of the seventeen men who were said to have perished from starvation had been eaten by their famishing comrades. It is reported that the only men who escaped the knife were three or four who died of scurvy. The amputated limbs of men who afterwards perished were eagerly devoured as food. Charles B. Henry was shot for stealing rations. When the body was found the hands and face, though shrunken, were intact, but nearly everywhere else the skin had been stripped from him, and the flesh picked from the bones. Even the heart and lungs were eaten. Fragments of human flesh were also used as bait for shrimps. Some officers of the relief ships scout the idea of cannibalism. Others admit that the bodies were shocking to look upon, but attribute it to storm and ice. The eating story they believed to be the sailors' yarn. Schley refuses to say anything until an official inquiry is made.

Admiral Nichols says there are no records at the Navy Department which give a shadow of coloring for the story about cannibalism among the members of the Greely party. He does not believe there is any truth in it.

Dr. Ames and other surviving members denied in every particular the story that the dead had been devoured. James Francis, the machinist, who helped to put the bodies in alcohol, said that they were perfect, excepting that they were emaciated, and the skin drawn tightly over the bones.

The errors of the scapegrace are visited upon the Bishop, and the situations arising from this are really funny."

This was sanctioned and a committee was named to give Miss Carney a testimonial

HOW BAIR DROVE MAUD S. IN 2:09¾

Spirit of the Times.

At 4 o'clock she was ready for the word, and the story of the matchless performance in best told in Blair's own language, as he kindly gave me his thoughts.

'Did you expect to beat the record?

'Hardly. Of course I did not know her exact condition, and it was a sort of experimental effort. If she showed me she was at herself, I intended to send her as I did; if not, I would give her a good, stiff mile, hoping for a better track Monday, when we would let her do her best.'

'Then you did not consider the track in its best condition to-day?'

'How could it be after the heavy rains during the week? It was fairly good; but as you leave the judges' stand it cupped out, and beyond the lower turn I found it in the same way.

'Now as to our movements after I got on the sulky, You see I jogged her the reverse way of the track, and opened her up from the quarter pole. As she moved past the grand stand I saw she was a great mare, and said to myself, 'You are yourself to-day. Then I jogged her to the head of the stretch and turned her slowly round, as her custom is when about to do a great mile. She stood a moment or two, and walked, say fifty yards, and then she started up of her own accord, and seemed to say, 'Now let me go, I see all the people, and will show them something they never saw before.' It does appear as if a public day and big crowd stirred her up to do or die, for she did just break loose herself. I did not mean to give her such a long score, but when she was so wiling I hated to bother her, so away we went on the first score. As we passed the wire she was going just about right. I coaxed her back a little, and then at the quarter noted we were going at the rate of 2.11, fast enough. I chirped to her once just after we left the quarter, I desired to get back to the half in 1:05. I got there in 1:04¼. Along the backstretch. I met Hayes with Catchfly, and hailed him with 'How do you like that movement?' for we were sailing. He seemed astonished, and afterward told the boys I was going easy. I aimed to reach the three quarter pole in 1:36, and then we would have 33½ seconds to come home in. She entered the home stretch very resolute, and at the band stand spurted but did not carry it quite through to the wire; then I tapped her lightly with the whip, and asked her for more effort. She finished the race without lifting, shaking, or swerving. And I stopped my watch under the wire in 2;09¾. Here it is, I've not started it since. That's all.'

'But let us discuss it a little,' I said, "Did she appear distressed after the heat?'

'Not a bit. Billy Weeks walked down with me after Grant led her to the stall and in a few minutes she had blown out. Weeks lifted her blanket and said he never saw anything like it. He then offered me $100 to let him ride her just one mile, and and said he bet she could do it in 2:05. She is capital under saddle. I rode her all one winter. In fact she is good anywhere. The horse does not live that can outpole her. She is just as good there as singly.

ACROSS THE BAY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

ROSSMORE, Aug. 12.—Most of the barley in this locality has been harvested, and farmers are now busy with their wheat, oats, &c, which an are unusually good crop.

Many of our people are showing a spirit of enterprise and improvement in the matter of erecting elegant and substantial buildings. Messrs. Wm. Anderson and John Howell, of the Union district, are building brick houses that for size and general appearance might well be copied, while in the vicinity of Rossmore, a number of respectable buildings are in course of construction.

Under the new state of affairs brought about by the Methodist union, some very important changes have been made in the Ameliasburg and Rednersville circuits. Appointments have been changed and in some cases transferred from one circuit to the other. Though some dissatisfaction was at first manifested at these arrangements, the greatest difficulties have been overcome, and the people are showing a true Christian spirit, and everything now indicates the harmonious workings of the new system.

NOTES FROM STOCO.

Mr. David Larkin has gone into store keeping

The trains on the C.P.R. now go thundering along night and day.

The late showers have interfered with harvesting considerably.

The new buildings in course of erection will make quite an addition to our village when completed.

The crops are far from being all that could be desired, though late grain, especially oats and peas, promise a plentiful yield,

The funeral procession which accompanied the remains of Mrs. E. McEvoy, to the R. C. Cemetery here, was one of the largest ever known in this place.

Mr. Francis Murphy has returned home, after an extensive tour through the Old Land. He visited some of the principal points of interest, including Dublin and London.

WESTMONT PACES IN 1:01.

The Gracie returned home last night.

The Napanee Lacrosse Club has, it is said been disbanded.

A team of the Oka Lacrosse Club left this morning to play in Hastings for a silver cup.

At the camp of the American Canoe Association at Grindstone Island, there are 100 tents and over 200 canoes.

A Buffalo despatch says:—Westmont, the pacer, owned by J. M. Hill, of this city, was sent half a mile at Rochester yesterday without a running mate, in the unprecedented time of 1:01.

A Kingston despatch says:—The re-measurement of the Laura gives her an advantage over the Iolanthe, and it is now understood that the former will get the second prize at the Belleville regatta." The decision of the judges giving the Iolanthe second place is final.

At an Ottawa athletic meeting there entered for the three mile championship foot race, Raine of Ottawa, Case of Hamilton, and David Bennett of Toronto. Raine went away with the start, but Bennet slowly crept up on him and began to pass him and then fell slightly behind only to work up and pass him again, while the two leaders were annoying themselves in this manner Case kept well up and on the fourth lap he went ahead of them both and won in 15 min. 25 sec., Raine second and Bennet a long way behind. The mile amateur race was won by an Ottawa man named Barnhart.

Following is a report of the events at the Watkins N. Y. National Amateur Oarsmen's regatta yesterday in which Canadians competed: Senior fours—first heat—Argonauts, of Toronto, rowing a stroke of 45, went to the front, and although closely pressed by the Fairmounts, of Philadelphia, for half the course, won easily in 9:52½, Fairmounts 10:18½. Second heat—Torontos, of Toronto, led for nearly a mile, with the Columbias, of Washington in hot pursuit. A foul occurred, in which both were to blame. When they got straightened out a pretty race ensued to the finish. The Torontos crossed the line first in 10:02, Columbias, 10:06½. The Torontos were disqualified for fouling, a decision which was not well received by many who viewed the race. In the fourth heat of the junior single sculls, J. H. Kemp of Boston, after a pretty race with G. A. Strickland, of Peterboro', Ont., was beaten by two lengths. The first heat of the senior single sculls was a walkover for W. E. O'Connel, of Portland, Me. In the second heat John Buckley, of Portland, Me. with a businesslike stroke of 32, won easily from M. F. Monahan, of Albany. The third heat brought together Joseph Laing, of Montreal, the present champion, and the old opponents, D. J. Murphy, of Boston, and P. A. Dempsey, of Philadelphia. Laing won by a couple of lengths from Murphy in 9m. 58¾s; Murphy's time 10m. 2¼s., Dempsey's, 10m. 9s. The regatta continued to-day.

PROMENADE CONCERT.

"Isn't this splendid!"

Such was the ejaculation of a young lady, wearing a white muslin dress and a sweet smile, to her escort, as they entered the Bicycle Park last evening and walked under the blaze of reflected gas-light, mingled with the crowd and listened to the lively music of the Oddfellows Band. There were between 700 and 800 in attendance. After a club parade a one-foot race was run by T. West and F. Foster. A misunderstanding caused Foster to stop a lap too soon, but he appeared to have the race as he was ahead when he stopped. It was declared no race. An obstacle race, which caused immense amusement, was won by West who likewise took the mile dash for a silver mug presented by Mr. Geo. Stirling. A four-minute race was won by Clarke.

Very many last night expressed the opinion that the Bicycle Club was entitled to no small degree of credit for the enterprise displayed. The wheelmen are undoubtedly doing a popular thing in providing so much wholesome entertainment, for so little money at considerable expense.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strength on the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. THE HOP OUTLOOK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—There seems no outlet as yet for anything in the way of round lots. Home brewers have a pretty liberal supply of beer, the unfavorable weather having virtually put their trade back six weeks or more. Hence the present output is light and the requirements of hops small. With this drawback and export trade at a standstill dealers are doing next to nothing. There are not many goods offering, however, and for that reason prices show no material depreciation. As matters stand the chances look poor for realizing over 23c. for other than a very fine article, offers of 200 bales and over at 24c to-day having found no takers.

CHEESE MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Receipts to-day, 20,970 pkgs. No changes of positive character was shown on the general market to-day. Holders are standing out for old rates and buyers are fighting them, though one or two appear to stand ready to come into the breach the moment any signs of weakness are manifested. Thus it was found that when strictly perfection of quality is wanted 10½c must be bid, and a fraction more has been paid for the sake of getting regular brands. At the very best, the demand is without anything in the way of general form, and not only is the business slow, but salesmen say they never found at this season of the year so small an attendance of buyers at the piers and depots. From present appearances the receipts will exceed the exports to quite a considerable extent, and there will be quite an amount to carry over. On fancy stock the crowding is a little more severe and some pretty nice goods have been picked up to-day at 10c and under, —Bulletin.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-ur-citate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Afterwards he sauntered into the verandah, considerably relieved in mind that he had done something, also reflecting that the fortunate proviso which had been made before the papers were signed must have been inspired by Providence.

Thus the weary day rolled on.

The sisters keeping to their rooms, with Keziah's assistance made what preparations they could for their flight, while Jacob Folmsbee wandered about the lower apartments like a homeless dog.

In those latitudes night treads rapidly on the heels of day.

There is no dreamy twilight as in England.

The sun has dipped behind the mountains, and behold! night is here.

Light had given place to darkness but little over half an hour, when the Creole, whose manner since her determination to confide in Stuart Loring she had been particularly calm and self-possessed, remarked in her clear, insiduous tones—

'Dearest Paline, I think all our arrangements are complete; we have now only to wait as patiently as we can till the time which is to decide my fate. If we succeed in escaping, all to-night we must be in the saddle, consequently shall endure much fatigue; I propose that you should go to your room and rest an hour or so. You will need it.

'And you, Juliette.

'I shall follow my own prescriptions, of course,' she smiled. 'If sleep is denied I shall yet rest, for I know how much depends on our strength and we are not made of iron. Good Keziah is in your chamber; please tell her of my intention and that I wish on no account to be disturbed.'

The suggestion was so feasible and wise that Pauline at once arose, embraced her sister, and withdrew.

Not unwillingly for she too desired a few moments' solitude to write to Eustace to acquaint him with all that had taken place, and let him know the route Keziah had told her she heard they were to take that he might follow.

The Creole had as little intention to rest as her half-sister.

No sooner was she alone than she turned the key in the lock and consulted her watch.

'Nine,' she reflected; 'all the slaves will be in their huts, most most in bed at this hour. I may go in safety. Safety or not,' she added resolutely; 'still I must risk it, for possibly it is the only chance I shall have.'

Taking a black shawl, she threw it over her head and shoulders, removing her collar and cuffs, so that their whiteness, in the midst of her otherwise sombre attire, should not betray her.

Afterwards having placed the lamp in her dressing room, opening the window she looked out.

The night as yet was intensely dark, only a faint blue in the east denoting the advent of the moon.

Leaning out the Creole regarded the ground before the sittingroom window.

Everything was dark there also.

No ray of light rested on the path.

Like themselves, Mr. Folmsdee had evidently retired to his room.

'It is well,' murmured the Creole closing the window. 'If I can only get out unseen I care not about the return. Any excuse will serve and my purpose will be attained.'

Gathering the soft folds of her skirt in her hand, she noiselessly opened the door and listened.

All was silent.

The miserable occurrence of that day had undoubtedly got abroad, and the household servants were collected in their own part of the house, talking of it.

Juliette stepped into the corridor, locked the door, and placed the key in her pocket.

After that the movements were more swift, though equally cautious.

Descending to the sitting room, she found it unlighted and deserted.

To cross it and pass out on to the verandah was the work of an instant.

Here pausing she looked around.

Everything was still, everything dark.

There was no fear of being seen.

Her dark dress rendered her only a part of the obscurity.

Nevertheless she kept near the trees and bushes, the shadow they cast making the blackness a shade darker, avoiding or passing swiftly across them.

Where was she going?

To the huts where the slaves dwelt.

Why?

It will be seen.

As she traversed the lawn, instinctively she looked back at the house.

There was a light in Jacob Folmsbee's room, also in Pauline's.

She neither was resting, for she saw the silhouette of the graceful head and profile on the blind.

She was seated at her desk.

What doing?

As the mental question crossed her brain, she beheld Pauline's head lift and lower down what appeared the shadow of a letter she was reading.

She had been writing—to whom?

A gasp of pain parted the watcher's lips.

A dead cold stole through her vein.

She divined the truth.

Who would she write to but to Eustace Belmore?

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY

is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

THE DEATH OF THE BUFFALO.

From Joaquin Miller's "The Wonderful City.

When a buffalo, the noblest native beast of America, falls dead on the plains, you begin to see little black specks in the sky. At first these little black specks away up in the deep blue sky, seem no larger than gnats. Then they grow to the dimensions of bats, and circling round, descending a little at every circle, growing nearer and nearer] larger and larger, till you can see at last their long necks reaching out and looking down, down, down, as they descend. These are buzzards. And, too, when this monarch of the plains falls, and is surely and carefully dead, there comes, creeping stealthily over the hill, his sharp little nose sniffing blood, his big bushy tail between his legs and trailing on the ground, as he creeps and sneaks along, the dirty little prairie wolf. This little, sneaking wolf, this natural thief of the plains, will have its teeth in the dead beasts haunches in less than five minutes while the buzzards are picking out his eyes.

And then the large wolves come; a long black line streaming and stringing over the hills through the long strong grass, their red tongues out, and their white teeth glistening sharp and eager for their work. By and by you see bugs—loathsome, buzzing bugs, that will make a droning, solemn sound, as they go by your ear or strike you full in the face. They, too, will have a share of the dead monarch, and will burrow in his skin, and finally revel and rear their young in the offal when all others have gone away. And this is the pitiful end of the greatest brute of the plains.

SCENES IN ROME.

ROME, July 16.—The anniversary of July 14, 1881, was celebrated by both Clericals and Anti-clericals. A large number of Catholics went to St. Lorenzo, outside the walls, to receive the holy communion, and to pray at the tomb of Pius IX. Large numbers also prayed in the Basilica. The tomb of Pius IX. will soon be decorated in the Byzantine style of the sixth century. Its walls will be covered with mosaics. Signor Acquademi is Chairman of the committee, and Prof. Cattaneo is the architect.

The Anti-clericals celebrated the anniversary of the day on which gross insults were offered to the remains of Pio Nono by a mass meeting, in which furious speeches were made. At the close of the meeting they marched from the hall in procession, and drank at the Osteria of Capassuone, outside the Porta Angelica. All were tipsy on the return march, at 8 p. m. As they approached the Vatican they shouted, "Fire St. Peter!" "Down with the Pope!" and "Live the Republic!" A squad of police forbade them to cross the plaza fronting St. Peter's Church, and they tried to force a passage. A fierce fight ensued. The mob attacked the police with clubs. The officers drove them back with their fists. The fight lasted a quarter of an hour. Two police officers were badly wounded, and six or seven anti-clericals were arrested for seditious cries and riotous behavior. Soldiers from the post of the Vatican charged the mob with bayonets wounding two or three spectators.

LOCATING SENSATIONS.

It has long been known that the tact corpuscles of the skin play an important part in locating sensations; and when in operations for rebuilding disfigured noses, a flap of cuticle is transferred from the forehead to the surface of that organ, a very curious sensory phenomenon ensues and if the skin of the regenerated nose is pricked or tickled, the sensation is felt on the forehead at the point where the irritated bud was originally situated. To find out how long this continues, Mr. Fleming, of Paris, transplanted sections of the skin of a dog from the forehead to the flank, and vice versa. When the wounds were healed, and dilute irritant acids were applied to the forehead, the dog attacked the flank violently with his teeth; and when the flank was irritated with caustic he rubbed his forehead energetically with his fore paw. The deception lasted for fourteen days, when, apparently he transferred nerves comprehended their real position. New York Commercial Advertiser.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 20th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Ralfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

ONTARIO & QUEBEC RAILWAY.

The opening of the Ontario & Quebec Railway, or the Ontario division of the Canada Pacific, is an event of no small importance, as it directly connects the capital of Ontario with the Federal capital, and also with Montreal. The Grand Trunk since its construction has never had any competitor between the two great commercial centres of the Dominion. It has always been a Montreal corporation, and in freight rates invariably discriminated against Toronto in favor of the metropolis. This was so much the case that it cost a Toronto merchant as much to send frieght east as far as Whitby as it did for a Montreal merchant to ship all the way from Montreal to Toronto, and it is well known that the Grand Trunk laid Montreal goods down in Winnipeg as low as Toronto goods, notwithstanding that the former was hauled 333 additional miles. It must therefore be a source of satisfaction to Toronto to have this newly established competition. In passenger traffic also the monopoly charged exorbitant fares eastward.'

The Ontario and Quebec Railway is 199 miles in length and extends from Toronto to Perth, where it joins the system of roads already owned by the Canadian Pacific. It passes through portions of eight counties, viz., York, Ontario, Durham, Peterboro, Hastings, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac and Lanark. Some of the districts through which it passes are among the finest, from an agricultural point of view, in the Province of Ontario. The mail train which leaves Montreal in the morning at 8:45, will reach Toronto at 10:30 p.m. Out of this should be taken a stop of 25 minutes at Carleton Place for dinner, so that the actual running time, ordinary stoppages included, between Montreal and Toronto will be a little over thirteen hours. The night express will do better than this, leaving Montreal at 8 a. m, and reaching Toronto at 9:15 a.m. The day mail train which leaves Toronto at 9:10 a.m. will reach Montreal at 10:55 p.m.; and the night express which leaves Toronto at 7:40 p.m. is due in Montreal at 8:25 a. m. There will thus be two through trains each way daily, making the run in from twelve and a half to thirteen and a half hours.

In describing the country through which the road runs the Montreal Herald has the following to say with reference to this county:—From Havelock the line runs to Blairton, and crossing the Cobourg, Peterboro & Markham Railway passes into the County of Hastings. At Central Union Junction, 115 miles from Toronto, the Central Ontario Railway is crossed. Here is a fine even district. Just beyond Madoc Road Station, three miles from Madoc, the Grand Junction runs underneath the new line which there makes a straight run for Tweed, in the Township of Hungerford, and 133 miles from Toronto. Tweed is a village of about 1,000 inhabitants, hitherto without railway communication, but now aroused to unwonted activity by the improved prospect which its coming affords. The country about Tweed produces considerable quantities of grain, and an elevator is to be erected at the station. There are large saw mills and grist mills in the vicinity. It is expected that some four hundred car loads of grain will be shipped from Tweed yearly. Besides grain there is abundance of lumber, which will give a large traffic to the new line. The neighborhood is also likely to be much sought after by sportsmen, its numerous lakes and ample forests affording admirable opportunities both for fishing and shooting."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

TO-DAY the electors of the County of Westmoreland, N.B., are called on to vote for or against the repeal of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878. The issue is an important one for the people who formed the large majority which voted for the adoption of the Act some four years ago. They cannot lightly reverse the vote they gave at that time and yet they are called upon to decide as to whether or not the interests of temperance would be better promoted by the repeal or retention of that law. The Act has not been enforced fully and effectively, but it is urged that from the outset its enforcement was effectively blocked in the larger towns in consequence of its having to run the gauntlet in the Courts.

ARTIC HORRORS.

How Charles Henry was shot by his Comrades.

INTERVIEW WITH LIEUT. GREELY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—An officer of one of the relief vessels said yesterday if cannibalism was resorted to it cannot be proved. No oath, however sacred, could make survivors speak. There may be circumstantial evidence but nothing else. The matter was a common topic of conversation among the crews of the relief ship on the return voyage. It is more than probable that when all the details of the story are known Dr. Pavy will be found to have shared the same or a similar fate to that of Henry. Pavy's body was one of the four swept away to sea. It is said that most of the men who went with the expedition were under arrest earlier in the winter for the same offence which cost Henry his life.

THE SHOOTING OF HENRY.

The story of the shooting of young Chas. B. Henry, a private, who was buried a week ago at Cypress Hills, was briefly this:—'When the game grew very scarce early in June, Greely called his men together and with them took stock of the food on hand. There were only a few days rations, and these were equally divided. In the division Henry made a grab for more than his share. This was passed over, but next night he was caught stealing food. A council was called to act on his case. They were desperate men. They felt that their own lives lay in protecting their rations. It was necessary to make an example, and besides with one man out of the way, there would be one less mouth to fill. So with one voice the poor fellow was condemned to die. He was shot in the head and breast, and it was claimed that when the body was found the head was missing. The coffin buried a week ago at Cypress Hills contained only a headless trunk. Such is the outline of the story told by a sailor down in the hold.

LIEUTENANT GREELY INTERVIEWED.

BOSTON, Aug. 14 — A special correspondent from Portsmouth says Col. Kent yesterday obtained an interview with Greely, who admits that Henry had a military execution on the 6th of June. Henry was detected stealing a limited supply of food apportioned out to the survivors as early as March. Greely said:—"It became necessary in order to keep up discipline to inform Henry that would be shot if the practice was continued, and that a similar fate would be meted out to any other member of the party detected in a like crime. If Henry had been permitted to continue stealing, the balance of the party would surely have starved to death, and Henry alone survived. In spite of these warnings Henry was again detected stealing provisions. Among food taken was two pounds of bacon, the eating of which made him sick. Search was instituted. when it was found Henry had, among other articles, stolen a pair of seal skin boots belonging to the hunter of the party. I was therefore forced to issue a written order that Henry be shot and the order was carried out.' As to the alleged cannibalism, Greely says if there was anything of the kind it must have been an individual act and not general. Nothing of the kind came under Greely's personal observation.

AMERICAN SPARKS

Two women and a colored boy have been dismissed from the Salvation Army in New Haven. It is alleged there is something wrong in the moral atmosphere of the barracks.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are, terribly exhausting of vital stamina. Its true specific is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies, female ailments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

A HOLY SHOW.

The Australian branch of the Salvation Army certainly outstrips the Canadian army in their methods. They advertised that at a certain meeting a person would be exhibited whose head was like heaven. The hall was packed, and there was shown a negro, the Salvationists explaining that his head was like heaven, because there was no parting there, at which the band struck up the tune, 'There shall be no parting there.'

HIS WIFE'S FAULT.

The Mystery of Charlie Wright's Suicide Explained.

HE WRITES A FAREWELL LETTER.

The following are additional particulars of the suicide of Charles E. Wright, a travelling agent of the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Company, committed in Pontiac, Mich., last Saturday, by shooting. He went home and seated himself in the parlor, and wrote the following letter to his wife before committing the deed:—

My Dear Wife,—May God forgive me for leaving you this way. I cannot help it. I have tried hard to get along, and have at length been driven to the wall and see no way ahead for me. My life has been a total failure. Oh, my darling, don't grieve too much for me, but try and live. Be a good true woman. May God give you more happiness In the future than he has in the past. Try and forgive your poor boy for this last sad act. I hope you will always think of the pleasant time we had yesterday. Think how happy we would have been if we could only have had enough to get along with. I cannot stand poverty and be merry any longer, my precious one. It has driven me almost crazy. I have struggled against poverty and ill luck all my life. The end is to come at last and I will have rest. Tell mother and the rest, and ask them to forgive me. Oh, my darling, precious wife, I love you with all my heart and soul, and hope some time in the future you may find happiness. Try and forgive your poor unfortunate husband. Good bye, my darling one, good bye. You will meet me in the other world, my darling, and will be happy there. Your loving husband,

CHARLIE.

A few years ago Nellie Crawford, a bright and attractive young woman, came to Cleveland from near Conneaut, where her parents live, and obtained work in one of the dry goods stores. She was not choice in the selection of her companions, was fond of flattery and admiration, and was susceptible to the advances of a certain class of young men, who from their financial standing only are allowed entry into the best society of the city. During her stay here Nellie changed her situation several times, and then disappeared. A few weeks ago a young lady, who years ago had befriended Nellie, was surprised to receive a call from a man who sent up his name as C. E. Wright. He explained that he had come from Pontiac, Mich., where he had left his wife, formerly Nellie Crawford, and he extended an invitation to her to visit his wife in Pontiac. A few days later the young lady received a letter from Wright, telling her not to go to Pontiac, as he had just discovered that his wife's conduct during his absence from home was such as to create serious scandal, and had even influenced several of his old friends to cut him. In the course of a week Wright came to Cleveland, and calling on the young lady, told her that his wife had caused him no end of trouble. Her extravagant habits ate up his salary, and he had determined to leave her. From Cleveland he went south. Arriving at Lexington, Ky., he changed his mind and decided to go back and try to persuade his wife to change her course of life. That is the last that was heard from him until news came of his suicide.

CHOLERA IN THE ALPS.

Twenty-one Deaths at a Village in One Day.

MARSEILLES, Aug. 12.—In the day ending 8:30 this evening, 11 deaths. One at Toulon. More persons have been attacked than on any day recently, but the disease is much milder than formerly. Nine cases admitted to the hospitals to-day. At Montfort one death is reported, two at La Garde. At Gigean to day there were two deaths.

Cholera is raging in the department of Basses Alps. At one village where there was no doctor 21 deaths occurred yesterday. A family of 13 in the village died. Their bodies remained 30 hours unburied. The Mayor is inactive and a panic exists. A doctor and nurse have been sent.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Dr. Burg delivered a lecture on cholera to-night. He showed that persons employed in copper and bronze factories were never attacked. Dr. Burg recommends the cupric treatment of wearing flannel treated with copper salts.

AN IDYL OF THE BEACH.

"I never saw such a homely woman in all my life," said Snag to a stranger standing near him at Windsor Beach. "I should think her face would ache," at the same time pointing to a group of women. "The tallest one, near the tree," he continued, as he saw the stranger move about impatiently.

"H'm—ha—well—yes, that's my cousin."

"Did I say the tallest one near the tree? I don't mean her. The shorter one, near the large bluff."

"H'm, h'm—ha, ha—well, well—yes, yes—that's my aunt."

"You must have misunderstood me." apologized Snag. "I mean the short, dumpy woman, with a baby."

"Oh, taht's all right. That's my wife, Will you have something?"

TRADE TROUBLES

A Man Shot Dead During a Chicago Riot.

MILLS CLOSING DOWN

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug 13.—A further suspension of work in window glass factories after September 1 is probable. The usual two months' summer vacation will expire then, but as prices are low and demand limited, the manufactories are considering the advisability of prolonging the shut down till the middle of next month or 1st of October, when they look for a revival of trade. Table ware factories will resume next Monday, and the bottle houses September 1.

RIOT IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—This morning when non-union men to the number of forty, were to have taken the place of the strikers in Cribben & Sexton's stove foundry quit work and started for home in a body. they were followed by the strikers, hooting and jeering. The numbers of the latter constantly increased, and when some distance away the mob began throwing stones at the workmen, one of whose number fell with a gash in his head. A pistol shot followed and another fell with a bullet wound in his leg. The workmen who were all armed by their employers, then turned and fired a volley at their assailants. One of them was shot through the heart, and instantly killed. After about twenty shots had been fired the mob scattered, and the workmen went home. The dead man was named Hicks, and was from Pittsburg. He was a hard character, and had killed a man. Only one arrest was made.

He recently resigned the pastorate of Fullerton Avenue Church, the attendance having greatly fallen off on account of his extreme Calvinism. They leave four small children unprovided for.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S APPEARANCE.

New York World Cable.

Queen Victoria I saw twice while in England once on the platform of a railroad station and a second time walking in the grounds of Windsor Castle. The queen looked just as do her pictures, with the exception that her color and her eyes, her mouth and her gross figure all give her a very common appearance. There is nothing regal or even dignified in her manner nor walk. She wears very large shoes and dresses in deep mourning, with a widow's cap. She has no grace of figure nor outline and, in short, her whole appearence goes to disprove the theory that patrician birth is evidenced in appearence.

Joseph Rusan, Percy, writes: I was induced to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for a lameness which troubled me for four or five years, and I found it the best article I ever used. It has been a great blessing to me." Frauds may imitate Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in appearance and name, but in everything else they are dead failures.

By some means the weapon was not securely fastened in the break off, and when Beattie discharged the gun, the load and cartridge flew backwards in his face, completely destroying one of his eyes, and very little hopes are entertained by the medical attendants of saving the other.

YACHT CLUB—OKAS WIN.

A meeting of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club was held last evening at Hambly's to wind up the business of the late regatta. A letter was read from the measurer of the Kingston Yacht Club claiming an allowance of one minute for the Laura from the Iolanthe, which time allowance would give the Kingston boat the second prize by about 14 seconds. The judges declined to accept this new measurement because (1) The Laura sailed at Oswego and Kingston under her former measurement. (2) The owner of the yacht before leaving here agreed to accept the measurement made by Mr. Evans, and (3) the figures of the last measurement are not correct. According to this measurement the Iolanthe only had to allow the Laura 40s, which would have given the Belleville boat the race by six seconds. This the judges adhered to and awarded the prizes as follows: Surprise first, $100; Iolanthe second, $50; Laura third, $25. A communication from Mr. R. S. Bell, tendering his resignation as Secretary, was read and referred back to him for reconsideration. The steamboat committee and the banquet committee reported when the club adjourned until Wednesday evening.

The final in the double sculls was contested by crews from Toronto, Troy, Harrisburg and Boston. The Torontos (Enright and O'Connor) won in 9.01¼, Boston second, Troy third. The deciding heat in the senior fours was between the Argonauts of Toronto, Columbias of Washington, Wahwahtahsees of Michigan, and Watkins. The Wahwahtahsees were the favorites. The Argonauts won by five lengths in 8:28¼, the best time on record. The Columbias were second and Wahwahtahsees third. In the final heat senior sculls singles, Buckley and O'Connell of Portland and Joseph Laing of Montreal started. Laing was the favorite. Laing won in 9:33¼, O'Connell second. ASSAULTED BY A MANIAC.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill, Aug. 13.—Thomas Henchie, recently released from an insane asylum, yesterday climbed into a wagon in which there were three farmers. He threw his arm around Julius Perkins' neck and drew a knife twice across his throat. Perkins fell out of the wagon and the maniac pounced upon John Colvin in a similar manner inflicting a less severe wound in the throat when he also fell out of the wagon. Colvin's father jumped out just in time to escape the knife. The lunatic laid the whip to the team. Nothing has been seen of him since. Perkins will probably die.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

HIS DEATH, AND THE HEIRS OF THE LINE.

Arthur Richard Wellesley, Duke of Wellington, who dropped dead at a railway station in Brighton, England, yesterday, was the second of that line, his father the distinguished military commander, having received his Dukedom as a reward for signal services performed on behalf of the British nation. The deceased, who was well advanced in years, recently edited seventeen volumes of his father's despatches and memoranda. He never took a very active part in public affairs.

The present death raises to the ducal dignity the eldest living nephew of the late duke, Henry Wellesley, a Lieut. Colonel in the Grenadier Guard's and formerly a Member of Parliament for Andover. The new heir presumptive is the new Duke's younger brother, Lieut-Col. Arthur Charles Wellesley, of the Grenadier guards, whose domestic life has been clouded by a sad scandal. He was married twelve years ago to Miss Kathleen Williams, by whom he has three children, now aged respectively eleven, eight and five, years. After a few years of martial propriety, the dashing grenadier became enamoured of Kate Vaughan, a pretty and popular danseuse at the Gaiety theatre. Last summer he accompanied her upon her provincial tour and the scandal became so notorious that Mrs. Wellesley had no difficulty in obtaining a divorce on the ground of adultery. The climax of Col Wellesley's infatuation for the pretty dancer was reached a few weeks ago, when he made her his wife. As there is now but one life between Col. Wellesley and the dukedom it is not at all impossible that the whilom queen of the ballet may yet wear the coronet of a duchess.

ODDFELLOWS GRAND LODGE.

Parade and Drill—Finances and Membership.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 14.—The grand lodge I. O. O. F. met yesterday with an address of welcome to the city by Mayor Horton. A reply was made by Grand Master Mecdiarmid. The lodge adjourned to take part in the grand parade to the fair grounds, where 5,000 or 6,000 people assembled to witness the uniform encampment drill and games. Drill competition or a prize of $250 was won by the London encampment, Hamilton taking second and Toronto third.

The grand master and grand secretary presented their annual reports to-night. They are both carefully prepared documents and go minutely into the standing of the order. The receipts for the year ending July 19, including $4,835 on hand on July 20, 1883, were $13,288, and there is a balance on hand of $5,233. On June 30, 1884, there was a total membership of 14,483, divided into 203 lodges, or an average membership of 69 81.

THAT MILITIA SQUABBLE.

GEN. MIDDLETON ASKS CAPT. HODGINS TO APOLOGIZE.

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—The first case of insubordination in connection with the militia since Major General Middleton assumed control came up yesterday afternoon. As already stated the parties concerned were Major McPherson, in temporary command of the Governor General's Guards, and Capt. Hodgins, adjutant of the same regiment. Two documents of an insulting character were sent to McPherson by Hodgins. The reason for Hodgins action was due to the fact that he belonged to the Tilton Junior, Major Wing's Regiment, who is endeavoring to oust McPherson. The result was that Hodgins was suspended. Yesterday both appeared before Gen. Middleton. Hodgins, in his defence, said that as both concerned were Government employees the letters complained of were not official documents. The Major General pointed out that this was mere quibbling, seeing that he (Hodgins) signed himself Adjutant. As to the excuse that Hodgins thought differently from Macpherson, Middleton quickly informed the Captain that he had no right to think for his commander. His duty was merely to obey, and as the letters complained of were of a most injudicious character, he would give Hodgins until 1 o'clock to-day to tender a full and ample apology. It is understood that the latter has submitted a letter of regret to headquarters at noon. The outcome of the affair is that all good soldiers in the regiment and elsewhere are delighted to see that Gen. Middleton, although in less offensive form, is determined to uphold discipline in the militia force.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public, and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine, sold by all druggists.

The curative power of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is too well known to require the specious aid of any exaggerated or fictitious certificate. Witnesses of its marvellous cures are to-day living in every city and hamlet in the land. Write for names if you want home evidence.

MEDICAL MEN'S FEES.

Is a Patient Liable to Pay a Consulting Doctor?

JUDGE FRALICK'S JUDGMENT.

At the Division Court to-day before Judge Fralick was tried the case of Dr. Farley v. Asa Ketcheson, an action to recover $3, the amount of an account for medical aid. Dr. Burdett was called in to amputate the fingers of Ketcheson's hand. Whether at the attending doctor's request or not is not known, but Ketcheson's brother went for Dr. Farley, who came and assisted, in the operation. Dr. Burdett's bill amounted to $15, which Ketcheson paid, but having the idea that he was then paying as much as the operation was worth he declined to pay Dr. Farley's account of $3. He thought Dr. Farley should look to Dr. Burdett for his pay. Mr. Ketcheson acknowledged however that Dr. Farley had rendered him good service. In order to test the legal liability of Ketcheson to pay the second physician this suit was brought. For the plaintiff Drs. Hope and Gibson testified that the usual practice was for the patient to pay the consulting physician. For the defence Drs. Burdett and Wilson testified that the attending physician usually accounted to the consulting physician. They thought the charges in this case amply to pay the second doctor. It so happened that in this case there were three doctors, Dr. Carlett being also called in by somebody.

His Honor non-suited the plaintiff, holding that a patient could be held responsible only for the physician he engaged.

This judgment is important as the question was tried for the first time, and it is of great interest to the public.

The question is now raised who would be responsible for the fees of a physician in a case where the patient is unconscious and incapable of engaging anyone? As a matter of general practice the patient it is understood always pays for consultations and as a rule his wishes are not ascertainable.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-invigorate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable.

J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

She was telling him all—everything.

The letter was to wait him on his arrival.

As swift as thought, the Creole had decided it should never reach his hand.

'No,' she reflected fiercely half aloud, 'I will not have my shame published to his ears, and by her. We will fly to-night, we will escape. There will be no turning back on her part now'

Her heart full of jealousy, she sped on heedless, until abruptly recalled to caution by the sound of a step approaching stealthily, as it seemed, towards her.

Fortunately she was near an extensive group of laurels.

In a second she had forced herself in among them, and was crouching down out of sight.

Her heart palpitating with dread.

Who could it be?

Stuart Loring?

A moment would tell, for the steps still advanced.

They came nearer—nearer.

At length they were directly opposite the Creole's place of hiding.

Eagerly she peered through the bushes.

She could but perceive the shadowy outline of a man.

Still it was enough for recognition.

She sank back, trembling, sick, almost loosing consciousness, with difficulty checking the cry that had started to her lips.

It was Jabez Scladden.

Not only then had he spies but he was on the watch himself.

After the first sensation of swooning horror, the thought of her danger recalled her strength and energy. Waiting until her enemy, her master had proceded far enough away she stepped back into the path and rapidly went on.

Two minutes later she was in sight of the huts, their position indicated by a few lights scattered here and there.

She knew the place well and passed quickly to one standing nearest and apart from the rest.

It belonged to an aged negress, whom many years before, her father had purchased out of compassion, as she lacked the power of speech.

When too old for work, he had given her the hut to live in and had not only provided for her comforts during his life but after his death.

One of the few lights burned there.

The old negress was yet up.

Taking care to avoid passing the window the Creole approaching the door knocked.

Then, not waiting a reply, she lifted the latch and entered.

It is I, Nubia,' she said; 'I wish to speak to you particularly.

CHAPTER XXVI.

NUBIA—THE CREOLE'S QUEST.

The negress who had risen at Juliette Beauchamp's entrance, was a decrepid woman of nearly eighty.

Her stature was short and bowed; her figure thin and bony to haggardness, while her ebony complexion was heightened by a shock of grey woolly hair about which was bound with a suspicion of vanity a brilliant scarlet cotton handkerchief.

Every feature betrayed advanced years save the eyes, they were bright, small, restless, and denoted avarice, cruelty, and greed.

At beholding who was her visitor, she dropped a courtesy in which, however, was scant courtesy, then dusting a chair she placed it for her visitor.

Securing the door, Juliette motioned the negress back to her seat, when taking hers close by, she remarked instinctively leaning forward and sinking her voice—

'Nubia, when I saw you yesterday, I said 'good-by,' I believed for good, but you see I have come again.'

The negress nodded, grinned and jibbered some unintelligible sounds between her lips.

The Creole paused, then, after a brief reflection proceeded—

'Nubia, I want you to be a great service —a great one.'

The negress nodded her wolly head.

Again Juliette hesitated; afterwards bending closer to the other's ear, she whispered hurriedly.

Nubia listened, started back, fixed her small bright eyes, inquiringly, almost with fear upon her visitor.

There was silence; the two looked at each other.

'Well?' asked the Creole.

The negress shook her head.

'Nubia,' responded the Creole, decidedly resting her white hand on the negress's arm, 'I must have it, do you hear?—I must.'

The other slowly repeated her motion of negation, following the action touching her companion meaningly on the bosom.

The Creole understood. With a smile she rejoiced—

'No, have no fear of that. As I told you, it may never be needed—never, yet circumstances might arise to necessitate it. An impressive necessity,' she added with emphasis. 'To-morrow, Nubia possibly you may know more; but be assured of this, you run no risk; neither,' she went on after a slight effective silence, 'do I. No time must be be lost now, for I have none to loose. There is danger if I stay. Let me have it and be gone.

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."
—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY

is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co, make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box. 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure See adv't in another column.

Oh, the roses in the tumbler on the dusty office desk!
Oh, the air they give the tumbler—don't they make it picturesque.

Oh, the perfume of those roses, as it floats upon the air,
Oh, the smell of printer's ink that meets it nearly everywhere!

Oh, the little patch of color, and its rosy loveliness,
Bright against the grimy pallor of rejected MSS.

Oh, the breath of country fragrance—oh, the flush of country light—
Come to cheer the town where three poor town bound devils sit and write!

Oh, the softly flushing petals that the weary breezes stir!
Oh, the little girl whose cheeks—but, no, we will not speak of her.

The population of the Northwest is becoming mixed. There are Indians, half-breeds, immigrants from Whitechapel, crofters from Outer Hebrides, Icelanders, Russian Jews, Mennonites, Dominion office holders and deaf mutes; and the Winnipeg Free Press announces that seventy-five New Zealanders are on the way up.

In the Northwest Council a bill has been introduced respecting controverted elections. The principal provisions contained in the bill provide that a protest must be commenced within two months from the date of the election, that the papers be transmittd to the Lieutenant-Governor, and that a deposit of $500 accompany the papers as a refresher. The bill was read and ordered to be engrossed.

A small potato crop is predicted by the Portage papers. A small area only was planted, and a grub or dry rot is affecting the growing crops. The plants commence to rot at the bottom and finally die away altogether, leaving the young tubers unmatured and liable to rot also. There are a great many fields of potatoes in the Portage affected, and it is reported that those in the country are in the same condition. Some of the Winnipeg potato raisers also make the same complaint.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—

I have used Shakar Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Sanborn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Balfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE RECENT PRINTERS' STRIKE in Toronto is acknowledged to be a complete failure in so far as the two great morning papers are concerned. The men are worse off than before they went out. Labor's universal motto "union is strength," is discredited very often by the absence of union among the men, and those printers who voluntarily went back to work are now blamed for the failure of the strike. As in the case of the telegraphers they now have to take what is offered. Of this fact there can be no doubt: labor receives no protection from Government; it must take care of itself.

MR. SAMUEL MONTAGUE, an influential Hebrew banker of London, accompanied by Rev. Dr. Asher, a leading co-religionist, are expected to arrive in Montreal in a fortnight with the object of concluding negotiations with the Dominion Government for the establishment of colonies in the Northwest of their persecuted brethren from the Russian Empire. If the Dominion Government profits by experience it will give no aid whatever to such a scheme. About two years ago a number of refugee Jews were sent to the Northwest and it was found that they did not thrive there, speedily becoming destitute and necessitating appeals to their benevolent brethren.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUES.

Events as Pictured in the Queen's Speech.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Parliament was prorogued to-day. The Queen, in her closing Speech said:—

I sincerely regret that an important part of your labors failed to result in legislative enactment. Friendly intercourse subsists with all foreign Powers. Diplomatic relations have been resumed in Mexico and a preliminary agreement for a treaty of commerce has been signed. I lament the failure of the Conference to devise means to restore the finances of Egypt, which are so important to the well-being and good order of the country. I shall continue to fulfil faithfully the duties growing out of the presence of my troops in the Valley of the Nile. I trust the special mission I have determined to send there will materially aid me in considering what steps to adopt. I view with unabated satisfaction the mitigation and diminution of the agrarian crime in Ireland and the substantial improvement in the condition of the people. I design at an early period to call your attention to the great subject of the representation of the people. I rejoice to observe, amid numerous indications of interest in the subject, constant proofs of loyalty to the throne and respect for law. These indications inspire me with with full belief that the great national aim will be pursued with order and moderation—best securities for such settlement as may conduce to the happiness and liberties of the people and the strength of the empire.

The speech closes with an expression of thankfulness for the favorable season which is alleviating the pressure that has so long and seriously affected agricultural industry.

The Pall Mall Gazette says Parliament will reassemble on the 15th of September.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

THE MAJORITY RULE.

However harrowing it may be to our ideas of what 'English Rule' should be, the English of Montreal have nevertheless, to be governed by the circumstances of the situation. The majority is French, and the majority is ruling and will continue to rule.—Montreal Herald.

THE LAST DITCH.

The National policy was to cure all the financial and business ills in the country It has not done so. The Conservatives are afraid to meet the evidence against them, and they declare that that those who publish descriptions of exact condition of things in Canada to-day are injuring the country. But are we to pay four or five million dollars a year extra taxes and not endeavor to discern what our taxation is bringing us? Surely the Conservatives are not afraid of testing the National Policy on its merits. The fact is the cry of injuring the country is a wornout party cry. It has been used against every man who has sought to improve the condition of any institution in Canada, or sought to enlarge the field of public thought, or to rouse the public spirit of the country against false systems. A party which has now to use this cry against its opponents has reached the last ditch.—St. John Globe,

PIN THEM TO THE POINT.

There can be no evading the point—If the depression of 1874 79 was due to the policy of the Mackenzie Government, the present depression must be due to the National Policy of the present Government. It is indisputable that the collapse of the cotton industry is due mainly, if not wholly to the operations of the National Policy; and it is a noteworthy fact that the most highly protected industries are those which are suffering more seriously. The Tory journals had better give up their protesting and accept the situation. They tacitly confess the failure of the N. P. as a remedial agent by hoping for a revival of trade from the anticipated good harvest.—[Moncton Transcript.

IS SIR TILLEY SEEKING COVER.

The carshops in London, Ont., have to grie, though the assignee will complete its contracts The tall chimneys are having a hard time of it. Faith in the saving power of the National Policy has been abandoned and the country's hopes are now centered in the harvest. The Americans with their infinite variety of products have been able to stand up against protection for five and twenty years. but it has knocked us out in five. Sir Leonard is wise in accepting the Lieutenant-Governorship of New Brunswick. He has a marvellous instinct for getting out of the rain. He took took the governorship at time of the Pacific Scandal exposure, in 1873, when it looked as though Conservatism had sunk to rise no more; and now is about to seek that comfortable seclusion again when it has become impossible for him amid the crash of falling industries to defend or excuse the tariff. It would be a manlier in him to stand his ground and face the storm, but he is evidently a weak and selfish man.—[Winnipeg Sun.

THE ROCK ON WHICH MANY A constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are, terribly exhausting of vital stamina. Its true epetic is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies. female ailments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

DRESS REFORM.

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—Mrs. E. M. King, Secretary of the Rational Dress Association of Great britain, and Miss Glen, created a sensation on King street yesterday by parading it in semi male attire. They wore serviceable soft hats, plain felt shoes and costumes of studied neatness and simplicity, with trousers after the fashion of men's instead of the conventional skirts, but of feminine material and pleated to give it a less masculine appearance.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Minister of Education's Address to Ontario Teachers.

PRACTICAL IDEAS AND SOUND COMMON SENSE.

The Minister of Education in his address as President before the Ontario Teachers' Association formulates the following as, to his mind, the requisites of a public school curriculum:

1 Every pupil should be taught to read intelligently the literature of the day—not merely to know the words, but to understand their meaning, and to give to each word its proper force and vocal significance.

2 To write neatly and legibly, in proper form an ordinary business letter.

3 To spell correctly. not, of course, all the words in the dictionary, but at least such words as are of common use in commercial circles and in every-day conversation.

4 To make such calculations in arithmetic, rapidly and accurately, as might be required in the daily business of the merchant, the farmer or the artisan.

5 To know the history of his own country minutely, and such general historical facts as may be said to have exercised a wide influence in shaping the destinies of other nations.

6 To have such a knowledge of places as would localize his knowledge of the history, climate, productions and races of other countries.

7 To be so trained in the art of composition as to be able to express clearly, either on paper or orally, the knowledge he possesses.

8 To be able to delineate pictorially what cannot be as well expressed in words.

This curriculum is in force in the Province. There is, says Mr. Ross, nothing new in its outline: but there is much that is new in detail. This he proceeds to show. He argues that English should have a higher place than it now occupies in the liberal education of the English people, and in this position he is at one with the leading educationists of the age. What matters it if a boy is taught Greek, if he cannot read and write his native language correctly? Or what benefit will it be to a girl that she has a smattering of French or Italian, if her English education has been subordinated to these acquirements? The foreign tongues she may never be called upon to use, or if an opportunity presents itself there is no guarantee that she will be understood; while if she is a poor English scholar she will be humiliated whenever thrown into educated and refined society.

Another excellent contention of the Minister of Education is that the useful should supercede the ornamental and that the theoretical should give place to the practical. The average rural school contains from 10 to 13 classes, and it is most important that the teacher's time should not be fritted away in idle embellishments to the neglect of the substantial and the necessary. Then too, in this connection it has to be remembered that the school term of the average scholar is very short. Only 2 per cent. of the Public School pupils enter the Fifth Reader, and it may fairly be presumed that the majority of the half million attending the Public Schools leave before reaching 15 years of age. "Are," asks the Minister, "we doing them justice, or are we doing justice to those who bear the burdens of taxation if we fail to consider this circumstance." Futher on in his admirable address, Mr. Ross argues in favor of the Public School education being complete in itself, so as to fit for a career of public usefulness those who desire to go no further, or whose parents are not able to keep them at school for a longer period.

KILLED ON THE G.T.R.

MERRITON, Aug. 15.—The mangled remains of a young man were found on the track in the G.T.R. yards here yesterday morning. It is supposed he attempted to board a west bound train at 2:30 a.m., and was thrown under the wheels where his body was cut completely in two. From letters found on the body he is supposed to have been Charles M. Adams, of Eccles, England. He appeared about 40, and had but two cents in his pockets. The coroner deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guarranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes.

CARING FOR ITS EMPLOYES.

Superannuation and Provident Societies of the Grand Trunk.

The Grand Trunk railway company has now a superannuation fund and also an insurance and provident society. The superannuation fund was started in 1874. The members consist of salaried officers, clerks, passenger or frieght agents, telegraph operators, road masters, inspectors and locomotive firemen: The officers and employes contribute 2½ per cent. on their salary and the company a like sum. The money is all invested on real estate at 6 per cent. The fund has just been reported upon by two London actuaries, who state that it is formed and worked upon a solid basis. The receipts from 1874 to date, amount to about $150,000, T. B. Hawson, traffic auditor, is secretary of this fund.

Hitherto the Grand Trunk had a fund for accidents only for their employes, to which the company largely contributed. In nine years the fund has paid out $285,000 for indemnity claims and medical accounts. The Great Western had a provident fund for sickness and insurance by death levies.

The insurance and provident society which has just been formed, and which goes into force at once, provides that all persons who were, on the 1st July, 1884, contributors to the Grand Trunk railway employes insurance fund or members of the Great Western railway provident society; and all employes entering the service of the Grand Trunk railway company after the 1st July, 1884, provided their ages do not exceed 40 years, and also provided their employment be not temporary shall be members of the 'Grand Trunk railway insurance and provident society,' and shall continue members as long as they shall remain in the service of the company, provided that membership be optional on the part of employes who, under the rules of the company, contribute towards 'the Grand Trunk railway of Canada superannuation and provident fund association of 1874.' The fees are 33 cents per month, except in the case of conductors, train baggagemen, brakemen enginemen, firemen, yardmen and switchmen, who pay 43 cents per month. Sick allowance is granted at the rate of $3 per week for 26 weeks, and thereafter until the chief medical officer certifies that the member is incurable or permanently disabled or unfit for work, when he shall be paid the sum of $100, and shall no longer have any claim upon the sick fund and shall cease to contribute thereto.

As regards insurance, there are six classes; every member must join one of the classes, and at death his family or representatives receive sums according to the class in which he is insured, varying from $260 to $2,000. In the event of an employee leaving the company's service and who has been a member of the society he will be permitted to continue his payments and receive all advantages, provided he remains within the limits of the Dominion, in the Northern States of America or Europe. In the case of the death of a member a levy of so much per head is made on the surviving members, according to the class they belong to.

The company will also contribute out of its revenue a sum in aid of the sick benefits and allowances of the society, and in consideration thereof the rules and all alterations which may be made in them shall be subject to the approval of the directors of the Grand Trunk railway company.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns. and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

DROWNED WHILE BATHING.

HAMILTON, Aug. 15.—A lad 14 years old named Arthur Johnson, was drowned in the bay while bathing. The cause of the drowning is a mystery. The two lads who were with Johnson say that after undressing he jumped in and did not arise to the surface again for a number of seconds; when he did come up he appeared to be helpless and at once sank again. It is thought that Johnson was in a great heat and was seized with cramps immediately on striking the water; or possibly he struck a piece of sunken timber and for the time being was knocked insensible.

A BODY OF ONE OF THE ARCTIC EXPLORERS EXHUMED.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Post mortem examination of Kislingbury's body was made in the chapel of Mount Hope cemetery to-day. The body was packed in cotton batting and wrapped in cotton sewed together in a woolen blanket. The body weighed less then fifty pounds. The head was perfect, but from the neck to the feet every particle of muscle, flesh and skin had been cut off with some sharp instrument to the bones. The flesh on the hands and feet was perfect and not decomposed. The fact of canibalism was most completely proven. After the examination the remains were put back into the casket and again lowered to the grave.

It has worked wonders for me, and I want another supply for my friends, &c."

She is said to resemble the Queen more than the other children, and to be more like her grandmother in character as well.

THE NEW STEAMER.

Description of the "Ida" to be Launched to-morrow at Deseronto.

From our own Correspondent.

DESERONTO, Aug. 15.—To-morrow is expected to be a red letter day in the history of this thriving village, the occasion being the launching of the handsome steamer Ida, which was built for Captain Garratt. There will be excursions from Picton, Napanee and Belleville. The Tribune to-day gives the dimensions of the new vessel as follows:—Length of keel, 85 ft.; over all, 90 ft.; breadth of beam, 20 ft.; depth of hold, 7 ft.; draft of water 4 ft. 6 in.; width at water line, 17 ft. Her carrying capacity will be 150 tons and she can accommodate about 250 passengers. She has been handsomely fitted up in good style with the latest modern improvements and no expense has been spared by Capt. Garratt to have his new vessel complete in all her appointments. There are seven state rooms for passengers on the upper cabin, each room having double berths. The cabin is made of pannel work both outside and in. There is a large dinningroom 23 ft. long and 15 ft. wide, having waiters and wash room attached. The officers' rooms are on the main deck and have been designed with a view to comfort as well as neatness. The boiler, engine and machinery were constructed by the firm of Black Bros., of Brockville and are of most substantial character. She will attain a speed of an easy ten miles an hour. The work has been done in a most painstaking and substantial manner under the supervision of Mr. Wm. Evans. The new steamer, which takes its name from Miss Ida Garratt, the daughter of the owner, is intended to ply on the route from Kingston to Ottawa once a week, and from Smith Falls to Kingston twice a week.

'Are you the manager of the cable?'

'I am, sir.'

'Well, I am Dr. Hamilton Griffin, stepfather and business manager of Miss Mary Anderson, the promising young Kentucky actress.'

'Sit down, sir; what can we do for you to-day.'

'I would like to have you send a small item to the American papers.'

'Certainly, with pleasure; is Miss Mary about to join a nunnery, or is she engaged to wed a British juke?'

'Neither; those tricks, I regret to say, are played out. I think you'd better announce that she has eloped with Melrose Abbey, brother of Westminster and Henry E. Abbey. And here, by the way, are a couple of matinee tickets for you.'

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon reinstate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

CHOLERA

—IS—

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa, Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

"DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swaton, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask for the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other. y 2md&w

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

As she spoke she held her open hand towards the negress.

On the small palm glittered several golden coins the sight of which made the old woman's toothless mouth water, and her beady eyes sparkle with cupidity, while her black, clawlike fingers crooked to seize the gold.

Juliette's persuasion, even her command might have failed in effect, but the sight of the coins was irresistible.

The bony hand clutched at the treasures but the Creole's fingers closed quickly, firmly upon it.

'No,' she said. 'I must first be sure that I am to have what I require, Nubia.'

There was no hesitation now. Almost nimbly the negress arose, and imperatively motioned her guest to conceal her eyes. The Creole instantly complied; where upon the hag hobbled her bowed form to a low bed covered with a check coverlet that stood on one side of the room. With feeble hands she drew it noiselessly from the wall, passed between the latter and the couch, and kneeling, disappeared a few seconds from sight.

Juliette would have much liked to have watched her but there were not many things more wild, more mad, more demoniacal than Nubia when her fury was aroused.

On such occasions she was no respecter of persons, and not only the slaves, but others fled from before her rage. Besides the visitor desired for her own interest to keep the hag in an amiable mood, therefore she carefully kept her eyes concealed.

In a short time she heard the bed cautiously pushed back, and Nubia returning stood before her.

'Have you it?' asked the Creole.

Nubia nodding held toward her a small folded paper.

Carefully opening it, Juliette regarded the contents—a fine powder of a greyish hue.

'Is this really—truly it, Nubia? You are not deceiving me?' she asked attentively scrutinizing the other's features.

The negress again nodded, and touched her forehead, bowing her head before a grotesque image, reverentially, which, placed on a bracket, represented Nubia's fetish.

With the negress this was a solemn oath and Juliette knew she might be trusted.

Having concealed the paper in her pocketbook, she dropped the coins in the hagg's dusky palm.

With a guttural cry of joy, Nubia sank into her chair, flung the gold into her lap, and began moving her bony fingers among it.

The Creole regarded her with sickening disgust.

What use was the money to the hag, whose days were soon to be ended?

Yet those few days of life she would have given for its possession.

'Farewell, Nubia,' she said, drawing her shawl about her, approaching the door.

But the negress heard her not.

Jibbering with delighted cupidity she was deaf to everything but the ring of the metal,

The Creole opened the door and passed out into the night.

The unexpected appearance of Jabez Scladden rendered her as cautious in her return as she had been in her coming.

She trembled each step she took lest she should again encounter her master.

She used the word herself.

She did so, for while it sickened her it aroused her indignation giving both strength and energy for the work to come.

Were she discovered by him, she was aware he had as yet no power to to touch her. but she dreaded that her being abroad at that time of night might create suspicion in his crafty brain of the truth, and putting him on the alert, frustrate Stuart Loring's scheme for their escape.

The darkness or Jabez Scladden's evil genius, befriended her.

She reached the house in safety, and entered as she had left it, unobserved.

Stealing up to her apartment she locked herself in.

Lighting the lamp, she took out the folded paper, produced a silken bag she had already prepared. and placing the farmer in the latter, and suspended it around her neck, concealing it well out of sight.

'Now, I feel safe,' she said. with a sudden lighting up of her beautiful countenance. 'for I possess that which can rescue me from shame, from degradation. My life is in my own hands; but a few, few grains and all is over.'

Were those few grains ever to be used? If so upon whom?

That it is the purpose of this story to reveal.

Scarcely had she completed her task, when, as the clock struck ten. a knock came at the door.

It was Keziah,

The moment so full of anxiety and suspense, was drawing near to start.

The Creole knew her liberty or her life were on the balance.

Which was it to be?

CHAPTER XXVII.

As the Creole admitted Keziah, she asked her carelessly whether she had knocked before.

'No, Missy Julie; I saw your window was dark, and Missy Pauline said you were taking a rest.

ADVERTISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,
Religious and secular. It is

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's, own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. THE WITNESS STAND.

Power of the Gospel Proved by Living Testimony.

SERMON BY REV. DR. TALMAGE.

"We are witnesses. —Acts iii. 15.

In the days of George Stevenson, the perfector of the locomotive engine, the scientists proved conclusively that a railway train could never be driven by steam power successfully and without peril; but the rushing express trains from Liverpool to Edinburgh, and from Edinburgh to London, have made all the nation witnesses of the splendid achievement. Machinists and navigators proved conclusively that a steamer could never cross the Atlantic Ocean; but no sooner had they successfully proved the impossibility of such an undertaking than the work was done, and the passengers on the Cunard, and the Inman, and the National, and the White Star lines are witnesses. There went up a guffaw of wise laughter at Professor Morse's proposition to make the lightning of heaven an errand boy, and it was proved conclusively that the thing could never be done; but now all the news of the wide world by Associated Press put in your hands every morning and night, has made

ALL NATIONS WITNESSES.

So in the time of Christ it was proved conclusively that it was impossible for Him to rise from the dead. It was shown logically that when a man was dead, he was dead, and the heart and the liver and the lungs had ceased to perform their offices, the limbs would be rigid beyond all power of friction or arousal. They showed it to be an absolute absurdity that the dead Christ should ever get up alive; but no sooner had they proved this than the dead Christ arose, and the disciples beheld Him, heard His voice, and talked with Him, and they took the witness stand to prove that to be true which the wiseacres of the day had proved to be impossible; the record of the experiment and of the testimony is in the text: 'Him hath God raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses.' Now, let me play the sceptic for a moment. There is no God,' says the sceptic, 'for I have never seen Him with my physical eyesight. Your Bible is a pack of contradictions. There never was a miracle. Lazarus was not raised from the dead and the water was never turned into wine. Your religion is an imposition on the credulity of the ages.' There is an aged man moving in that pew as though he would like to respond. Here are hundreds of people with faces a little flushed at these announcements, and all through this house there is a suppressed feeling which would like to speak out in behalf of the truth of our glorious Christianity, as in the days of the text crying out, 'We are witnesses!' The fact is, that if this world is ever brought to God, it will not be through argument, but through testimony. You might cover the whole earth with apologies for Christianity and learned treatises in defence of religion—you would not convert a soul. Lectures on the harmony between science and religion are beautiful mental discipline but have never saved a soul. Put a man of the world and a man of the Church against each other, and the man of the world will in all probability get the trump. There are a thousand things in our religion that seem illogical to the world, and always will seem illogical. Our weapon in this conflict is faith, not metaphysics; faith, not profundity; faith, not scholastic exploration. But then, in order to have faith, we must have testimony, and if five hundred men or one thousand men, or five hundred thousand men, or five million men get up and tell me that they have felt the religion of Jesus Christ a joy a comfort, a help, an inspiration, I am bound as a fair minded man to accept their testimony. I want just now to put before you three propositions the truth of which I think this audience will attest with overwhelming unanimity. The first proposition is, We are witnesses that the religion of Christ is able to convert a soul. The Gospel may have had a hard time to conquer us, we may have fought it back, but we were vanquished. You say conversion is only an imaginary thing. We know better. 'We are witnesses.' There never was so great a change in our heart and life on any other subject as on this. We were so proud that no man could have humbled us; we were so hard that no earthly power could have melted us; angels of God were all around about us, they could not overcome us; but one day, perhaps at a Methodist anxious seat, or at a Presbyterian catechetical lecture, or at a burial, or on horse back, a power seized us; and made us get down, and make us tremble, and make us kneel, and make us cry for mercy, and we tried to wrench ourselves away from the grasp, but we could not. It flung us flat, and when we arose we were as much changed as Georgis, the heathen, who went into a prayer-meeting with a dagger and a gun, to disturb the meeting and destroy it, but the next day was found crying, 'Oh! my great sins! Oh! my great Saviour!' and for eleven years preached the Gospel of Christ to his fellow-mountaineers, the last words on his dying lips being, 'free grace!' Oh, it was free grace! There is a man who was for ten years a hard drinker. The dreadful appetite had sent down its roots around the palate and the tongue, and on down until they were interlinked with the vitals of body, mind, and soul; but he has not taken any stimulants for two years. What did that? Not temperance societies. Not prohibition laws. Not moral suasion, Conversion did it. 'Why,' said one upon whom the great change had come, 'sir, I feel just as though I were somebody else!' Again, I remark that 'we are witnesses of the Gospel's

FAITH, NOT LOGIC;

POWER TO COMFORT.

When a man has trouble the world comes in and says, 'Now get your mind off this; go out and breathe the fresh air; plunge deeper into business.' What poor advice. Get your mind off of it! when everything is upturned with the bereavement, and everything reminds you of what you have lost. Get your mind off of it! They might as well advise you to stop thinking. You cannot stop thinking, and you cannot stop thinking in that direction. Take a walk in the fresh air! Why, along that very street or that very road, she once accompanied you. Out of that grass-plot she plucked flowers, or into that show window she looked, fascinated, saying, 'Come see the pictures.' Go into deeper business! Why, she was associated with all your business ambition, and since she has gone you have no ambition left. Oh, this is a clumsy world when it tries to comfort a broken heart. I can build a Corliss's engine. I can paint a Raphael's 'Madonna,' I can play a Beethoven's 'Eroica Symphony' as easily as this world can comfort a broken heart. And yet you have been comforted. How was it done? Did Christ come to you and say, 'Get your mind off this; go out and breathe the fresh air; plunge deeper into business?' No. There was a minute when he came to you—perhaps in the watches of the night, perhaps in your place of business, perhaps along the street—and he breathed something into your soul that gave peace, rest, infinite quiet, so that you could take out the photograph of the departed one and look into the eyes and the face of the dear one and say, 'It is all right; she is better off; I would not call her back. Lord, I thank Thee that Thou has comforted my poor heart. Again, I remark that we are witnesses of the fact that religion has power to give composure in the last moment. I never shall forget the first time I confronted death. We went across the cornfields in the country. I was led by my father's hand, and we came to the farmhouse where the bereavement had come, and we saw the crowd of waggons and carriages; but there was one carriage that especially attracted my boyish attention, and it had black plumes, I said, 'What's that? what's that? Why those black tassels at the the top?' and after it was explained to me, I was lifted up to look upon the bright face of an angel Christain woman, who three days before before had departed in triumph; the whole scene made an impression I never forgot. In our sermons and in our lay exortations we are very apt when we bring illustrations of dying triumph, to go back to some distinguished personage—to a John Knox or a Harriet Newell. But I want you for a witnesses' I want to know if you have ever seen anything to make you believe that the religion of Christ can give composure

IN THE FINAL HOUR,

Come, all ye who have seen the last moments of a Christain, and give testimony in this cause on trial. Uncover your heads, put your hand on the old family Bible from which they used to read the promises, and promise in the presence of the high heaven that you will tell the truth the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. With what you have seen with your own eyes, and from what you have heard with your own ears, is there power in this Gospel to give calmness and triumph in the last exigency? The response comes from all sides, from young, and old, and middle-aged: 'We are witnesses!' You see, my friends, I have not put before you to-night an abstraction, or a chimera, or anything like guess-work. I present you affidavits of the best men and women, living and dead. Two witnesses in court will establish a fact. Here are not two witnesses, but thousands of witnesses—on earth millions of witnesses, and in heaven a great multitude of witnesses that no man can number, testifying that there is power in this religion to convert the soul, to give comfort in trouble, and to afford composure in the last hour.

PURE BLOOD

Is the absolute necessity of health.

The marvellous results of Shaker Blood Syrup upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures) prove it the best blood medicine. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. Shaker Blood Syrup purifies the blood cures dyspepsia, cures biliousness. A peculiar point in Shaker Blood Syrup is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

Toronto, February 10th, 1884.

Gentlemen,—
I have used Shaker Blood Syrup in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success, and am happy to tell you that it is the best medicine we ever used. I do sincerely advise any one who is troubled with scrofula to give this valuable remedy a trial, and assure them they will not be disappointed.

Very truly yours,
J. P. Santorn.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Balfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderson, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

PUBLIC POLICY AND PATRIOTISM.

Almost the sole reply we have from Conservative contemporaries to the articles pointing out the ignominious and complete failure of the policy of high taxation and protection is that the Grits are calamity hunters and in the case of local discussions, are "fouling their own nests." It would seem to the ordinary citizen that if a nest is foul it had better be taken into the sunshine and cleaned. The remarks quoted below from the Week are so pertinent that we deem them worth reproducing. That journal says:—Even the more level-headed observers who are inclined to take the Globe's anti-N.P. reports with the usual grain of salt cannot help seeing that the manner in which it is sought to impugn those statements serves rather to confirm the unfortunate tidings of trade depression. Could the N. P. be personified, one could easily understand how it might pray to be saved from its friends. The latter attempt to howl down the Globe returns by accusing that journal of unpatriotic conduct and of attempting to ruin the trade of the country for party purposes —a charge which, "not to put too fine a point upon it," is cool coming from the party which awarded similar treatment to Mr. Mackenzie. But, we are virtually told, one man may steal a horse whilst another must not look over the hedge. Everybody knows that the Globe's object is to discredit the Government's policy, and apart from the political morality of the scheme, in doing so it merely returns a Roland for an Oliver. But the clap-trap about ruining the credit of business men is too absurd to deceive the most superficial. Would the N. P. defenders wish us to believe that the exact financial condition of every firm mentioned is not known to the banks and to the mercantile agencies? How, then, could a newspaper report affect their commercial standing? Whilst not asserting the Globe's accuracy, he who runs may read how patently so called rebutting statements made in Tory organs are beside the mark, and how by quibbles the writers endeavor to misguide the public mind, The real patriot is not he who glosses over his countrymen's weaknesses or denies their faults, but rather is the man truly loyal who vigorously protests against a mistaken policy and endeavors to show what is ultimately best for the community at large." We trust our Conservative friends will take this to heart, and understand that in directing attention to the failure of a much vaunted policy we make an assertion which must be supported by facts bearing on the condition of the country. If such facts bear heavily on the country it should not be forgotten that they arise out of the mistaken policy the present Dominion Government have seen fit to inaugurate.

FOR THE LADIES.

FEMININE FASHIONS, GENERAL GOSSIP, AND HOME NOTES.

Dotted veils are out of style.

Chantilly is the coming lace.

Bangles are as popular as ever.

Bonnets grow smaller, hats larger.

Shot silks will be worn another season.

The skirts of little girls' dresses grow longer.

Snake bracelets have come into style again.

The fall fabrics show spotted and sprigged designs.

Light colored silk mitts are fashionable for little girls.

The Vandyke bang is fashionable for little boys under six,

It is said that trained dresses will be worn again in the fall.

Colored muslin and lawn toilets rival white for August wear.

Fastidious women declare that lace is becoming too popular.

There is a decided preference of yellow flowers at the moment.

White was never as much worn on the streets as this summer.

Woolen braid rosettes and bands trim many pretty seaside hats.

The Mother Hubbard bathing suit is suitable for slight figures only.

Spanish laces are to be set aside for real old Chantilly, revived for fall wear.

Dark blue serge remains the favorite fabric for yachting and mountain suits.

Pearl gray and mushroom colored mohair dresses are popular at seaside resorts.

All little girls' dresses are made now with skirts that reach well below the knees.

The baby waist is worn by nine-tenths of the young ladies at Saratoga this summer.

The Marie Antoinette fichu of lace or muslin, elaborately frilled with lace, is revived,

The three cornered kerchief drawn a la paysanne over the shoulders, is correct for country wear.

The jersey, in future, will take the form of a well fitted corsage, unlined, but shapely and well trimmed.

Wedding rings are much narrower than they have been for years—that is, those worn by fashionable brides.

White and ecrue serges, sprinkled with black and brown spots, are used for skirts of fall suits, with jersey waists.

Dust cloaks of gray alpacca or mohair may be cut either to fit the figure or like a raglan, or a long round cloak with a cape.

Square tidies made of lace and satin are now seldom seen. The scarf-shaped ones have almost entirely taken their place.

Waistcoats of white pique or white corduroy are fashionably worn under the cutaway jackets of cloth traveling and utility suits.

Many evening gowns are trimmed with garlands of natural flowers. Thistles are also fashionable for those who can get them.

The latest productions of the embroidery machine look more like lace than embroidery, and are, in fact, fine specimens of point coupe.

White corduroy and white chevoit dresses are much worn at the seaside and mountain resorts this season on account of the unusually cold weather,

Black stockings are not nearly as popular as they used to be. They look particularly well with low cut shoes, but the dye comes off of even the most expensive of them.

The sunflower, daisy, marigold, dandelion, and hedge roses with leaves, are the flowers most in favor for colored outline embroidery on pongees, gray, and mushroom colored cashmeres and woolen stuffs.

A SENTIMENTAL SCENE.

Two easy chairs, a veranda wide,
A corner hid from the light inside;
Rare roses around—

* * * * *

And he holds her hand;
With perfumed zephyrs her cheeks are fanned,
All honeyed words are the words she hears,
"Wil he to-night" and she hopes and fears,
Then all is still, and old-Time fleet;
All that she hears is her own heart beat.
As the lights go out in deserted halls,
Gently a head on a shoulder falls,
Gently an arm steals round a waist,
A lock and a ringlet are misplaced.
"He'll surely speak, oh, that little word!"
Her smiling soul with a thrill is stirred.
"Are you fond of codfish balls?" said he,
"I never attended one," said she.

THIRTY MORNING INSPIRATIONS.

Dr. Niemeyer, a physician of recognized wisdom, gives this advice to ladies: "Thirty deep inspirations taken every morning in a pure atmosphere, and no lacing, will do more for the color of your cheeks than a tumbler of cholybeate, or a dose of iron pills."

A PRIME ABSURDITY.

It is a prime absurdity of our time to see girls who are to inherit wealth, and any one of whom may be called by the emergencies of life to take charge of property, yet as ignorant of investments as a Hindoo damsel.

THE LADIES WON.

A cricket match has been played during the present Donegal Assizes in the grounds of Camus Rectory, near Strabane, in Ireland, when eleven ladies challenged the same number of gentlemen to a match, the former using bats and the latter broomsticks. The ladies were captained by Miss Claudine Humphries, and the game resulted in a victory for the ladies by one wicket. An Irish Queen's Counsel, Mr. Richardson, with his broomstick, scored 93.

CUTTING OFF WOMEN'S NOSES.

The horrible crime of mutilating women by cutting off their noses is so common in Bombay as to call for the most stringent repression, and nothing, we imagine. will repress it but the free use of the lash. In the Sessions ending yesterday, Mr. Justice Scott had to hear three—we might say five—of these cases, one after the other. He postponed his sentences for a week, and we were in hopes that he would in each case order the criminals to be flogged within an ace of their lives, Eventually, however, he sentenced them severally to what he had ascertained to be the usual punishment, three years' rigorous imprisonment.—India Times.

THE BOOK ON WHICH MANY a constitution goes to pieces is Dyspepsia. The loss of vigor which this disease involves, the maladies which accompany it, or which are aggravated by it, the mental despondency which it entails, are, terribly exhausting of vital stamina. Its true specific is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which likewise overcomes bilious maladies, female ai'ments, and those coupled with impurity of the blood.

WOMANS WEAKNESS.
Much of the weary weakness peculiar to females is caused by irregularities that could be promptly with that Excellent Regulating Tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

The Fate of a Hamilton Merchant Climbing to His Room.

DASHED TO DEATH ON THE PAVEMENT.

HAMILTON, Aug. 16.—Mr. Andrew McPherson, merchant of this city, returned home Thursday night at half past eleven. It is said that being anxious not to disturb his wife he determined to climb up at the back of the house to his sleeping apartments. At the rear of the building is a wall which, being unfinished, has every other brick projecting, and here he essayed to ascend. Time has, in some cases caused the bricks to crumble away, and others are unsound. About twenty-five feet from the ground is a brick newly broken off, and from this point, between the second and third stories, it is surmised that he fell backwards into the alley way, which is paved with cobble stones. The unfortunate man (who probably weighed 190 to 200 pounds) most probably alighted on his head, as his skull is cracked in several places, and at the back is literally smashed in, His wife was not sleeping, but waiting for his return, and therefore somewhat on the alert. Hearing a moaning she went down stairs and found her husband where he fell, At once she returned up stairs and awoke her brother, Mr. Robert Porterfield, telling him she was afraid her husband had fallen and hurt himself. Medical assistance was immediately summoned, but the injury was past human skill. Mr. McPherson lingered until six o'clock. He was unconscious from the time of the fall until death. Deceased was 37 years of age, and had been in business for a number of years.

SCARED BY A BICYCLE.

The Antics of a Man, a Boy, a Horse, and a Fast Pig.

On Saturday last as Mr. Wm. Shibley, of Bath was returning from Napanee in a one horse waggon he was met at the crossroads at Gordanier's by a bicycler en route for Napanee. The horse attached to the waggon on discovering the new device became unmanageable and ran away, dumping Shibley, his boy and a man with a pig in a bag into the ditch on the south side of the road. The waggon was overturned with wheels revolving in the air, and the poor horse was in a like condition with his legs where his back should have been. Shibley was thrown against the fence, the boy against a telegraph pole, and the man and the pig were precipitated into the ditch in a very unceremonious manner. The bag being untied allowed the pig to escape. and before the owner could extricate himself from the mud the pig was on the home stretch at a 2:09¼ gait. Mr. Gordanier who witnessed the disaster declared it the most complete upset he had ever seen. Shibley's nose was peeled, the boy's shoulder dislocated, and a short canal was marked out in the pig owner's phiz connecting his mouth with the lobe of his left ear. M. Gordanier assisted the trio to remount when the owner of the bicycle was requested to "ante" five dollars to cover damages, which he most strenuously refused to do. We understand the matter will be ventilated before His Worship,—Napanee Beaver.

STRUCK BY A STEAMER.

AN ENGAGED COUPLE RUN DOWN BY THE ROTHESAY,

CLAYTON, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Mr. Lantry and Miss Ives, while out in a skiff yesterday, were run down by a steamer. The lady was drowned. Lantry was injured. The couple, who were engaged. were rowing opposite Point Vivian when the steamer Rothesay came on them. Miss Ives thought they would get near enough to the steamer to ride upon her swells. They got too near and the swells sucked the skiff immediately under the wheel, which struck it and knocked Mr. Lantry out. Miss Ives was buried beneath the waves. She was undoubtedly killed before being drowned. Mr. Lantry was rescued, but this morning he was not expected to live, such were his serious injuries. When the body of Miss Ives was found her dress was wrapped around the chair—which had been in the boat, and pieces of the boat clung to it.

A species of lizard called the hellbender is now considered a delicacy by epicures. It is about ten inches in length, of a dirty mud color. and provided with four legs and a tail. The flesh is said to be delicious.

In New York, as a gastronomic dainty, the fat spring gosling is crowding out the scrawny spring chicken, It is said that by a proper course of feeding the gosling may be given any desired flavor.

DEPTH OF AFFECTION.

Cincinnati Republican.

'What was all that scuffling about down-stairs?' asked Mrs Hilbocts, as her lord and master strode into the room.

'Nothing, except that monkey-faced dude asked for Sarah Ann.'

'What did he say?'

'Oh, he began by saying he was speaking from the bottom of his heart, and so on.'

'And what answer did you give?'

'I grew spasmodic, too,' answered Hilboots, tapping his little angelic number twelve shoe 'and gave him an answer from the bottom of my sole.'

Johnston, of Huron, Dak. writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. DEATH OF MRS. EDISON,

The Inventor's Brief Courtship and Happy Married Life.

Mrs. Mary Stilwall Edison, wife of the celebrated inventor, Thomas Alva Edison, died suddenly at 1 a.m. on Sunday at her residence at Menlo Park, N. J. She was 29 years of age and leaves surviving three children. The story of her marriage to Mr. Edison, says the New York Journal is a singularly strange and romantic one.

When he first formed her acquaintance he was about 25 years of age. He had just invented the chemical telegraph, by means of which could be transmitted, he claimed on a single wire 3000 words a minute. The telegraph, notwithstanding this however, became subservient to the Morse system. While working on the chemical telegraph he employed several young women to punch the holes in the paper. Among them was Miss Mary Stillwell. One day he was standing behind her examining a telegraphic instrument.

'Mr. Edison.' remarked Miss Stillwell suddenly turning around, 'I can always tell when you are behind me or near me.'

'How do you account for that?, mechanically asked Mr. Edison, still absorbed in his work.

'I don't know. I am sure,' she quietly answered; 'but I seem to feel you when you are near me.'

'Miss Stillwell,' said Mr. Edison, turning around now in his turn and looking his interlocutor in the face 'I have been thinking considerably of late, and if you are willing to have me, I'd like to marry you.'

'You astonish me,' exclaimed Miss Stillwell, 'I—I never—'

'I know you never thought I would be your wooer,' interrupted Mr. Edison, 'but think over my proposal, Miss Stillwell, and talk it over with your mother.' Then, he added, in the same offhand business-like way, as though he might be experimenting upon a new mode of courtship: 'Let me know as early as possible, as if you consent to marry me, and your mother is willing, we can be married by next Tuesday.'

This was the extent of Mr. Edison's courtship. It is hardly necessary to add that the highly favoured lady laid the abrupt proposal before her mother.

'Ma has consented,' she told Mr. Edison the next day.

'That's all right,' said Mr. Edison in reply. 'We will be married a week from to-day.'

And so it was. The two were married in a week and a day from the beginning of Mr. Edison's novel and precipitate courtship. In connection with his marriage, however, a story is told quite as singular, but fully in keeping with the one already given touching his courtship. It is said that directly following his marriage he entered the laboratory in his wedding suit, and hastily throwing his coat on a bench began work.

'Why surely you are not going to work on your wedding night?' remonstrated his chief assistant.

'Suppose it is?' he quickly answered setting to work with renewed zeal; 'the Gold and Stock company don't care for that. They want their instruments to-morrow, and they've got to have them, marriage or no marriage! so here goes.'

The wedding trip of Mr. Edison ran into the mysteries of inventions. His wedded life, however, is said to have been a singularly happy one.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns. and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

OSCULATION EXPLAINED.

WHAT A KISS IS ACCORDING TO AN OBSERVING SCIENTIST.

The Pall Mall Gazette inquires: "What is a kiss?" Now, Mr. Gazette, if you were not on the other side of the raging Atlantic, we would gently put our lips to the bay-window of your head and whisper the definition in your ear, but as we have no time to run over and drink beer with you, you must be content with a printed style of information, which will not be held in sacred privacy,

A kiss is a paroxysmal contact between the labial appendages attached to the superior maxilliaries respectively of a man and woman or two women. The younger the parties are the more paroxysmal will be the paroxysm, and in case it be observed by the fond father of the paroxyzed young lady, there is also likely to be perigee between the paroxyzer's pedalic junction and the phalangeal extremities of the matatarsus, tarsus and other bric a brac depending from the lower end of the old gentleman's right leg.

The kiss itself is not the paroxysm. It is merely the vibrations of the superincumbent atmosphere resultant from the expulsion of sweetness from each of the pairs of lips engaged in creating it. This definition is ultra scientific, and fearing that you will not be able to comprehend it, we give you another, which was communicated to us by a hired girl: 'A kiss is an awful b[illegible] lightning mixed up with very little t[illegible] and spread upon one pair of lips by another with a stave from a sugar barrel.'-Bloomington Through Mail.

THE CANNIBAL HORROR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Third officer Kelly, of the steamer Bear, this morning said the reports of cannibalism among the members of the Greely party were true. The survivors told everything when they boarded the Bear.

LONDON, Aug. 15—Leigh Smith, the Arctic explorer, says it is strange that the Greely survivors were so weak and prostrated if they lived on human flesh. Personally, he would rather die than eat human flesh. If men under him were reduced to such straits as were the Greely party, he would not sanction the drawing of lots to see who should die that the rest might have food, but if the men liked to eat the bodies of their comrades who had perished he would not interfere.

The Hero is the finest boat on the bay for a trip of this kind; the sail is one of the most delightful in America, embracing a tour of the entire group of Islands calling at Wells' Island, and all the favorite resorts. The Sunday School Parliament will be in progress; with a large staff of able speakers Mr. Stratton knows all the requirements of an excursion party, and the success of his former enterprises in this direction speaks well for the public appreciation, The St Lawerance Central is now the Methodist Camp Ground of the Dominion, and as such should be patronized and supported by members of the church. The boat will lay at the dock over Sabbath, but one wishing to remain for a few days can do so for a small extra charge. Full particulars in bills.

DAIRYMEN GETTING RICH.

THE CIVIC HOLIDAY.

Outline of Trades' Procession and Pic-Nic.

BICYCLE RACING TOURNAMENT.

Monday having been proclaimed a civic holiday, it will be observed in Belleville with eclat. Below are given a few of the amusements and attractions which are offered to the citizens that day.

LABOR DEMONSTRATION

Under the auspices of the Knights of Labor a labor demonstration has been arranged, to consist of procession, pic-nic, games and speeches, torchlight procession and fireworks, and social assembly in the evening. The procession, which starts at ten o'clock, will consist of wheelmen, firemen, labor unions, unorganized labor, citizens and visitors. The route will be:—

Market Square to Pinnacle down Pinnacle to Dundas, to Front, up Front to Mill, thence to Station road, thence to Bettes Street, thence to Emily, Emily to Bleecker, thence to Bleecker's Grove.

The Oddfellows' band will head both morning and evening parades. Mr. W. Taylor will act as Grand Marshall, assisted by three others. At Bleecker's Grove there will be a commodious dancing platform and a good quadrille band. A tent for the accommodation of ladies will be erected and everything possible done to ensure the comfort of visitors. From a platform speeches will be delivered by His Worship Mayor Dunnet, and by Messrs. Alfred Jury, Phillips Thompson and D. J. O'Donoghue, ex-M.P.P., all of Toronto. Mr. C. March, ex-President of the Toronto Trades and Labor Council will also be present. Mr. Jury is known throughout Ontario as an advocate of the rights of labor and its representation in Parliament, and is throughly well informed on the topics he usually undertakes to discuss. Mr. O'Donoghue at one time represented the workingmen of Ottawa in the Local House, and has always taken an active part in all that concerns the workingman. Mr. Thompson is known as an able journalist whose letters from Ireland to the Globe in 1882 were widely read. Mr. March is Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Trades Council, and is one of Toronto's most intelligent mechanics. It is hoped that the demonstration will be as successful as its most sanguine promoters anticipate.

The visit of the sub-Committee yesterday to the various shops resulted in the assurance that every man-jack will turn out in the morning procession. An additional band will be engaged from Kingston.

BICYCLE TOURNAMENT.

The second meet and racing tournament of the Rambler's Wheel Club comes off in their own park at 2 o'clock. The club will parade on the market square at 1.30, and accompanied by visiting bicyclists, proceed through several of the streets to the Bicycle Park where the races and exhibition of fancy riding will immediately begin. The program consists of ten events, one being a five mile race for the valuable Corby Challenge Cup now held and twice won by Mr. W. Greatrix. The third contest for its possession will be keenly contested, and, possibly, neither Messrs. Greatrix or West, the two most formidable contestants, will win it. Capt. Retallack and, for the second time Mr. Cooper, who is now a very fast man, will also enter and possibly one or two others. There is to be another club championship race, for three miles, and it will prove a very exciting event. All previous local records will of course be smashed to pieces. The one mile race for a gold medal to first will be a very fast and pretty race. Some new riders will enter in this. The obstacle race will afford much amusement. Mr. W. R. Carmichael and Chief McKinnon will act as judges and Mr. J. C. Jamieson as referee.

The wheel club is now the largest and with one exception, the wealthiest and most influential club in the city, and one of the largest of its kind in Ontario. Its entertainments have always been successful because they were well managed, and all that was promised carried out. Monday's event will certainly be no exception.

A band will head the parade at 1.30 p.m. from the Market Square to the Park.

OTHER AMUSEMENTS.

Besides the above there will be two or three excursions from the city to various points. There will also be several excursions to the city and an influx of visitors by ordinary boat and rail. Altogether there will doubtless be 5,000 strangers in the city who will, it is hoped, go away with golden opinions of the kindness and courtesy of Belleville citizens.

DIVORCE SUITS IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Madame Patti, through her advocate yesterday, presented a petition for divorce from her husband, the Marquis De Caux. It is believed the court will refuse a divorce on the ground that the law reserves the law reserves the right of divorce to such applicants as have received injury in marriage relation. The Duc de Bauffremont has begun a suit for divorce. He alleges his wife is ruinously extravagant.

THE BROOK.

(From the German.)

Ah, brook, sweet brook, with sparkling rill,
Why ever onward rushing still?
I stand and gaze, and fain would know
Whence thou dost come, where thou dost flow.

"From out the rock's dark womb I speed;
I bound along through moor and mead,
Whilst mirror'd in my bosom clear,
The sunlit clouds of heaven appear.

"Thus on with childish glee I go;
I know not why or where I flow,
My birth was 'neath the mountain's crest,
'Tis God alone can give me rest,"

ESCAPE.

Airy and light, drifting so slow.
Drifting softly, I see
Coming through air the feathery snow
Of the milk-weed unto me.
Scarcely I feel its touch so light;
See, 'tis wafted away;
Grasp it I can not in its flight;
'Tis far on the wind at play.

Like to a love which the heart doth know
Within itself to be,
Swiftly cold reason persues, and lo!
Love flutters his wings and is free.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-urcitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints' a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Yes I have slept,' rejoined the other 'and feel stronger to undertake our journey Where is my sister ?'

'In her room, getting ready Missy Julie. The time is short,

'Yes, I, too, am preparing,' responded the Creole. 'Has my sister slept ?'

'Not much. She has been writing—writing.'

'Writing! Ah, I suppose so,' she added, as she added, as she made herself ready for the flight ready for the flight in which it had been arranged, Keziah was to accomyany them.

For a moment she had forgotten the letter. Now she remembered it and her determination. Shortly after Pauline, equipped in a dark calico dress, cloak and riding-hat, entered.

She was pale save for a feverish glow on her cheeks, while her eyes were excited and nervous.

'Juliette, dear,' she said, 'would it not be well to put out the light? It as David Ringsoall says, Mr. Sciadden has people watching, it will make them perhaps suspicious,

Keziah cast a quick glance at the Creole The name of the overseer was new to her. She instantly saw why Juliette had used it and could understand now, what before much puzzled her—Pauline's readiness to a flight planned by Stuart Loring. The mention of David Ringscole had explained everything.

She bent over the parcel she was tying up, and laughed silently.

'I think not,' said Juliette, answering her sister's question. 'The hour is not yet late. and after what has happened, they may know we could find little rest to-night. Therefore the lights may make them sure we are here.'

'That is true,' responded Pauline with a shiver, 'what time is it ?'

'Half-past ten. Are you cold ?'

'No; on the contrary, I feel the air oppressive.

'Still you shiver, Pauline; you are afraid,' remarked the Creole. Why do you persist in going ? You know there is no danger for you.'

The words were well chosen. and the melancholy gentleness of the voice, with that last emphasis.

The speaker knew perfectly the self-sacrificing nature of the other, and was aware of the effect the sentence would produce.

'Juliete,' exclaimed her half-sister, in tender reproach, 'why will you thus pain me? I am sure it arrises from your kindness of heart, yet it pains me nevertheless. Do you think I would let you go alone? No. But timidity is part of my disposition. As to danger, there is every danger here for me: the danger of going mad from terror suspense were I ignorant of your fate, of the peril you might be encountering. Juliette, if you suggest my remaining again, I shall think you doubt my love.'

She extended her little hand as she ended; the Creole took it, and Pauline drawing her down embraced her affectionately. Juliette returned the embrace as she rejoined, smiling—

'Never do that Pauline. Such was far from my meaning; but you see there is one now who holds a higher place in your affection than I do. I was thinking of Mr. Belmore.'

Pauline colored slightly a mist gathered in her drooping eyes. Did the Creole at all guess the greatness of the sacrifice being made for her by the gentle girl? Had she, would it have softened her ?'

It is to be feared not.

'I, of course, have thought of him too,' remarked Pauline, smiling faintly. 'But I am sure he will approve of what I do, and it will but delay our meeting a few days at most. Keziah says our way will lie towards Veamillion, which, I have written to tell him he may follow.'

'That was well thought of dearest,' said the Creole, 'but how will you convey your letter to him ?'

'I have enclosed it with a few lines of explanation, to Mr. Folmsbee, asking him after conjuring the greatest secrecy, to deliver it.'

'Why you are getting quite a woman of business. But where have you put the letter? Mr. Folmsbee is now in bed, I believe.'

'Even if he were not I dared not give it to-night, you know. It most reach him only after we are gone. I have put it on my desk where it will be seen by the first who enters my room'

'Excellent. Hark, quarter to eleven, Is it not time to start Keziah ?'

'Quite time Missy Julie.'

'Is all ready ?'

'Everything, missy,' pointing to several packages.

'So many,' ejaculated Pauline. Will they not cumber us ? Our journey will be but a few days.'

'Not too many missy; Keziah can carry them all.'

This the sisters would not permit. Each lending their help they prepared to descend, leaving the lights burning, Pauline accepted the Creole's arm—for she could not suppress her trembling—the three quitted the room.

The younger sister gave one long, lingering glance around ere she went, and shivered more violently still, and a feeling like a presentment of evil, took possession of her; It seemed as if she were renouncing happiness for ever,

ADVERTISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required, In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasted by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

FORTUNE TELLING.

Will he come this year—will he come the next?
Will he come to-day? She lightly blew
With sweet, red lips the thistle down,
Whispering, tell me—oh, tell me true!

Does he love me well—does he love me well
No doubt in her heart the maiden knew;
But in whispers soft she said again,
Thistle down, thistle down, tell me true?

For every maid in the wide world knows
That sweet sure prophecy. Dolly drew
Her little mouth into rosebud shape,
Saying, oh, thistle-down, tell me true?

Yes, he loves you well. Oh, he loves you well!
When will he come? He will come to-day.
This is the answer the thistle down
Gives to her heart as it flies away.

And Dolly that night at the garden gate,
And Harry, the farmer, brave and brown,
Look into each other's eyes and say,
"A prophet true is the thistly down."

ONTARIO TEACHERS.

RESOLUTIONS ON SOME IMPORTANT MATTERS PASSED.

At the meeting of the public school sections of the Ontario Teachers' Association in Toronto the following resolution was carried: that in the opinion of this section the action of the Minister of Education in recognizing and placing a high value on the professional success of candidates for re-examination for third-class certificates is calculated to foster and promote that most essential part of a teacher's qualification, and that this recognition of the value and importance of successful work in the school-room should be extended to the higher classes of certificates so as to make it possible for a teacher, through success in teaching, to raise his certificate from one grade to another in that class to which he belongs.

Moved by N. G. Duff seconded by George Baird, That in the opinion of the Public school section of the Teachers' Association the 'History' for entrance is too extensive, and would recommend that the history for entrance be Canadian History and one period of English History, to be set by the department from time to time. The resolution carried.

By resolution the association stated it as their opinion that the holidays in rural districts should be six weeks by department regulations, instead of being as at present, optional with teachers.

In the General Convention, Dr. Mc Lellan was elected President, and Mr. D H. Hunter, of Watertown, Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. J. L. Hughes presented the report the committe appointed to consider his paper on Industrial Education. They recommended (1) that industrial drawing be made compulsory in Public and High schools and that marks of drawing be taken into account the same as any other objects at the entrance examinations; (2) that so far as practible, industrial occupations of an appropriate character should be introduced into the public schools, especially in the junior classes, and that the Honorable the Minister of Education be requested to provide for such training in connection with the Normal and Model schools, as a means of cultivating manual dexterity and developing the mind. He moved the reception and adoption of the report. The report was adopted.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public and increased from year to year their consumption, which, while possessing the most valuable remedial properties, are yet so simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrup & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. THE LABORS of the committee on the Anglo-American revision of the translation of the Old Testament are ended, and the work is now in the hands of the printers.

THE VOTE in Westmoreland county, New Brunswick on the petition for the repeal of the Scott Act passed four years ago, has resulted in a victory for the supporters of the Act.

PROFESSOR John Stuart Blackie says that the House of Lords represents three things—one of which is sufficiently represented in the Commons while the other two should not be represented anywhere—viz., property, pride and prejudice.

IN THREE YEARS Mr. Tuke's fund has assisted 9,482 persons to emigrate. The average cost per head, including all expenses, was £7 4s. 6d. The total cost of the operations has been £68,500 of which £44,000 has been received from the Government.

IT SEEMS that what Lord Rosebery tenders to the colonies in exchange for their independence is a representation in the House of Lords. Representation in the House of Lords can hardly, in the present state of the political market, be called a gilt edged security.—Week.

MR. TRELAWNEY W. IT IS SAID that the finest field of wheat in all the Northwest is one, 200 acres in area, owned by Mr. Corbett, of Moose Mountain, the yield being estimated at 49 bushels to the acre. The oat crop throughout the province has been greatly improved by the recent rains. Many farmers unfortunately sowed frozen seed and the yield in such cases will of course be light. In the Territories, says the Winnipeg Sun, crops of all kinds will be unprecedently large.

IT HAS NOT taken long for the people of British Columbia to ascertain that Sir John Macdonald's little commission of three sent to that Province to inquire into the Chinese question is merely a trick of the Dominion Government to avert the consequences of their pro-Chinese policy and views. A mass meeting in Victoria has passed resolutions denouncing the Commission as a device of Sir John's to postpone legislative enactment.

THE JUNIOR JUDGE of Hastings having non suited a physician who sued a man for services rendered as assistant to the attending physician because he was not retained by the patient himself, it would be interesting to know how far the judgment goes. Does the judge hold that a consulting physician sent for, as he usually is, by the attending doctor cannot look to the patient for his fees. Or, when a volunteer messenger hurriedly calls a physician to a person taken suddenly sick, can the patient on recovery legally repudiate the physician's bill because he may not be the one he would have engaged, or because, in the patient's opinion, he did not do his work skillfully? It seems to us that in the matter of summoning additional medical aid the attending physician assumes the character of an agent for the sick or wounded person in most cases. Doubtless the ordinary law on contracts was applied in the suit above mentioned but in many cases though it might be law it would not be equity.

THE BICYCLE TOURNAMENT.

West Wins the Coveted Corby Challenge Cup.

A VERY SUCCESSFUL MEET

Various counter attractions yesterday served to diminish the attendance at the second race meeting of the Ramblers Wheel Club held yesterday in the Bicycle Park' but notwithstanding about five hundred persons entered the grounds, and a smaller number o'erpeered the wall. The races were well conducted as d took place in the following order:—

TWO MILE DASH—open to Co. Hastings—1st Prize Silver Medal presented by Alex. Robertson, M.P.; 2nd, Club Prize.

Entered—L. B. Cooper, T. West, and J. Retallack.

This was West's race from the start and he won easily in 7:41. Cooper took a header early in the race when he was putting in some good work.

GREEN RACE—open to all who had never won a prize—Prizes, 1st Silver Medal; 2nd Club Prize.

Entered—E. Clarke, F. Garratt, S. Daly, G. H. Knight, C. Scantlebury.

Clarke had this race well in hand, though Garratt rode well. Clarke finished first in 4:46, Garratt second.

THREE MILE DASH—Club Championship—Prizes, 1st Gold Medal; 2nd Silver Medal presented by Ald. Biggar.

Entered—W. Garratt, T. West, L. B. Cooper, S. G. Retallack, G. H. Knight.

Knight led at the start but gave out on the 6th lap. The first mile was done in 3:31, Garratt leading and riding well, with West second. The second mile was done in 7:22½. Cooper, who had been slightly injured by his tumble, felt compelled to drop out on the 20th lap, and Retallack wound himself up on the 22nd. The race lay between Garratt, who was leading, and West, who was closely following him. On the last lap West passed Garratt going down the back stretch and won easily in 11:01½.

ONE MILE RACE—whithout hands, open to all—Prizes, 1st Silver Medal; 2nd Silver Medal presented by W. P. Way, Treasurer.

Entered.—T. West, F. Foster, E. Clark.

West went ahead from the sound of the shot and won in 2.01, Foster second.

FANCY RIDING.—Prizes, 1st, Silk Handkerchief; 2nd Plated Calliope Whistle.

Entered.—Kelly, F. Foster, H. Price.

Kelly did his riding neatly and without a fall, but Foster performed nearly twice as many tricks, and one in particular which was more creditable than anything else attempted. Price, although a beginner at fancy riding, acquitted himself fairly well. Foster was awarded first prize, Kelly second.

FIVE MILE RACE.—Corby Challenge Cup. (3rd contest)—2nd prize, Silver Medal.

Entered.—W. Greatrix, T. West, S. G. Retallack.

Cooper, who was entered for this race, did not start as his fall unfortunately put him out of condition for fast riding that day. Before the race was half over Retallack was out of it. Greatrix was drawn for the pole and led off at a fast pace which he maintained throughout. West, as a rule, clung to his leader's little wheel, though occasionally Greatrix opened daylight between them as much as a wheel and a half. The first mile was done in 3.45, and the three miles in 11.10, as compared with the three mile record, 11.01½. The excitement which prevailed grew as the fifth mile was being finished and became intense when after passing under the wire for the last lap West spurted and overtaking Greatrix when turning down the back stretch, passed him. Greatrix then stopped and West came flying under the wire in 18,31. This is the fastest local time ever made, as Greatrix's previous record was 18.45. In justice to Mr. Greatrix, it should be stated that he has not been well for some days, and entered the race against the doctor's advice.

OBSTACLE RACE—Prize Silver Medal, presented by Dr. Wilson.

Entered—J. Retallack, F. Foster, S. M. Daly, F. Garratt.

Foster won easily.

ONE MILE HANDICAP—classified in heats—Prize Silver Medal, presented by J. W. Snider.

Entered—S. B. Cooper, F. Garratt, Knight, J. Retallack, W. Garratt, H. Price.

Cooper and W. Garratt rode the first half mile heat Garratt winning in 1.40 with Cooper only a few inches in the rear. F. Garratt won the second heat. Retallack who was scratch man lost his pedals but afterwards spurted to catch Garratt but failed, Time 1.47½. The final heat therefore lay between F. Garratt and W. Garratt, and was termed the two brothers' act. Frank was given a lap start and was allowed to win, W. Garratt taking 3.39 in which to go the mile.

ONE MILE DASH—open to all—Prizes 1st Gold Medal; 2nd Silver Medal.

Entered—S. B. Cooper, W. Garratt and Knight.

Garratt led off, Knight second, Cooper third. On third lap Cooper passed Knight and closed rapidly on Garratt but failed to overtake him. Time, 3.32.

CONSOLATION RACE—Prize Silver Cup.

ENTERED—Knight, S. G. Retallack and H. Price.

Retallack won easily in 1.46½.

A DEADLY FALL.

Mary Glenn Tumbles From the Salvation Army Barracks

AND IS ALMOST INSTANTLY KILLED.

On Saturday morning Mary Eliza Glenn, aged 29 years, living near Rednersville, came to the city with her father, Mr. Richard Glenn to purchase the week's groceries and other articles required in the house. Towards evening she went to the wharf to to find that the ferry had gone and she was forced to sleep the city over night. She went over to Mr. Albert Sagers, on Coleman street, for her supper, and about eight o'clock made a request to visit the Salvation Army, Mr. Sager told her she might attend the open air meeting on the market square, but she must not go to the barracks. Once within sound of the drum and tamborine she forgot the warning she received from her friends and visited the hall where she met a horrible death.

She occupied a seat in about the centre of the hall during the meeting and at twenty minutes to ten walked down the aisle towards the door. Andrew Stewart, a member of the Army, and one or two others noticed her pass the top of the stairs leading to the street and walk towards the the open door in the East end. Stewart sprang from his chair and ran after her, but before he could catch her she was on the landing suspended over the lane about forty feet. Time was precious and not a moment should be lost. Stretching out his hand the tips of his fingers barely touched her skirt, but it was too late. She had stepped off the platform into the darkness. The alarm was at once given and several who saw her walk out of the door, ran downstairs and the meeting was brought to a close amid intense excitement. James Stewart was the first to find the body in the lane. The woman was then breathing heavily but unconscious. Blood was pouring copiously from her nose and in a very few seconds her inanimate form lay in a pool of blood. Several standing about picked up the body and carried it into Dr. Nash's office on the opposite side of the street, where life soon departed.

Up to this time no one knew who the deceased was. At first it was thought she was Annie Ashbury, but that supposition proved to be false, and after several hundred people had viewed the body on the floor, Mr. Sager was sent for and identified the girl as that of Mary E. Glenn. A coffin was procured and the corpse taken care of until Sunday afternoon when the friends took the coffin over the bay to her father's house in the second concession of Ameliasburg. The funeral took place yesterday.

In view of the talk about this open door being a man trap it was decided to hold an inquest, and at three o'clock Sunday afternoon the following jury was empanelled: Alfred Brignall, (foreman), W. H. Vermilyia, H. G. McCall, E. Langman, John Daws, M. Consoul, J. Gerow, J. E. Sills, J. Clarke, S. Balkwill, W. Greatrix, J. Fellowes, R. Curlett, W. Wild, H. Burdett, J. Hall, J. Henderson and E. Harris. They viewed the body and adjourned to meet at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

RUFFIANLY KINGSTONIANS.

They Enter a Hotel and Violently Attack the Proprietor.

BADLY WOUNDED WITH A BOTTLE

Yesterday afternoon James Huddlerson, Wm. J. Mills, Wm. Henderson and two other young men all from Kingston, went into the Anglo American Hotel, Mr. Geo. Hoggard, proprietor, for a drink. After getting what they asked for and a cigar the men refused to pay and Mr. Hoggaad took the hat of one of the men until their bill was settled. The Kingstonians at once attacked the proprietor and the bartender with bottles and for a time it was thought murder would be committed. Mr. Hoggard was struck with a bottle over the left eye laying the flesh open to the bone and breaking the bridge of his nose. Mr. Wm. Severn soon arrived and after a tussle succeeded in throwing two of the men out on the sidewalk. The three others ran out of the back door and jumped into a skiff which was soon upset and they ran up Ald. McIninche's lane where they were met by Sergt. McCrudden and Constable Cook. The former arrested Huddlerson but Cook had a long chase over in West Belleville after Mills and the Chief of Police and a number of citizens after Henderson who was seen alone on George street East Belleville. There was tremenduous excitement in the city for several hours. Some of the Kingston gang attempted to take Mills from the officers on the bridge but after one of the party had been knocked down by a baton no further trouble was experienced. At the police court this morning the three prisoners were remanded to gaol for a week by Mayor Dunnet. Dr. Willson attended Mr. Hoggard and put several stitches in the wound; to-day he is as well as could be expected although his injuries will confine him to his room for at least two weeks. The bartender received a kick from one of the party, from which he has suffered greatly since.

AN END TO BONE SCRAPING.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisborg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctor told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated, I used instead, 3 bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by B. Templeton.

The most remarkable cure of Scrofula on record is that of the Rev. Wm. Stout, of Wiarton, whose case of Scrofulous Abcess baffled the skill of seventeen Surgeons for twenty-three years. He was perfectly cured by Burdock Blood Bitters.

There are many and various ways of becoming a man of mark; but the easiest and most effectual way is to lean up against some newly-painted railings.

The most deadly foe to all malarial disease is Ayer's Ague Cure, a combination of vegetable ingredients only, of which the most valuable is used in no other known preparation. This remedy is an absolute and certain specific, and succeeds when all other medicines fail. A cure is warranted.

Intelligent citizens of Belleville say that the city ought to contribute at least one thousand dollars for the improvements of Albert College now in progress, not having been called upon in nine years to contribute for such a purpose, although the College brings to the city nearly $30,000 a year in money and other larger benefits not counted in dollars.

Mr. Geo. D. Dickson, Q.C., has served the necessary papers on Mayor Dunnet, giving notice that on Friday next he will apply at Osgoode Hall, Toronto for a mandamus to compel the city to include in the estimates of the year all sums required for the lawful purposes of the municipality, which would take in $18,780 for a sinking fund. THE LABOR DEMONSTRATION

Grand Street Parades and Successful Pic-Nic.

SPEECHES BY TORONTO VISITORS.

The Torchlight Procession and Fireworks.

Yesterday being Belleville's Civic Holiday citizens thronged the streets and crowds poured into the city from outside points so that several thousand persons became guests of the City of the Bay. The chief attraction was the labor demonstration which equalled the most sanguine expectations and reflected very considerable credit on its promoters.

SKETCH OF THE ORDER.

As it was the Knights of Labor who planned and successfully carried out this demonstration a few words of their origin and principles will not be out of place. The order was instituted 15 years ago in a suburb of Philadelphia by a poor garment cutter, who, unless he were gifted with prophetic foresight, could never of the extent to which the order would grow, the influence and power it would wield within so few years. Its members are now numbered by hundreds of thousands. and it has branches or assembles as they are are called, in every part of the States and Canada, as well as in many European countries. The demonstration yesterday was not confined to the Knights. While it was under their auspices and control they had invited all unorganized labor to participate This powerful organization goes about its work quietly and without show, and herein the founder gave a proof of his knowledge of men. The unknown is always magnified, and where the strength of the Order is not made public it is very often supposed to be greater than it really is. The members of different assemblies do not know each other, although of course, they have their signs and passwords. The order is formed into local assemblies governed by district assemblies, where the locals are numerous enough to warrant this. The order is secret to the extent that only members are admitted, but it is not oath-bound. In the earlier days the Knights took an oath on assuming the obligations of the order, but this was abolished some years ago on account of the opposition of the Roman Catholic Church, chiefly in the State of Pennsylvania, where the order took its rise, and where it is probably strongest to-day. The obligation of a Knight of Labor binds him to fulfil the duties of knighthood on his sacred honor. The following is the preamble and declaration of

THE PRINCIPLES OF THIS GREAT ORDER.

The alarming development and aggression of aggravated wealth, which, unless checked, will inevitably lead to the pauperization and hopeless degradation of the toiling masses, renders it imperative, if we desire to enjoy the blessings of life, that a check should be placed upon its power and upon unjust accumulation, and a system adopted which will secure to the laborer the fruits of his toil; and as this much desired object can only be accomplished by the thorough unification of those who labor, and the united efforts of those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, we have formed the order of the Knights of Labor, with a view of securing the organization and direction, by co-operative effort, of the power of the industrial classes; and we submit to the world the object sought to be accomplished by our organization, calling upon all who believe in securing 'the greatest good to the greatest number,' to aid and assist us.

1. To bring within the fold of organization every department of productive industry, making knowledge a standpoint for action, and industrial, moral worth, not wealth, the true standard of individual and national greatness.

2 To secure to the toilers a proper share of the wealth that they create; more of the leisure that rightfully belongs to them; more society advantages; more of the benefits, privileges, and emoluments of the world; in a word, all those rights and privileges necessary to make them capable of enjoying, appreciating, defending, and perpetuating the blessings of good government.

3. To arrive at a true condition of the producing masses in their educational, moral, and financial condition, by demanding from the various Governments the establishment of bureaus of labor statistics.

4. The establishment of co-operative institutions, productive and distributive.

5. The reserving of the public lands—the heritage of the people—for the actual settler. Not another acre for railroads or corporations.

6. The abrogation of all laws that do not bear equally upon capital and labour; the removal of unjust technicalaties, delays and discriminations in the administration of justice, and the adopting of measures providing for the health and safety of those engaged in mining, manufacturing, and building pursuits.

7. The enactment of laws to compel chartered corporations to pay their employees weekly for the labour performed the preceding week, in the lawful money of the country.

8 The enactment of laws giving mechanics and labourers the first lien on their work for their full wages.

9. The abolishment of the contract system on national, state, and municipal work.

10. The substitution of arbitration for strikes, whenever and wherever employers are willing to meet on equitable grounds.

11. The prohibition of the employment of children in workshops, mines, and factories before they have attained their fourteenth year.

THEIR MEMBERSHIP AND MEANS

This order differs from all other labor organizations and in this particular holds the germ of success in that it is not an association confined to one particular trade or to any number of trades, but takes in all who work. Its interest are undivided and what concerns one assembly concerns all. It is the usual but not invariable rule that the members of local assemblies are of one trade. Women as well as men may become Knights, and the Order upholds woman suffrage to this extent at least, that it demands for both sexes equal pay for equal work. If a woman does as much work and does it as well as a man, she should not, because she is a woman receive less pay. If she adds to the wealth of the country, her earnings shall be in proportion to her production. There are two classes, however who cannot be admitted, and here is a conjunction which will be a matter of surprise to those who have not heard of the principles of the organization. The liquor-sellers and the lawyers alike are debarred from becoming Knights of Labour. No liquor-seller can ever enter the sanctuary of the assembly, over the door of which hangs a globe, as a symbol that the earth is man s. If a Knight wishes to become a liquor seller he must withdraw from the Assembly. The lawyer is classed with the liquor seller as useless and unproductive. "Labour is noble and holy;" is the motto of the order, and saloon keepers and lawyers are held to excluded by it.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession, one of the finest ever witnessed in the Bay of Quinte district, was formed on the Market Square, and as the line of march proceeded through the principal streets densely thronged with people, the spectacle was an imposing one and especially satisfactory to those gentlemen who have labored with such vigor and enterprise for the last month in arranging the details of the affair. To them all honor is due for the grand success of the demonstration. They labored in a worthy cause and in carrying out to a finish such a monster demonstration, they have earned the heartiest thanks from citizens generally. It was a few minutes after ten o'clock when the command was issued to start. The members of the Rambler's Wheel Club standing with their bright machines on Pinnacle Street, mounted for the parade at the first sound of the trumpet. The parade moved south from the Market Square down Pinnacle Street to Dundas, went along Dundas to Front, and up that thoroughfare past the city hall in the following order:—Rambler's Bicycle Club, Grand Marshall Taylor, I.O.O.F. Band, Assistant Chief Engineer Cummings and Mr. H. E. Barr, Chief Engineer of the Cobourg Fire Department, officers and members of No. 1 fire company, officers and members of No. 2 fire company, officers and members of No. 3 Quinte Hook and Ladder Company, employees of various manufactories to the number of several hundred, Picton brass band, Moulder's Union, Belleville Branch of the Knights of Labor, a cab containing Mayor Dunnet and Messrs. Philips Thompson, C. March, late President of the Trades and Labor Council, Toronto, and E. W. Wallbridge of Belleville. In the next cab were Messrs. A. Jury and D. J. O'Donoghue, of Toronto, C. Pettitt and R. Stevenson, of Belleville. Col. Brown's carriage and Mr. F. Kliengbeil's milk delivery wagon were handsomely decorated. The marshalls were Messrs. Wm. Taylor, Stephen Garratt, J. S. Tice, S. Spangenberg, Jas. Jenkins and J. W. Campion. They were mounted on splendid steeds and with their stylish black "plug" hats made pretty tony officers. After passing the city buildings the long line of march proceeded up Front Street to Mill; north along Mill to Station Street, up Bettes Street to Emily, south along Emily Street to Bleecker Avenue, thence to the Park.

AT THE GROVE.

Everything was in readiness to receive the crowd. Over the entrance to the grounds was an arch bearing the motto of the order, "Labor is Noble and Holy," and under this "welcome to all." In the shade of the tall, stately pines were erected suitable platforms. Dinner over, the crowds from the city began to arrive, and by two o'clock there were three or four thousand people strolling about the park, in the proper mood for enjoyment. There was amusement for all and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

THE SPEECHES.

Mr. E. W. Wallbridge, acted as chairman while the addresses were being delivered. In introducing the speakers he expressed his pleasure at the honor conferred upon him by placing him in the chair to advocate such a worthy cause as that which the Knights of Labor had at heart. He was proud to say he was a member of that association—one of the grandest in principle in the country. He called upon who was received with loud applause His Worship heartily congratulated the members of the Knights of Labor on the success of their demonstration and, judging from their past history, he foretold success for the Order. He said the citizens should be grateful, and he believed they were, to the Knights of Labar for promoting this celebration which not only kept our citizens a home, but invited visitors to spend a day with us and see more of the many attractions of our beautiful city. Many years ago local demonstrations were popular, but of late years every holiday people are taken from the city. The Knights propose to restore the former good policy and he hoped they would be aided in their exertions by every other society in Belleville. He was pleased to observe the temperance plank in their platform so well adhered to on such a gala day as this. Of the workings of the Knights of Labor or the nature of their constitution he confessed he knew little, but he said he could see no objection to a body of men banding themselves together for mutual benefit and improvement. In conclusion he extended a hearty welcome to the delegates from Toronto to the city of the Bay, and other visitors and hoped they would go away well pleased with this visit. (Cheers.)

MAYOR DUNNET,

MR. PHILLIPS THOMPSON

of Toronto, amid loud cheers, thanked the committee for the right loyal manner in which they had been treated since their arrival in Belleville. In Canada, he said, labor organizations have received an impetus which if properly carried out will result in enormous benefit to the workingmen. This could easily be seen in this city and he hoped the Knights of Labor here would not fail in their duty as citizens and men. On the other side of the line labor organizations have a strong influence for good in the community and in the present Presidential campaign both parties are bidding strong for their support. This was quite natural with such a powerful organization, for, he said, no party or faction can ignore them. No politician can ignore the workingman, and when they want to use them they in turn should use the politicians (Cheers.) In this country he said the producer has not been receiving what they ought to and he hoped there would be a time when the workingman or the producer would assert his rights. Henry George, the great labor advocate, justly said the other day in Hamilton that the land system of this country was responsible for the poverty and inequality that is seen around us. There are hundreds of acres in the Northwest that are being alienated by the Government and shut out from the people. (A voice, "Certainly.") The Knights of Labor are opposed to any class of people monopolizing these lands. (Hear, hear.) Many a hard working, sober, industrious man has been reduced to poverty by the faults of the system of his country. Capital all over the world was thoroughly organized, and why not labor? There has been too much dissension in the ranks of the workingman of late years. With capital when questions involving their own interests are at stake, they throw aside religious or party differences and work unitedly for the one sole object. On the other hand the laborers have been doing the very opposite. But he was glad to witness the dawn of a welcome change in the workingmen, and if they continue to work for their grand principles they are bound to succeed. A man who merely earns enough to support himself and family is no better than a serf. He should become a member of this order and demand fair treatment.

MR. ALFRED JURY,

of Toronto, a name familiar to many in Belleville, was accorded a warm reception when he rose to address his large audience After quiet had been restored he referred to the Knights of Labor as the one capable of accomplishing more than any other society in the world. (Cheers.) They knew no trade, no creed, no race, no color or country, (renewed cheering). Its bounds are brotherhood and humanity. It was for females as well as males, and their motto was "labor is holy." Their shield covered everything that was noble and honorable. The Knights of Labor of Belleville were prosperous and they should accomplish their purpose. Every member should work incessantly to accomplish those principles. That was the only way to flourish. It is often the case when on the waves of prosperity that success was not permanent. You mend for a time but like those who join a temperance society or a church and don't live up to the principles of the society, they fall back, This was equally the case with the Knighst of Labor. He was pleased to witness such a large attendance at this pic nic showing that labor was honored in Belleville. Its a duty man owes to himself and to posterity to leave the world better than he found it, like his forefathers left the world better than they found it. Ten years ago, he regretted to say, labor was not on the same footing as it was now. Then for trivial offenses a laboring man was punished under a criminal law, while a member of any other class of the community would be dealt with for exactly the same offense under a civil law. He referred, he said, to a breach of contract between a laboring man and his employer. But he was delighted to know that was not the case now —all men were treated alike. (A voice, "Thank God." Labor organizations are a benefit to every member and to all honest and human employers of labor. Every laborer should belong to some organization and he commended to their consideration the order of the Knights of Labor. In large cities the price of labor is set where labor councils exist and every manufacturer throughout the country is governed by their prices. That was one result of unity. Every man should belong to the Knights of labor. Their shield was broad enough to cover all. Once they become members an interest should be taken in meetings and the platform of their order discussed that they may derive some practical benefit from the society. Distributative cooperation is within the reach of all, and it adopted would prove a practical benefit. Labor organizations benefitted the laboring class throughout the world. He referred to the slavery of olden times and the degradation of labor in mining regions, but through the agency of labor organizations, such a state of affairs did not exist now-a-days (Applause). He did not deny that there were times in the history of every country when a reduction in wages was necessary in justice to the employees and the trade, but without an organization of this kind it would be impossible to tell when this time arrived. The same argument he said applied to an increase in wages. It is bound to eleate him socially, politically, morally and intellectually. It makes him a better father, a better brother, and if he lives up to the principles of the order it will make him a better man generally. (Prolonge cheers).

MR. CHARLES MARCH,

of Toronto, said that thorough organization was the first magnitude to the workingman. Toronto of late years had flourished wonderfully on account of the intelligent labor organizations, and he believed that brighter days were dawning upon Belleville. There was no better channel for improvement than under the motto "united we stand, divided we fall." That maxim was plainly visible on this occasion, and he hoped at the next pic-nic in Belleville they would march after this emblem. He thanked the members of the Knights of Labor and the committee for their kind reception to the Toronto delegates (Cheers.)

MR. D. J. O'DONOGHUE, EX M.P.P.

was greeted with a whirlwind of applause on rising to speak. He said he purposed confining his remarks to the ladies, but as he was a married man he did not intend to give them any "taffy." He was glad, however, to find so many pretty ladies in Belleville. (Cheers and laughter.) They had a powerful influence over men—a fact he was personally assured of. Part of their influence was noticeable on the ground in the entire absence of drunkenness. If it had not been for them there would doubtless have been several tangle-legged. He thought the ladies should feel warmly towards the Knights of Labor. They should know that the meetings are over at 10:30 or 11, and very soon after expect their husbands or their brothers home. They will soon learn that the parties to whom they look for their worldly happiness are striving to benefit their poitions, and consequently those of their families. The man who is charitable on principle will be a good man to his family. If he is of such a disposition before he is married, he will be doubly so after. He believed that female labor according to its work should receive the same wages as male labor. (Cheers) The founder of Christianity said "Labor was Noble and Holy," and what better motto he asked could a man want than that. In relating one or two racy anecdotes, he referred in a humorous speech to the two classes of people who were prohibited from becoming members of the order—hotel men and lawyers. A hotel keeper because whiskey robs them, and a lawyer because his presence in a community was productive of no good. When he was invited to attend this celebration he said he was promised ordinary civility, but from the handsome manner in which he had been treated he scarcely knew himself, and he was doubtful if his wife would know him when he reached home. But if his services had the effect of increasing the membership of the Knights of Labor in Belleville no matter how few, he would feel amply repaid. (Cheers.)

ALD. W. J. DIAMOND

said while Mr. O'Donohue gave the ladies taffy he evidently did not intend to give the lawyers any. He trusted there would be no occasion in Belleville for a conflict between labor and capital. The history of the city did not warrant such apprehension. The Knights of Labor was a protective one and from the addresses he was quite sure they would look after themselves. He made an ill-termed reference as to the protective tariff of the present Government but it came in such marked contrast to the non political tone of the other addresses that it fell flat on the assemblage.

GENERAL HOLIDAY NOTES.

There was a row at the Albion Hotel during the day.

List of games and winners to morrow.

The Baptist church had their pic-nic at Lake on the Mountain.

There were 240 men following the firemen in the procession.

The Sons of England had a wellattended excursion to Massassaga.

Mr. Matthew Bateson chief engineer of the Kingston fire brigade attended the celebration.

The True Blues of Kingston had an excursion to Belleville, which reached the city shortly after dinner.

The absence of inebriated individuals in Bleecker's Grove was exceedingly creditable. No liquor was sold on the grounds.

The Picton band under the leadership of Mr. Paul Larne furnished plenty of good music. The boys reached Belleville early in the morning by the overland route and drove back the same way last night.

The platform at the Knights' of labor pic-nic gave way and the occupants fell to the ground burried beneath the planks. The only one seriously injured was an eight year old son of Mr. McAdoo who had his right thigh badly bruised. Dr. Willson attended him.

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood. &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. THOMAS.—On Monday, 18th August, 1884, John Thomas, in the 78th year of his age.

Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using t. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-instate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without medication by the Marston Treatment. [illegible] MARSTON REMEDY CO., [illegible] Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequaled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

It was too late for Pauline to turn back now however, had she contemplated it—which she did not. [illegible] reole had already drawn her on to the landing, and pulling the door to, left them in darkness there being no light in the house, save in the sisters' room.

Cautiously the Creole and her companion stole down the stairs, followed by Keziah to the sitting apartment, through which Juliette had passed so brief a time ago.

Here uttering a little cry of vexation the Creole stopped abruptly.

'How foolishly thoughtless I am, I must go back an instant,' she whispered hurriedly. 'We shall need all the money we have perhaps, and I have left my purse on the table.'

Keziah offered to fetch it.

'No, for I know just where it is. Wait a second, do not fear.'

Swiftly she glided from the others, and up the stairs. It was not as the reader may judge, to her own room that she went but to Pauline's,

The first thing she beheld on entering was the letter to Mr. Folmsbee.

In an instant she tore it into twenty pieces, lighting a waxen taper, and carrying it to the grate where she had put the fragments of paper, ignited the little heap quietly watching until every atom was consumed.

Had her life—nay, worse, had her freedom depended upon it, she could not have left until she had seen all reduced to ashes.

A second later, she had joined the others, and together they passed from the house.

Having no desire for her visit to Nubia to be discovered, Juliette had thought it wisest to keep her knowledge of Jacob Seladden's presence in Longueville a secret. There was no need however to seek to increase her companion's caution. Keziah took the lead and the sisters followed; the younger clinging to the elder. Keeping close in the dark shadow of the house under the verandah, they made their way to the back of the premises, nearly up to which grew a thick plantation.

Like birds on the wing, they darted across the small intervening space between to be illuminated by the rising moon, and plunged into the deep shadows of the trees.

In its obscurity they felt secure and with a sigh of relief turned to give a last glance at the home they were leaving for ever.

As they did so, Pauline uttering a stifled cry, grasped the Creole's arm and pointed to a skulking angular figure, which undulating like a snake had just wriggled around the corner of the house, opposite to that by which they had come,

Even Keziah's heart beat quicker, and her ebony face turned to powdery blue, for she as the sisters recognised in the stooping form Jacob Seladden.

One moment later and they would have been lost.

The thought did cross her brain; but it brought no regret for what she had done.

Hardly venturing to breathe, clinging to each other they watched the man, sinister bird of ill-omen, glide stealthily alone and vanish around the other corner.

They guessed then the terrible danger they had run and how merciful Providence had been to them.

It was evidently Jacob Seladden's intention to perambulate the verandah that extended entirely round the house, until dawn at least.

They had escaped by a miracle.

Fear now gave them speed.

Swiftly they traversed the plantation and, out of breath reached the walnut grove.

To hurry down its lenge, under its somber shade, took but a few minutes,

On arriving at the end an exclamation of joy escaped the three, for at the bottom of a slight hollow caused by a slip in the land was discernable the dark bulk of several horses standing close together.

Stuart Loring so far had kept his word Keziah advancing gave a peculiar cry.

It was instantly reanswered by someone in the hollow.

All is safe, dear missies,' remarked the negress, follow me.'

Proceeding down the small declivity, they found at the base handsome horses in the charge of a negro.

On arrival the latter instantly assisted them to mount.

He did not speak much, but expressed the necessity for rapidity in actions.

After helping Keziah into the saddle he sprang into his own, relieved the negress of some of her parcels and took the lead riding a few paces ahead.

(To be continued.)

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief.

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."
—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY

is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks, The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward he goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in nother column.

PAGANINI.

He shambled awkward on the stage, the while
Across the waiting audience swept a smile.

With clumsy touch, when first he drew the bow,
He snapped a string. The audience tittered low.

Another stroke! Off flies another string!
With laughter now the circling galleries ring.

Once more! The third string breaks its quivering strands,
And hisses greet the player as he stands.

He stands—the while his genius unbereft
Is calm—one string and Paganini left.

He plays. The one string's daring notes up rise
Against the storm as if they sought the skies.

A silence falls; then awe; the people bow,
And they who erst had hissed are weeping now.

And when the last note, trembling, died away,
Some shouted "Bravo!" some had learned to pray.

SIDNEY NEWS.

TWO RUNAWAYS—BUILDING OPERATIONS—RETURNED HOME.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TOWN HALL, SIDNEY, Aug. 18.—While Mark Kehoe, his wife and child were driving to church yesterday, the shafts of his buggy became detached and the horse ran away, overturning the carriage and throwing the occupants out on the road. Mr. Kehoe and the child escaped almost unhurt, but Mrs. Kehoe was dragged some distance and received severe bruises, but it is pleasing to state that her injuries are not dangerous.

The Messrs. Lane, owners of a steam threshing machine, had a runaway on Saturday last with their thresher, which, being overturned, was pretty badly damaged.

Building operations have been quite brisk in this part of Sidney the present season. Messrs. Clarence Huffman and Charles Rose, of the 5th concession, and W. H. Bird, of the 4th, each having completed a very fine barn. The trustees of this place are also making repairs to our school which will change its appearance entirely.

Mr. John Moore has contracted to repair the spire of the church injured by the wind last fall, and has already removed the balls from the top of the spire, preparatory to having the rod straightened. His ascent to the top, made by a series of ladders, was watched with interest by quite a number of people.

Eddie, son of Mr. Peter Ketcheson, who was connected with a surveying party in the wilds of British Columbia for the past four or five months, returned home last week. Breathing the pure mountain air and the invigorating exercise and homely fare incident to "roughing it" have visibly improved his health.

SHANNONVILLE NOTES.

From our own Correspondent.

The first load of coal ever brought to our dock here for local consumption was discharged last week. Mr. Lake, late of rnestown, is opening up this new line of business, and we wish him every success in his new venture. The village has hitherto drawn its supply from Belleville —a distance of 9 miles—and it will be a public convenience to be supplied with a first class article at our doors. With cordwood at city prices, the demand for coal has greatly increased of late, affording the prospect of a fair market at Shannonville.

Our road authorities, who are responsible, should have their attention directed to the rickety old bridge here, as it is becoming very unsafe for travel, and in case of accident heavy damages would certainly be charged.

The Methodist Churches of this village and vicinity will not have services next Sabbath, in order to afford the ministers and people an opportunity of attending the Methodist Excursion to the St. Lawrence Central Camp Ground on Saturday.

THE EASTERN DIFFICULTY.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 18.—The Chinese Government protests against the action of France, and deplores the French refusal of American mediation; it says that China desires to submit her case to the judgment of Europe, hoping that a settlement of the pending difficulty may be discovered, Otherwise China will resist the best she can, leaving France answerable for the consequences.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Gen. Millot telegraphs as follows:—"I have published a proclamation to the people coupled with an ultimatum, regarding the regent's pretentions. The French flag has been hoisted over the citadel at Hue, the capital of Annam.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes. Trial Bottles Free at H. Templeton's Drug Store Large Size $1 00.

YOUNG MEN!—READ THIS.

THE VOLTAIC BELT Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public, and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

THE EXPERIMENTS OF PROFT. Dusart and Ralfe, of Paris, and Dr. Anderso, of London, and other eminent physiologists demonstrating the function of PHOSPHATES as excitants of nutrition and nerve power having brought these agents into general use, it ought not to be necessary to call the attention of invalids to WHEELER'S Phosphates and Calisaya, the best combination of these food elements, with Wild Cherry Bark, in existence. Its value in prostrate conditions of the system is obvious, and its prolonged use in obstinate cases that have resisted all ordinary treatment, will clearly demonstrate its extraordinary merits.

FIRE PROTECTION AND INSURANCE.

It would seem as if the city was destitute of even a scheme for providing it with the much-needed system of waterworks. No member of the Council appears to be ambitious of making for himself a name by devising some method which would prove acceptable to the corporation, and no company of citizens are enterprising enough to undertake to supply the life giving fluid.

But even if we cannot have waterworks for domestic purposes we can at least have a water pressure for fire purposes, and it is to one or two of the immense advantages which would accrue from a system of this kind that we propose to direct the attention of the property owners and manufacturers of Belleville and the business man who owns his stock if not the building it is in. It will be profitable to glance at the subject from an insurance point of view and the effect upon rates which an adequate water supply would produce. As water is the antithesis of fire, water is the most important item in connection with appliances for extinguishing fire. Will anyone say that this city has anything like an adequate water supply for this purpose? No one will pretend that it has. We have two good steam engines and a first rate volunteer brigade; but without water and hose the best brigade in the world stands helpless before the destructive element. We had the spectacle the other day of one engine feeding a barrel from which the second engine took an imperfect supply. Firestands at the river sometimes fail and precious moments are wasted during which valuable property—the city's wealth—is being consumed. A dozen mishaps and drawbacks are sure to intervene between the branchmen and these makeshifts. Sometimes all goes well and water in plenty is promptly furnished by the firemen, but the chances are as often the other way.

The necessity for a supply of water for fire purposes exists, and, until it is met, no property owner can sleep easy lacking the assurance that his bricks and mortar are as safe as the resources of the city will permit. What we wish to impress is this, that it would pay property owners and business men to carry through a project for the establishment of a pumping house and hydrants for the protection of their interests from fire. The question of insurance is an important one besides, and as the completion of such a project would ensure lower rates, it has a direct bearing on our subject.

It is well known that rates were on October 1st last, raised to a considerable extent by the imposition of the new tariff of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association. In some cases rates went up as much as 100 and in others 50 per cent. Cities and towns were classified into five grades known as A, B, C, D, and E. The position in which Belleville is may be judged by the fact that we are classed under "D," or next to the village without fire appliances of any kind. To illustrate the differences in rates resulting from this cause we will take dry goods, groceries, hats and furs and clothing, and the rate respectively under the different classifications, on first class buildings, thus:

GRADE	RATE PER $100.
A	.60
B	.75
C	.80
D	.90
E	1.25

Here then appliances provided by municipalities for extinguishing fires make a difference of over a hundred per cent, the tariff imposing upon places without any fire protection over double the lowest rate, such as obtains in Toronto and Hamilton. It imposes 30 cents per $100 additional upon Belleville. But as we cannot hope to get into the same grade as the cities mentioned let us see what difference it would make in our insurance if we got into a grade which is accessible to us, namely, into "B" where Kingston is. This would lower the rate about 20 per cent and on the total risks in the city would effect a saving to merchants and manufacturers of thousands of dollars annually. The new tariff specially excepts dwelling houses, churches, school houses, and all buildings not specially used for mercantile purposes. The increase therefore is a direct tax on business men and upon property owners whose property is used for commercial purposes. "B" grade applies to cities and towns who have good water supply, steam fire engines, and a good volunteer brigade.

To show the direct benefit conferred on the business community in this respect it is only necessary to point to Peterboro. In a timely editorial some weeks ago on this subject the Review said,—

> It will be learned as is already known to very many, that among other benefits that have been derived from the waterworks, and the public-spirited gentlemen who have procured them for us, we have really obtained a very substantial reduction of our insurance rates. The rate for Peterboro was fixed, in accordance with the general plan, on the footing adopted in other towns having a good steam fire engine and a well organized brigade. The fact of the construction of the waterworks, the efficiency of which was brought to the attention of the fire insurance board by the officers of the Water Company, caused this decision to be revoked and our grade to be raised, with a large consequent reduction in the cost of insurance. This was purely owing to the additional safety afforded by our waterworks, so that as far as they are concerned we have been greatly benefitted. Some of those who were bitter opponents of the waterworks were among the first to apply for a decrease of their insurance rates on account of the protection afforded by the works.

The fact that insurance does not cover loss arising from stoppage of business and diversion of patronage is a very considerable item which shrewd business men will take into account.

Is not this insurance question worth looking into?

—A FIELD OF CORNS.—Thomas Sabim, of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure, with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

TAKING THE BLACK VEIL.

GAVE HER WEALTH TO HER SISTERS, BUT AFTERWARD TOOK IT BACK.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20—Miss Lulu Taylor took the veil of profession at the Visitation Convent in the presence of Archbishop Ryan, who officiated and a number of relatives and friends of the family. This event is the sequel to an interesting story.

Miss Taylor was educated in the convent but before putting into effect her final determination to lead a religious life she resolved to dispose of the worldly effects left by her father, the late George R. Taylor, amounting to some $70,000. She executed deeds in trust to John Mc Guire and Alvin Mellier, conveying to her sisters, Miss Theresa and Miss Ida Taylor, the bulk of real estate left her by her father, and valued at $50,000. A part of the remainder she gave to her brother, George Taylor, and the rest, about $6,000, she took with her and entered as a novitiate in the Order of the Sisters of St. Francis de Sales, better known as the Visitation Order. The condition of the deeds executed before she went into the convent was that in the event of her changing her mind and returning to the world her property was to be returned to her.

Towards the latter part of April last she left the convent, went to a friend's house in Cass avenue formally notified her sisters of her return to the world. They thinking that this was merely a plot to secure the property for the convent, wrote to Miss Lulu and told her that if she had really and honestly returned to the world, with no intention of going back to the convent, they would willingly reconvey to her all that she had given them, but otherwise they were inclined to keep it. The result of this was a lawsuit against Miss Ida Taylor and her trustees. This was filed on April 23 last, and made returnable to the June term

It is asserted that before the suit was instituted the two sisters offered to compromise by agreeing to relinquish $25,000 and let their sister remain in the convent. This she rejected. After the matter had become public through the courts several conferences were held, the result of which was the dismissal of the suit on May 16. and the return of the property to Miss Taylor. After waiting a reasonable time she returned to the convent and to-day took the black veil, and the order is in possession of her wealth.

The Oka lacrosse club met last evening but adjourned till to morrow (Thursday) evening in Robertson's Eastern block.

Wallace Ross is matched against John Teemer, to row a five mile race for $1,000 a side, time to be decided upon to morrow. Teemer will concede Ross five seconds start.

Vanderbilt has sold Maud S. to Bonner for $40,000, notwithstanding that he had been offered $100.000. Bonner was asked "Suppose Jay Eye See should beat the record of Maud S.' what would you do then?" His answer was characteristic: "Buy him too, if I could, or put Maud S. to training at some good track like Chester Oak, Hartford, and give the public a free exhibition of speed."

The N. Y. Tribune's Saratoga special says Maud S. has been sold by Vanderbilt, as she brings him to much horsey notoriety. He believes that she is being jockeyed, that she can make a mile faster than 2:09, and that the driver lowers the record by a quarter of a second instead of letting the mare do her best at once. He is disgusted at the number of challenges to race and the fact that thousands of people visit his stable to see her.

William Beech who has defeated Hanlan is an Australian of Irish parentage. And has long been thought well of in the antipodes as a sculler. He first rowed for a championship on July 28, 1883, when E. A. Trickett defeated him over the Paramatti course, 3 miles 330 yards, in 21 min, 15 sec. Three weeks later they met again and Beech succeeded in wresting the championship from Trickett in the fast time of 20 min. 50½ seconds. Trickett asked for another race and it was agreed to row on Aug. 25. Beech won again, accomplishing the distance in 20 min. 44 sec. Beech then forfeited to Trickett, who was in turn challenged by Michael Rush. The race took place Dec. 1st 1883, and Trickett won easily. A week later Beech again defeated Trickett and reclaimed the title. Since that time Trickett, Rush, and Laycock have attempted to defeat Beech, but without success.

CHEESE MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Receipts on Friday, 20,552 pkgs. In the final test of the week the result is favorable to the buyer. The shippers who were before standing under the position appear to do so no more, the majority of the buyers have remained calmly indifferent, and holders, recognizing the only course left, have as gracefully as possible come down, and the close is weak and unsettled all around. We make 10½c the top rate, but as a final figure it is certainly extreme, a great many nice, and even fancy, lots selling ¼@ ½c under that, with here and there somewhat wonderful stories of the demoralization of holders and the slaughter they have made on their goods. In fact, with the break made there seems to be an inclination to jump on the market, but sellers were not willing to negotiate for this week on the basis of Friday's figures and indications, and after the first effects of the break have passed matters may shape up a little better. The accounts from the country continue to show high rates ruling, and cable advices are higher, though private accounts do not appear to fully confirm the latter point. The exports from here are estimated at 76,000 boxes and from Montreal 61,000 boxes, a supply looking quite full against the amounts already landing and afloat.—Bulletin.

A London cablegram says the Princess Louise left England Monday to spend the autumn in Germany. Lord Lorne is yachting with his father and mother in the Hebrides. It is reported that he will succeed his brother, Lord Colin Campbell, at the next election to the Commons in Argylshire.

Lord Lorne's new book, 'Canadian pictures by pen and pencil,' has just been issued. It is non-political, and gives a glowing account of the resources of Canada. The writer in inviting emigration to Canada, waxes enthusiastic over the democratic institutions of the Dominion. 'Canadians' he says, 'know that no political agitation however successful could enlarge their freedom, and there is nothing to disturb their perfect peace and satisfaction.'

A SANE WOMAN

SAID TO BE DETAINED IN AN ASYLUM BY HER HUSBAND.

MONTREAL, AUG. 19.—Some days ago a well-known Reform politician of this city, visited Longue Pointe Asylum, where he saw among the alleged lunatics a lady of his acquaintance who he believes is perfectly sane. She has been confined on a requisition of her husband, an insurance man, said to be living with another woman now. This afternoon the poltician and husband were opposite St. Lawrence Hall, when a short lively scene occured. The politician announced his intention to have the wife's case examined, and her out of the asylum immediately, whereupon the husband threatened to brain his interlocutor should he interfere. From the affair is likely to spring a celebrated case directing attention to the Quebec lunacy laws, as thoroughly as did Mrs. Weldon's suit to those in England.

ELEVEN PER CENT OF TARTRATE OF LIME DISCOVERED IN PRICE'S BAKING POWDER.

Analysis of Price's Baking Powder, of Chicago, shows:

LIME - - - - - 3.53 per ct.
AMMONIA - - - - - 1.05 per ct.
Starch - - - - - 19.00 per ct.

Prof Habirshaw, of New York, found the following in Price's Powder:

TARTRATE OF LIME - - - 11.85 per ct.

Aside from the inferiority of a powder containing a useless substance equaling about one-eighth of its entire weight (and which is the cause of the great lack of strength of Price's Baking Powder as shown by the tests of the Government Chemists), there is to be considered the serious consequences that may arise from taking this large amount of lime into the system.

Lime cannot be decomposed by heat, and is not eliminated in mixing or baking, and therefore all of this enormous proportion, as found in Price's Baking Powder, remains in the bread, biscuit or cake with which it is mixed, and is taken into the stomach.

By the application of heat to lime carbonic acid gas is driven off, and there is left quick lime, a caustic so powerful that it is used by tanners to eat the hair from hides of animals, and in dissecting rooms to quickly rot the flesh from the bones of dead subjects.

Lime mixed with starch (and both are found in Price's Powder) will produce ferment. The process is not quick, and does not take place until the food in which the baking powder is used has been some time in the stomach. Indigestion, dyspepsia, and more serious disorders result.

The cause of this large amount of Lime in Price's Baking Powder is the use of cheap and poor materials.

Prof C B Gibson, Chemist of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago, had in view these impure powders containing lime, like Price's, when, after having made an examination of many of them, he volunteered the following testimony that Royal Baking Powder is the best and purest in the market:

THE ROYAL ABSOLUTELY PURE.

"ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.: I recently procured a sample of your (Royal) baking powder from the kitchen of a private family in this city, and subjected it to an examination, I found it so different from many of the baking powders advertised as 'strictly' and 'absolutely pure,' and so far superior, that I thought you would be pleased to know it, and might find use for the certificate.

"In view of the vast difference and stupendous frauds that are offered to the most 'gullible' people on the face of the earth, it pleases me occasionally to strike an 'honest article.'

"Respectfully, C B GIBSON.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint returned home by the midnight express last night from his holiday trip in the west. He came back by way of Winnipeg.

Mr. Geo. E. Henderson, Q. C., had an operation performed upon him yesterday by Drs. Burdette, Sullivan, (of Kingston) and Hope, by which it is believed he wil greatly improve. Through an orifice in the abdomen the large tumor growing there was opened. This tumor was found to be almost as large as both fists.

MEDICAL MEN'S FEES.

Dr. Willson writes as follows :—

Dear Sir,—Your report in the case of Farley v. Ketcheson, in your issue of the 14th inst., under the above caption of "Medical Men's Fees," gives me credit for the statement that it was the usual practice for the physician calling in another in consultation, to pay his fee. I stated in reply to that question distinctly, that it was not the usual practice, but in this case, as it was minor surgery, I thought the fee charged, $15, for amputation of the fingers, was sufficient to cover all expenses. I referred to the tariff of the G.T.R.Co., which would only have allowed the fee charged inclusive of subsequent treatment. No second physician fees allowed by them, and I may here add that Mr, Ketcheson had to pay $18 also for subsequent treatment. I certainly think that when a physician is called in some one should be responsible for the fee.

Dr. Willson then recites a case tried before Judge Fralick last year in which a physician, hurriedly called to attend a lady, failed to recover his fee, because in accordance with professional etiquette, he retired when the attending doctor made his appearance. The judge ruled that he should not have left the patient.

ANOTHER LETTER.

SIR: In yesterday's issue of the ONTARIO you refer again to the case of Farley vs. Ketcheson and from your remarks about the matter you incline to reflect unfavorably upon the judgment of the Court by stating that it might be law but not equity. I can clearly imagine a case in which the patient would be liable both in law and equity to pay a consultation fee, but the question arises whether, taking all the circumstances into consideration connected with this matter, would it be right or just to compel Ketcheson to do so. I think not.

Dr. Burdett sent for the assistants. Ketcheson was in his right mind. Neither he nor his friends were consulted in the matter. Ketcheson afterwards paid amply for the operation, took a receipt, supposed all was settled and heard no more about it for four or five years until Dr. Farley commenced an action against him for three dollars as a consulting fee. Dr. Farley in my judgment was not only entitled to three dollars but to five and the other doctors the same, but the law respecting contracts was clearly against Dr. Farley, and equity forbids that Ketcheson should pay any more if one of the parties associated in the operation chose to play the role of the "honest miller" in this matter it was no fault of Ketcheson's. The judge's decision was a righteous one, in accordance with both law and equity and in the future will be useful in more ways than one.

MARY GLEN'S DEATH.

Coroner's Jury Censure the Salvation Army Officers.

The inquest on the body of Mary Eliza Glen, who came to her death by falling from an open hoist in the Metropolitan Hall on Saturday evening, was resumed yesterday at four o'clock, before Coroner Wilson and a jury. After a number of witnesses were examined the following verdict was rendered :

We have listened to the evidence on this case, and have come to the conclusion that Mary Eliza Glen came to her death accidentally by falling from a platform at the side of the Metropolitan Hall, and although we think the cause of her death was purely accidental, we censure the people who have charge of the hall for not properly protecting the doorway leading to the platform mentioned. Your jurymen have also come to the conclusion that Mary Eliza Glen was not prevented from leaving by the proper stairway. We think the opening by which the young person came to her death to be a very dangerous place left unprotected as it has been and recommend that it be at once put in a proper state to prevent in future any person from going on to the platform. We futher recommend that the inspector of public buildings inspect this hall to see if it is a fit and proper place for holding a large assembly.

FOUND WHEN ALMOST GONE.

SHANNONVILLE, Aug. 20.—On Tuesday of last week, Michael Tigh, and old resident of the rear of the township, and at one time one of its councillors, aged 85, left home for the ostensible purpose of visiting one of his sons. Becoming bewildered he seemed to wander off in the direction of Shannonville. On Thursday morning he was making enquiries about his course. On Friday he was missed by his friends, and they went out on the search, and on Saturday towards evening he was found on the marsh on the river standing to the armpits in mud and water, and yet alive. How long he had been there was impossible to say, as nothing had been seen of him from the Thursday when he was spoken with near Mr. Samuel Geddes'.

TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION.

In the evening a grand torchlight procession was given at nine o'clock with a display of fireworks. The procession formed in front of the city buildings, composed of the town bands, the fire brigade and the knights of labor. Every man carried a lighted torch, and as the procession moved up Front street a brilliant display of meteor fireworks was also given which coupled with the rockets shot off from the windows of prominent stores along the line of march, the effect was indeed grand. A committee of the Knights of Labor headed the procession after which came the Picton band, the the firemen in single file, and afterwards the Oddfellows band and Knights of Labor. They marched around Brown's foundry and back to the place of starting, the streets at that time being densely packed with people. The procession over a large number immediately sought out the city hall, and then to the music of the Oddfellows orchestra, the concluded the day's festivities by a social assembly.

OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co , and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid. or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

ROBBED OF $15,000.

But the Burglars Leave the Cheques and Take Cash Only.

ATTEMPT TO ENTER MR. H. CORBY'S.

Early this morning the residence of Rev. Amos Campbell, corner Hotel and George, was entered by burglars who obtained $355 in cash. On the same flat with the sleeping apartments, at the head of the stairs stands a safe which yesterday contained $14,500 in cheques, $355 in cash, and $650 in money orders and small drafts. This morning about one o'clock Mrs. Campbell woke her husband and told him there was some one in the house. He, being skeptical, did not rise to see for some little time. Going out, however, Mr. Campbell speedily discovered that the safe was open and the $15,500 gone. There was a rope tied to the safe which led out through the open window and was employed by the burglars doubtless as a means of exit, They must have entered by the same way as the basement of the house was untouched. The police on duty were notified, and the Chief and his men went up and found the book containing all the cheques lying beside the steps leading from the house. There was no clue to the thieves, who opened the safe, an old fashioned one, with a key. Mr. Campbell has been collecting for the levelling up fund of the Methodist church and $14,500 in cheques belonged to that fund while the cash and remaining $650 were his personal property. Knowing this the burglars calculated on securing a "boodle," As it is they got off with the $355 in cash. There were at least two burglars on the job. Mr. Campbell says that he will endeavor to meet future midnight visitors with a brace of pistols.

SCENE AT H. CORBY'S.

The residence of Mr. H. Corby was last night in charge of the servant and her family, the occupants being away. About 3 o'clock this morning the servant heard some one at the basement trying first one window and then another. Her eldest daughter also heard them. The servant got up and procuring a revolver went to a window in the second story and fired two shots. The alarmed burglars then made off and quietness reigned for the balance of the night.

FOUR BURLY BURGLARS.

Early this morning, when the first shower was falling, Mr. T. Spafford, of cor. Queen and Charles sts., saw four men watching Mr. John Hodge's house which is just opposite to his. Getting a revolver Mr. Spafford took up a position at the window and shortly afterwards saw the four men cross to Hodge's and enter the house. Whether he watched tell the men again emerged or not deponent sayeth not, but after a long interval the four big men did emerge and proved to be the Chief and three of his men ! Mr. Spafford was telling the Chief this morning at eleven o'clock of what he had witnessed and was told who the "burglars" were.

Mrs. Elliott, of Pine street, saw two men skulking about the house during the night and ordered them away.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.

A Boy Tied up in His Bed by an Unknown.

WAS THE POST OFFICE THREATENED?

Fred Weese is the name of a boy about 15 in the employ of Mr. Cronk, livery keeper, Pinnacle Street, who has the contract for conveying the mails between the G T R station and the post office. Last night Mr Heber W Cronk took Weese with him to the station and on reaching the post office again sent him home with the red mail wagon, Mr Cronk remaining at the post office. In about half an hour Mr Cronk went home, and in passing the room off the stable in which the boy Weese sleeps heard him crying and asked him what was the matter. The reply came through the darkness, "I'm all tied up" "What ?" was the surprised interrogation from Mr Cronk and again the boy said, "My hands and feet are tied," Going in to him Mr Cronk found that such was the case. Lying on his bed lay Weese with his hands crossed in front of him, and tightly tied and his pedal extremities in the same condition. He was bound with a new stout rope about half the thickness of a clothesline. Beside the bed lay a hardwood wagon tongue, a blow from which would have forever silenced an outcry. Weese was released, but being a little simple minded and half scared to death he could give no coherent account of the circumstance, He said one man had quietly opened his door entered and tied him up: The time was about half-past twelve, He does not know who it was, but speaks of a 'bus man called "Hank," so that he evidently recognized or thought he recognized the features of some one whom he had seen before, He says that his assailant said never a word during the operation of tying,

There is but one explanation of the occurrence. In order to get inside the Post office outer back door at night, which is necessary to arouse the caretaker. Mr, Cronk carries a key by which he lets himself inside this door. As young Weese was observed driving the wagon home he was doubtless taken for Cronk and attacked for the purpose of getting this key by means of which it was imagined access could be obtained to the Post office safe and its contents, If burglars attempt to play any such game they will find themselves out of their calculations.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Despite the terror of his companions, who were full of fear of pursuit and recapture, their guide persisted in maintaining a slow cautious walk, so that the ring of the horses' hoofs should not, in the clear, still night, be borne to the house on the breeze, which blew in that direction.

At the end of half an hour of torture to the younger women, the negro declared they were far enough distant to admit of their quickening their pace especially as they were entering upon an extensive prairie.

As he spoke he dug his heels into the sides of his horse, who started off on a sharp gallop, an example immediately followed by the rest.

Keziah rode last and the sisters side by side in the saddle.

Both were full of anxiety, but the invigorating exercise and cool night air soon began to raise their spirits and strengthen their nerves.

Their hearts beat high; fear commenced to subside.

They felt they were now indeed safe.

Pauline ceased even to tremble, and, according to the gentle fondness of her nature, expressed her joy to the Creole.

'Safe, dear Juliette, safe,' she whispered 'In a short time all our troubles will be over. Good brave David Ringsbole, we owe all to you!'

How long was the veil to cover her eyes? When was it to be lifted from her half-sister's as well as from her own?

Soon—very soon now.

When they were alone, helpless among enemies, Pauline, utterly friendless, having not even Juliette to comfort her, they each were to learn the truth, without even Eustace Belmore, with his great heart and great love near to help—to rescue

CHAPTER XXVIII.

FURTHER IN THE HIDDEN NET—WATCHED AND GUARDED.

The horses the Longueville party rode had been well selected. Strong of muscle and swift of pace, they passed like flying shadows over the country, above which the moon was now breaking.

Through dense plantations, down rugged gullies, over vast, verdant savannahs, and traversing scarcely beaten paths beneath the branches of mighty trees, the monarchs of primeval forests, they sped the negro always taking the lead, the sisters neck and neck, and Keziah bringing up the rear.

Fear of pursuit for a long time banished all sense of fatigue. The delicate frames of the half sisters appeared endowed with a man's endurance, not a murmur escaped the lips of either; their graceful forms were bent over their horses mane's, and their eyed directed eagerly forward they followed their guide.

Pauline's heart was full of exultation—Juliette was free.

The Creole was full of trepidation, for she alone knew in whom, almost a stranger she had relied, while she was also aware that she was entirely ignorant of the road they were pursuing, and might be led anywhere.

The first signs of dawn were becoming visible in the sky, and in the mysterious rustle of foliage around them, as if the leaves were waking from sleep and whispering their dreams, Juliette was aroused from a reverie by a stifled sigh. Glancing around, she was startled by the pallor of her companion's face, the tight contraction of the small lips. A pang of compassion shot through her.

'My dear Pauline,' she exclaimed in much concern, 'you are ill.'

'Not ill but terribly tired; only that,' responded the young girl attempting to smile. 'Do you fancy we are far enough from Longueville to rest a short space with safety? Indeed I fear I cannot yet go much farther.

The Creole instantly checked her horse.

'Certainly; that is, at any risk, we will not go further.' she said with a calm decision. 'You shall have rest. To proceed. I see w'll kill you.'

Raising her voice she summoned back the negro.

'We must rest awhile,' she said in a tone that showed she was accustomed to obedience.

'We are too tired with the long and rapid ride to proceed.'

Apparently the position by no means pleased the guide.

'Dey were not de orders,' he said. 'We were not to stop till we got bery far to Sarakam.

'They were one set of orders,' remarked remarked Juliette, imperiously, 'mine are that we remain, Yonder forest offers both shelter and concealment, and opportunity of rest; we will stop there.'

'Missus knows best,' began the negro grumblingly unconvinced.

'In this much I do,' responded the Creole, haughtily. 'At any rate it shall be so, whether best or worst'

She turned her horse's head, placed her hand on Pauline's bridle, and proceeded towards the forest she had indicated.

The negro muttered something between his thick lips, but made no further objections. Dropping back he joined Keziah, allowing the sisters to take the lead.

ADVERTISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it.'
—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

'And we are so glad that he used your Bitters.'—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"MELIORA PRIORA."

The Spectator.

There sits a thrush in my garden,
And sings on the topmost spray;
And its song is ever the loudest
In the hush at the close of day.

There lies a child in a bedroom,
White-gowned in a cot snow-white;
And her laugh is ever the gayest
In the dusk, at the fall of night.

My beautiful child in her chamber,
My beautiful bird on the tree,
Whence comes it, ye twin blithe spirits,
Whence comes it that burst of glee?

Is it thanks for the day just over,
No stain in the past to rue?
Or the joy of the living Present?
Ah, would I could be like you?

In a moment the thrush has ended;
In a moment the child lies down;
In a moment has sleep descended
And covered them both, God's own.

But I lie and toss on my pillow—
I lie there the whole night long;
And I hear the hour from the distant tower
Toll forth like a doleful song.

Ah, me, for the child's free spirit!
Ah, me, for the bird's gay tone!
Gifts greater we men inherit,
But the light, free heart has flown.

DR. A. M. ROSS.

DISTINGUISHED CAREER OF A NATIVE OF BELLEVILLE.

Montreal Herald Aug. 19

Whilst giving short biographical sketches of some of the eminent scientists who are visiting the city at present, it does not do to forget that we have in our midst certain gentlemen whose names are well-known in the world of science and of letters. Such a one is Dr. Alexander M. Ross, of this city, who spent the last quarter of a centuryin collecting and classifying Flora and Fauna of BritishNorth America. In 1875 Dr. Ross sold his magnificent collection of birds and moths to the Russian Government for a largesum. This collection, theresult of 15 years incessant work, wasunique in its way, comprising a stuffed speciman of every known Canadian bird, and the Entomological collection was equally good. The collection was first offered to the Canadian Government, but the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie was reluctantly obliged to refuse to purchase it, as he had no appropriation for such an object. Now there is not a museum of note in Europe but what is posessed of one of Dr. Ross' collections. This collection contains all the mammals, birds, reptiles and fishes of the Dominion. Dr. Ross has been a member of the British Association of Science for the past 14 years and of the French Association for the past 10 years. The following brief sketch of Dr. Ross' life and labors will, therefore, prove doubly interesting in view of the approaching gathering of scientific men in this city.

Alexander Milton Ross was born at Belleville, Ont., 18th of December, 1832, has devoted special attention to ornithology, ichthyology, botany and etermology of Canada. Has personally made large and valuable collections of the fauna and flora of Canada. Has enriched by his contributions the natural history museums of Paris, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Rome, Athens, Dresden, Lisbon, Teheran and Cairo with collections of Canadian fauna and flora. Author of Birds ofCanada (1872) Butterflies and Moths of Canada [1873] Flora of Canada [1873], Forest trees of Canada [1864], Mammals, Reptiles, and Freshwater Fishes of Canada, [1878], Recollections of an abolitionist [1867], Was knighted by the Emperor of Russia [1861], King of Italy [1876, King of Greece [1876], King of Portugal [1877], King of Saxony [1876], and the Shah of Persia [1882], also decoration from Khedive of Egypt, and the decoration of the Palm Leaf from the Government of France [1879].

Elected fellow of the Royal Society of literature and the Linneau and Zoological of England; Royal Societies of Antiquaries of Denmark and Greece; Imperial Society of Naturalists of Russia; Imperial Botanical and Zoological Society of Austria: Royal Academy of Science of Palermo,, Italy; member of the Etomological Societies of Russia, Germany, Italy, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Bohemia, and Wortemburg. Was an active and earnest abolitionist during the anti-slavery struggle in the United States, and during the rebellion was an active officer of the Sanitary Commission of the United States army.

Why suffer from weak nerves, want of appetite, and general debility? letting the loss of sleep and rest impoverish the system and thin the blood, when such a really meritorious remedy as Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine may be had at any drug store. This article is recommended by the highest members of the medical faculty in cases of indigestion, general debility, loss of appetite, and nervous affections of all kinds. It is also specially beneficial to children and delicate females, and to business men, students, and those who have much brain work. We would say, Never be without it. It will strengthen you, keep your system in regular order, and enable you to obtain? successfully grapple with the work you have to do. It is pleasant to the taste, and contains nothing injurious to the most delicate constitution. Remember to ask for the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman Toronto, and we are sure you will be satisfied that you have full value for your money. Druggists sell it.

YOUNG MEN!—READ THIS.

THE VOLTAIC BELT Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. IF IT WERE POSSIBLE to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition, and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE NEW MEMBER FOR QUEENS.

The Toronto Mail said recently that Canada (meaning the Conservative portion of it) did not want reciprocity. Yesterday it announced that Mr. Jenkins, "Conservative", had been returned for Queen's county, Prince Edward Island. We would like to ask our contemporary if it accepts the following resolution passed at the convention which nominated Dr. Jenkins now "Conservative" M.P. for Queens!

Resolved. That in view of the early abrogation of the Fishery Articles of the Treaty of Washington, the increasing strength of public feeling in the United States in favor of the renewal of reciprocal trade relations with Canada, a feeling which is evidently due in no small degree to the operation of the National Policy, we have every confidence that Sir John Macdonald will, by the exercise of that tact and skill which contributed so much to the framing of the Washington Treaty, secure, if possible, the establishment of Reciprocal Free Trade with the United States on a just and liberal basis.

We should not like our esteemed western Conservative contemporaries to ignore this resolution setting forth the views of the latest member of Parliament and his constituents.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

According to the Great Western Railway crop report the grain is satisfactory, but apples are poor and peaches a failure.

* *

The St. John, N.B., Sun recalls the fact that in 1849, the name of "Sir" David Macpherson was affixed to the famous annexation manifesto issued at Montreal. The present titular knight, however, will now sing to Britannia, "I Will Be True To Thee."

The midsummer dullness in the lake marine is hitting the owners of vessels in the lumber trade on the lake very hard. Every class connected with the shipping feels the depression. Vessels are not only not making money and paying off old debts, but they are running further in debt.

* *

It seems extraordinary that an American member of the British Association for the Advancement of Science writing from Somerset, should address the President in this fashion: "To His Highness Lord Rayleigh, Montreal Canada." The same mistake was made by a member from Pittsburgh, who wrote: "To His Highness Sir William Thompson."

Laboring men are out of employment and starving after a quarter of a century of Republican rule, nay, more—it is well known in Massachusetts and Rhode Island—and how far in other parts of the North, I leave the good and just minded of those localities to speak—that capital has coerced the votes of laboring men to its own purposes.—Ben Butler.

If a protective policy for a lengthened period has reduced the laboring classes to this melancholy condition we in Canada should pause before treading the same uninviting path.

The legality of keeping a child in school after regular hours for not learning his lessons was tested in an English law court recently when the mother of a little boy had the head master of the school he attended before the court. The judge in giving his decision, said that the master had authority to impose upon the children the duty of studying at home, and that he therefore had no right to detain him, and he also said that in his opinion this detention amounted to an assault. As the plaintiff in the case did not wish to press it the master was discharged on paying costs.

PREMIER FIELDING ELECTED.

SIGNIFICANT LIBERAL VICTORY IN NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, Aug. 20.—The election in Halifax county consequent upon Hon. W. S. Fielding becoming Provincial-Secretary and Premier, closed to-day resulted in a grand triumph for the Liberal party. Mr. John Y. Payzant, the Liberal-Conservative candidate, being defeated with an estimated majority of nearly one hundred. All the returns are not yet in—Upper and middle musquodoboit, Little River, and Upper prospect being yet to hear from. If the last-named places give as large a Liberal majority as in the election of 1882 Mr. Fielding will be triumphantly returned by 170. In the city there was an almost unprecedented victory for the Liberal party, Halifax giving Fielding a majority of 18. At the last election the Tories carried the city by nearly 400 votes, and with the present exception only once since Confederation have the Liberals gained a victory in the city. The reason for this superb triumph is clearly because the election has been run principally on Dominion issues. The National Policy has been all through the contest the foremost issue, although local lines have come in for their full share of consideration. The gigantic failure of the Dominian Government's policy has been kept prominently before the electors, and the verdict now rendered may be considered as a open condemnation of the course pursued by Sir John and his colleagues. As the city has almost invarably gone Conservative the Tory party have all along been confident of success, and the blow struck at Conservative interests has been like a thunder clap to the party.

SHOOTING AT AURORA.

Aurora, Aug. 21.—About 9 o'clock Monday night a young man named John Nixon and John Sotton, who is employed as hostler at the Royal hotel, were talking about trading revolvers, and the latter handed Nixon his revolver to examine. After inspecting it he handed it back to his companion, who had no sooner grasped the handle than the weapon was discharged the bullet entering Nixon's body just above the stomach. Very little hopes are entertained of his recovery.

WHICH LUDGATE?

Salvation Army Capt. Ludgate and a companion visited Hanlan's point Tuesday. They obtained a skiff and ventured out into the lake, although the water was very rough at the time. Desiring to return, they found they could not manage the craft and but for the exertions put forth by Paul Pattillo would certainly have been drowned. The salvationists walked off without thanking their rescuer.

THE BOUNDARY CASE.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT CONFIRMS MR MOWAT'S TRIUMPH.

Globe Cable.

London, Aug. 20.—The report to Her Majesty in Council on the subject of the boundaries between Ontario and Manitoba, rendered by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, defines the western boundary and in part the northern boundary of Ontario. The south-western boundary is the north-west angle of the Lake-of-the-Woods, thence due north till the English River is reached. The northern boundary so far as settled is along the English River, including Lac Seul and Lake Joseph.

With reference to the third question submitted by Ontario and Manitoba to the Privy Council, namely:—Whether—in case legislation is needed to make the decision in the case binding or effectual—Acts passed by the Parliament of Canada, and the Provincial Legislatures of Ontario and Manitoba, in connection with the Imperial Act 34 and 32 Vic., cap. 28, or otherwise, will be sufficient, or whether an Imperial Act for the purpose will be necessary. The report expresses no opinion as to the sufficiency or otherwise of concurrent legislation by the Provincial and Dominion Parliaments, but states that it is desirable and most expedient that an Imperial Act of Parliament be passed to make this decision binding and effective.

The Order in Council approves the Report of the Judicial Committee, and commands that the Award be obeyed and carried into execution.

BELIEF OF GORDON.

London, Aug. 20.—The Government is pushing the preparations for the relief expedition to Khartoum with a degree of official zeal that is wholly unprecedented in the recent history of Egyptian affairs. At the same time remarkable precautions are being taken to prevent the press and the public from knowing more about the progress of events than it may suit the officials to divulge. The Government censorship of the telegraphs, which was first instituted when bombard Alexandria, has been re-established in Egypt, and is enforced under a series of regulations, which cause considerable hardship to both press and commercial correspondents.

A LIBERAL VICTORY.

GOVERNOR CLEVELAND.

The Democratic Candidate's Letter of Acceptance.

HE BELIEVES IN PARTY GOVERNMENT

Albany, Aug. 18.—Gentlemen,—I have received your communication, dated July 28th, 1884, informing me of my nomination to the office of President of the United States, by the National Democratic Convention, assembled at Chicago. I accept nomination with grateful appreciation of the supreme honor conferred and solemn sense of the responsibility which, in its acceptance, I assume, I have carefully considered the platform adopted by the convention, and cordially approve the same. So plain a statement of the Democratic faith and principles upon which that party appeals to the suffrages of the people needs no supplement or explanation." After remarking that the office of President of the United States is essentially executive in its nature, he proceeds to state that parties are a necessary outgrowth of our institutions, but the Government is not by the people when one party fastens its control upon the country and perpetuates its power by cajoling and betraying the people instead of serving them. A denunciation of the Republicans for corruption, followed by a proposal that there should be an amendment to the constitution disqualifying a President from re-election.

THE DIGNITY OF TOIL.

The sentiment which follows recognizes the dignity of labor, and the fact that honor lies in honest toil. Contented labor is an element of national prosperity, ability to work constitutes capital, and the wage of labor the income of the vast number of our population, and this interest should be jealously protected. He condemns the coming to the United States of those who do not intend to became Americans, but will injudiciously compete with these justly entitled to our field of labor. He reiterated a statement contained in his letter of acceptance of the nomination of Governor regarding the workingman, a proper regard for the welfare of the workingman being inseparably connected with the integrity of our institutions.

The commerce of a nation to a great extent determines its supremacy. Cheap and easy transportation should, therefore, be liberally fostered within the limits of the constitution. The general Government should so improve and protect its natural water ways as will enable the producers of the country to reach a profitable market.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The Government being for the people, he remarks they have a right to expect value for the wages they pay the Civil servants, and the latter should neither be expected nor allowed to do questionable party service, The interest of the people will be better protected. The estimate of public labor and duty will be immensely improved. Public employment will be open to all who can demonstrate their fitness to enter it. The unseemly scramble under Government, with consequent importunity which embitters official life will cease, and the public departments will not be filled with those who conceive it to be their first duty to aid the party to which they owe their places. instead of rendering patient and honest return to the people. He concludes:—If I should be called to chief magistracy of the nation by the suffrages my fellow-citizens, I will assume the duties of that high office with a solemn determination to dictate every effort to the country's good, and with humble reliance upon the Supreme Being, who, I believe will always bless honest human endeavor in the conscious discharge of public duty.
(Signed) Grover Cleveland.

ENGLISH APPLE MARKET.

SHORT CROP IN EUROPE—GOOD DEMAND FOR CANADIAN APPLES

In view of the early resumption of apple exports from Canada to Europe, says the circular of J. B. Thomas, of Covent Garden, London, Eng. it is desirable that shippers should know the crop prospects of Europe, and the consequent prospect for Canadian apples in the market. In the United Kingdom, owing to cold weather during June, the crop will only be a half one. In France the prospects are in favor of an average crop, Canada apples and russets being over the average. In Holland owing to frost in blossoming time the crop will be only a half one. The crop in Belgium will be light, and, as shipments have already commenced, the supply will be exhausted by the middle of October. In Germany there will be a short crop. In Portugal the crop is good and prices favorable for shipment, but shipments after September will be small. Messrs. J. B. Thomas therefore conclude:

1. That the apple crop of Europe, taking it as a whole, will be considerably under that of last year.

2. That fall shipments of American and Canadian apples to Glasgow and Liverpool should meet with good demand at values ruled by supply.

3. That shipments to London of good solid stock will, as in similar seasons, compare favorably in net proceeds with other markets on this side.

THE RULES OF HEALTH.

[A correspondent of the St. James' Gazette suggests that the way to guard against cholera is to avoid worry and live as well as possible.]

L'sten to each simple rule,
As to conduct and to diet;
You must keep serenely cool
Through the cholera run riot.

Eat the best of all things good,
Ne'er a dish that very nice is
Hurts you, while it's understood
You avoid too many ices.

You may eat all sorts of fish,
Those who say you mayn't talk gammon
But a prudent man wont wish
Too much cucumber with salmon.

Flesh and fowl are yours to eat;
Every dish a toothsome comer;
But the chops of pork are meat
That you need not try in summer.

Fruit is welcome, too, I trow,
When not over-ripe; at present,
Strawberries and cream you'll vow
Will be extremely pleasant.

* * * * *

Keep yourself from worries free;
If you've lawsuits, you must gain 'em;
Thus quite easily, you see,
You'll preserve the 'corpus sanum'

THOUGHT IT AN ANSWER TO PRAYER.

New York Herald.

Just before the earthquake of last Sunday afternoon reached Manasquan, N. Y, the corps of six "blood-washed warriors" of the Salvation Army was engaged in holding an open air meeting. Its shock was accompanied by a distant vibration of the buildings throughout the town, and the people flocked to their doorways in alarm and wonder. A few minutes before the shock was felt the "captain" offered prayer. She was somewhat discouraged by the want of interest shown in the Army by the sun-browned people of the town, and she said in her prayer that "We want God to come in the fulness of His power and shake the town upside down." Some of her hearers were skeptical, but when the earth shook they became greatly worried and have not yet recovered from their fright.

A Field of Corns,—Thomas Sabim, of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

COULDN'T STAND FAMILIARITY.

Arkansaw Traveler.

Mr. Hacklin went into an unhealthful neighborhood and started a newspaper, Several months afterward he was seen in the vicinity of his old residence.

"Hello," said a friend; "back so soon?"

"Yes; I got restless."

"Didn't like the neighborhood?"

"Not after the people became too familar. I had not been there long until it became evident that I would not like the place. I did not mind them shooting at me every time I went out of the office, and I even tolerated their blazing away at me whenever I'd stick my head out of the window; but when they fell into the habit of climbing on the housetop and shooting down the chimney, why, I became disgusted at such familiarity."

Other Butter Color.

Burlington, Vt., May 31, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co, and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A MEDICAL CASE.

DEAR SIR:—As the name of Geo. E. Henderson, Esq., Q. C., and County Attorney, has come before the public in a manner calculated to do me harm (it being pretty generally known that I had been in attendance on him) I feel compelled to place the facts before the public. On the 24th of June I was called to see Mr. Henderson and attended him through a very serious attack of peritonitis (inflammation of the covering of the abdomen of the right side) As he began to recover a swelling on that side began to show itself, the usual result of inflammation, which under treatment had nearly disappeared and which I think would have subsided entirely if my direction had been carried out. As I heard nothing from him from ten to twelve days I supposed he was doing well until I received a note saying Dr. Burdett had been called in and my services were no longer necessary. To my astonishment there appeared in your issue of the 14th inst. a paragraph that a tumor had been discovered in his stomach followed the next day by another paragraph saying the tumor was in the abdomen and the outcome was conjectural, Knowing that such opinions endangered Mr. Henderson's life, I took an early opportunity to tell his son that I was perfectly certain it was no tumor, but a result of inflamation as I said before, and which now most likely contained pus or fluid, which should be drawn off by an aspirator, that delay was dangerous, and advised him to send for Dr. Sullivan who would I was sure sustain my opinion. When I saw in your yesterday's issue a paragraph still calling it a tumor, I considered it so obviously the intention to mislead the public that I felt called upon to notice it. Now I challenge contradiction when I assert that instead of a tumor it was pus formed from the result of inflamation and that it was drawn off by an aspirator.

Yours truly,
B. S. WILLSON.

It is estimated by the London Times that in England there are over 300,000 cyclists, and that the capital invested in the manufacture of bicycles and tricycles is about $15,000,000, employing from 6,000 to 10,000 men.

The Kingston wheelmen hope that their finances will soon be in a condition to enable them to inaugurate a first-class track. This is what you need, brethern. With a good track in summer and a hall in which novices could learn in winter, there is no reason why the Kingston club should not be as large and active as that of Belleville.

Miss Louise Armaindo is about 24 years of age, was born near Montreal, Canda, and first learned to ride the wheel in Chicago, October 1881. She has defeated Morgan and Woodside. She is the only woman on record as defeating men at athelic sports, and combines the courage of a lion with the grace and delicacy belonging to her sex. And don't forget she's a Canadian.

He has nearly 2,000 now and will issue the book when he has pledges from 3,000 that they will take his book at $1 when issued. The name and address of each subscriber will be published in the back of the book, and it will therefore constitute a complete bicycle directory for the continent. Capt Retallack is now making up a second list of names to forward. The work will be handsomely printed, of 400 pages, bound in cloth with gilt top, and no advertisements.

Even if we have lost the single scull championship of the world, the number of American acquatic honors now held in Canada is not small as the following shows: National Association: Single sculls—Jos. Laing, Montreal, Double sculls—C. Enright, W. O'Connor, Toronto. Four oars—Argonauts, Toronto. Northwestern Association: Sculls, J. J. Donohoe, Hamilton. Double sculls—C. Enright, W. O'Connor, Toronto. Four oars—Chathams, of Chatham. Yachting: Championship of Lake Ontario now held by "Norah," of Belleville. Besides these Hanlan is still champion of England and America.

Mr. W. H. Crawford, who manages for Mr. Case, took a look at Prospect Park, New York, on Monday afternoon, and feeling satisfied that the track can be put in condition for a fast mile, accepted an engagement to trot Jay Eye See and Phallas there on Tuesday afternoon, August 26th. He is anxious to have Jay Eye See beat the record of Maud S. before he starts west with him, and he prefers to do it on a track near the home of Maud S. The little gelding has beaten 2.11 three times in succession on three different tracks, which is a feat never accomplished by any other horse; and now that he is keyed up for a great effort, he will be started in the full confidence that he will equal or surpass the 2.09¾ of Maud S. It is also believed that Phallas can beat his own record—2.13¾—and he will be started on Tuesday next with that object in view.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS' THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the lifeand on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions. which they soon resuscitate, They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—It all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Entering the cool shade make by the magnificent trees, they traversed the narrow parh, if path it could be termed, for some short distance. when the Creole decided a small glade, its charming green enameled with gem-like flowers, and surrounded by tall, thick-foliaged trees, that, inclined towards the centre, formed a verdant canopy, that even a tropical sun could not penetrate.

'The very spot,' ejaculated Juliette.

'The very look gives rest,' smiled the younger girl, brightening at the prospect; 'let us dismount, our horses hoofs are too rough to tread that splendid carpet.

Alighting, they consigned the animals to the negro's keeping, after which with Keziah two shawls, they entered the glade.

The ground slightly inclined upward, forming a slope, that rendered the position more pleasant.

Keziah spread a thick cloak beneath one of the trees, up the smooth trunk of which twined, until it reached the topmost branches. when it flung itself down in a shower of graceful festoons, that most beautiful of parasites, the bignonia, or trumpet plant; the hide and seek playground of numerous tiny humming birds, who flashed in and out of the scarlet, trumpet-shaped blossoms like brilliant gems endowed with the gift of volition.

Reclining on the soft cloak, leaning partially against the trunk of the tree the sisters prepared to sleep.

Keziah took her position on guard within a few paces of her mistresses, while the negro having tethered the horses seated himself among the long-grasses bordering the path and apparently dosed too.

For a space, the singularity of their position prevented slumber despite great fatigue; but soon, as if for protection—poor child! not to have had a better; but it was the dove cowering under the wing of the vulture—Pauline's arm crept around the Creole's waste, her lovely head, from which she had removed her hat, sank upon the other's shoulder and slept soundly.

As Juliette gazed down on the sweet girlish countenance, a bitter spasm of contrition darted through her brain.

For a second she regretted having permitted her to come.

Only for a second.

She suddenly remembered Eustace Belmore; and a kiss which she seemed yet to feel, though pressed on her hand long, long ago by him. banished the momentary softness, and she reflected—

'What harm have I done after all? They are but separated for a brief—brief time.'

With an expression of will Juliette sought, and soon after found obliviion in sleep.

For half an hour complete silence reigned. Save for the snaky glitter of Keziah's bead-like eyes, all the four migh have been thought to doze, when a tall figure cautiously pressing back the bushes approached the glade.

Stealthily as a panther he came, the boughs closing noiselessly behind him, until reaching a point from which, concealing himself, he could command the sister's resting-place.

It was upon them his eyes rested.

His lips ejactulated—

'How beautiful! Fair roses, emblems of the north and south climes; a charming picture upon which poets would gaze unsated.'

Leaning against a tree, his arms folded he regarded them with a gaze full of admination.

The charming picture,' using his own words, was worthy contemplation.

Entwined in each other's embrace, both lovely, yet so strangely contrasted, the sisters reclined in the abandonment of slumber, Juliette's olive cheek resting on the golden braids of Pauline.

About them were the rich-hued shawls; around the emerald glade; at their feet the negress, in her picturesque attire, while above drooped the graceful scarlet-blossomed bignonia, swayed gently now and then by the contact of the humming birds.

Stealing back at last through the bushes the man emerged upon the path some thirty yards down.

Soon after the peculiar cry of the whip-poor-will was heard.

Once, twice, it sounded.

The negro starting from his doze, lifted his head.

It came a third time.

The negro rose to his feet, glanced towards the occupants of the glade, then hurried down the path and joined the man.

'Why have you stopped here?' was the latter's first interrogation.

'Because the dark missus commanded it massa. Yick bad to obey.

'It little matters. I imagine they are safe from all pursuit now. I have taken means to throw all at Longueville on a false track. When you continue your journey, take the path to the left after fording the Sarakow tributary, and make for Stetterton's ranche; there stop for the night—you understand. On no account take shelter at any other.'

The negro nodded.

'Should your charges ask you in which direction you are conducting them, say by circuitous routes to Vermilllion. I shall see you again to-night at the ranche; while all this day I shall be near though unseen; so be cautious. To-morrow, when they enter the prairie, I shall no longer remain concealed, but shall join you and take the sisters under my guidance Now go back.

ADVERTISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery.

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief.

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."

—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

☞None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that; the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure See adv't in another column.

SWEET MISS MAY.

Sighed Mr. Jones, 'My dear Miss May,
I dreamed an auctioneer one day,
Cried, 'going, going, gone,'
I thought I was the slave he sold,
And you—you bought me with your gold
To kneel before your throne.'
'You're easily sold,' smiled sweet Miss May
'For when I heard the fellow say
You're 'Going, going, gone,'
I thought, alas! he little knows
He's selling one who never goes.
And'—Mr. Jones had flown.

THE TRIUMPH OF INNOCENCE

Two children, a boy of 9 and a girl of 4 years, came into a Cleveland street car Saturday. The girl climbed upon the seat and looked out the window. Suddenly turning her face, she fixed her gaze upon the face of the boy with a look of eager longing. Throwing her arms around his neck, she laid her cheek lovingly against his, and in pleading accents whispered, 'Bob, say have you got some gum in your mouth?' Bob returned the caress, gently put her aside, and made no answer. In no wise disconcerted, the little maiden renewed the attack, appealing to his love, his generosity, his manliness, his chivalry, to her need, her helplessness, and dependance, inforcing each argument with melting glances and caressing flatteries, Bob, true to his man's nature, smiled sweetly and indifferently and calmly purpursued his thoughts and his task. At last a look of awful determination settled down on the little face which a moment before was wreathed in smiles. Bracing one knee against the back of the seat and the other against the back of the defenceless Bob, she took his face between her two hands, and pushed his head back against the window, struck an attitude worthy of a first-class dentist, and made a thorough and vigorous examination of that mouth. Suddenly a look of joy flashed across the gloom of that small countenance, as with an air of triumph her hand dashed into the mouth and returned with the coveted treasure. With an expression of perfect contentment and satisfaction it was transferred to her own mouth, and she sat down beside Bob once more the gentle and dependent sister, all smiles and tenderness.

A KISS NOT A LEGAL CONSIDERATION.

What is a kiss? The question can only be answered by experience; solvitur osculando. But it is easy after a decision in the Lambeth County court yesterday to say what a kiss is not. It is not legal 'consideration.' A surgeon in Lambeth kissed a workingman's wife; the husband valued the kiss at £5, and the surgeon gave him an I O U for that amount. A month after date an action was brought on this document, but the judge promptly ruled there was no consideration and gave a verdict for the defendant. Perhaps the lady was in court and the judge may have been influenced by that. For even the poets admit there are 'kisses and kisses;' the interesting question is whether yesterday's judgement was meant to lay down a general principle or whether every case must be decided on its own merits.—Pall Mall Gazette.

NOT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

'I didn't like your prayer very much this morning,' said a deacon to the minister.

'No?' answered the minister. 'And what what was the matter with it?'

'Well, in the first place it was too long, and, aside from this, it contained two or three expressions which I thought were scarcely warranted.'

'I am sorry deacon,' responded the good man, 'but it might be well to bear in mind, that the prayer wasn't addressed to you.'—Philadelphia Call.

A MARQUIS' MISERY.

The policeman on duty in the Boulevard Magneta, Paris, arrested the other night, as a vagabond, an old man whom they found lying upon one of the benches in an almost naked state. Taken before the Commissionary of Police, he gave the following account of himself:—'I am Marquis de B——, am 69, and have no family. I went through with my fortune when a youth, and then sailed for America. Mixed up in a case of forgery, and sentenced by default to twenty years' penal servitude, I managed to escape to France. In 1842 I was sentenced to seven years for robbery and have suffered many other sentences since. Without a friend in the world or one son, I am glad to go prison, where I hope soon to ending miserable existence.'

Why suffer from weak nerves, want of appetite, and general debility? letting the loss of sleep and rest impoverish the system and thin the blood, when such a really meritorious remedy as Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine may be had at any drug store. This article is recommended by the highest members of the medical faculty in cases of indigestion, general debility, loss of appetite, and nervous affections of all kinds. It is also specially beneficial to children and delicate females, and to business men, students, and those who have much brain work. We would say, Never be without it. It will strengthen you, keep your system in regular order, and enable you to obtain successfully grapple with the work you have to do. It is pleasant to the taste, and contains nothing injurious to the most delicate constitution Remember to ask for the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman Toronto, and we are sure you will be satisfied that you have full value for your money. Druggists sell it.

Croup and Throat and Lung Troubles are treated successfully with Allen's Lung Balsam, see adv.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public, and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition, and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

TWO EXTRACTS.

The leaders of the Reform party are now working for the separation of Canada from the mother country. Sir Richard Cartwright has openly announced that policy and Mr. Blake, with his customary cowardice, has been silent on the subject.—Tory Hamilton Spectator.

These are neat sentences. The leaders of the party are working for the severance of British connection, and to prove it the leader has not even talked separation.

But readers of our esteemed Tory contemporary must imagine that the Hamilton Spectator is working for separation judging by the following remarks in a recent issue:—

"At some time and in some way the bond of union will be broken. It is in the nature of things that it should be. We now have five millions of people in Canada, and our population, resources, and wealth are growing rapidly. No sane man denies that the day will come when even the nominal dependence of the country upon Great Britian must cease."

Yet the same journal that oracularly puts forth the above tries to make the public believe that the Reformers are preaching this sentiment and are to be condemned for it. The pupil of Fagan the Jew, who would steal a handkerchief and then join in the cry "Stop thief" would make an excellent Tory editor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT'S ABOUT time that the vacant judgeship in the Q. B. Division was filled.

* * *

INSURANCE POLICIES were effected in the Dominion last year, to the amount of $21,572,960 for life and $572,264,041 for fire, the amount of premiums paid therefore being respectively $3,774,750 and $4,624,741.

* * *

THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE in Halifax county took a firm stand during the canvass in opposition to the constitutionality of the Dominion License Act, and against the general Ottawa policy of centralization. And, mark, he was returned.

* * *

YOUNG LADIES should be extremely careful how they treat their cavaliers. Simply because Charles Wegman, of Cincinnati, was refused admittance by his sweetheart when he he called he fatally shot himself. In another case reported from Ohio the same day a derogatory remark by his fiancee caused John McColl to kill himself. Girls with high tempered lovers will have to weigh their words carefully.

* * *

THE VICTORY of the Halifax Liberals in the local election is significant because Dominion trade issues were dragged into the contest. They had no business there but if, the issues being made, the electors have pronounced against the present bad policy of the country it is a bad thing for the Ottawa Government. That the drift of Maritime sentiment is altogether against the Dominion Government was indicated also by the Conservative candidate in Queen's, P.E.I., pronouncing in favor of Reciprocal Free Trade.

Full returns give Hon. Mr. Fielding nearly 200 majority in Halifax.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

HE WOULD BE CAUGHT OUT.

AND NEVER MISSED IT.

TOO MUCH COMMON LAW.

The Ontario bench has a large proportion of common law judges—some say it is 'overweighted with common law.' In 1874, when the court of appeal was reorganized, there were five equity men on the bench—one in appeal, three in chancery, and one, Mr. Justice Gwynne, in the common pleas. In 1883, when a fifth appeal judge was added, there were only three equity men among the judiciary. The fifth appeal judge was to assist in the business of the high court and 'especially of the chancery division thereof.' Now there are only two judges who have had an equity training, while eleven have been taken from the common law bar, viz: Five in appeal, three in the common pleas division two in the Queen's bench division (one judgeship vacant), and one in the chancery division.—Canada Law Journal.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

In the spring of 1878, when his party was still out of power, Sir Charles Tupper made this declaration with his usual vehemence, and no doubt, as affidavits read, 'solemnly believing the same to be true:—

"Inasmuch as we governed the country with a small taxation, and inasmuch as we are prepared to govern the country again without those extravagant expenditures made by the present Government since they have been entrusted with power, all we ask is, not that the taxation shall be increased, because we do not require so much money as the hon. gentlemen opposite, as we have shown by our economy in the past, and which we are prepared to practice in future."

The sentence limps in its grammar but let it go. The taxation in 1878 amounted to $22,500,000, and here is Sir Charles promising to reduce it; yet last year Sir Leonard wrung no less than $33,000,000 from the people—an increase of 50 per cent.! And what have we got in return? If you would see the work of the National Policy, look at the smokeless chimneys or take a walk through Dakota.—Winnipeg Sun.

THE FRENCH FLAG LOWERED,

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The following is an official resume of the France Chinese situation. Notwithstanding the successive respites granted China by France and the moderation of French officials having the negotiations in charge, China has finally refused all satisfaction for the Langson treachery and recalled its plenipotentiaries to Shanghai. France therefore is compelled to present China with a last summons. The term of grace expired at 1 this afternoon, The French charge d'affairs was ordered to quit Pekin immediately and join Patenotre at Shanghai.

A WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

Yesterday a Mrs. Bertrand, of Lachine, wife of Captain Bertrand, of the tugboat "Shickluna," left her home and was not again seen alive, but her body was found in the canal. Mrs. Bertrand, it is said, has been slightly deranged since the birth of her last child about a year ago, and it is thought she must have thrown herself in the water above Lachine.

A LEAP TO DEATH.

Yesterday afternoon as the steamer 'Berthier' was arriving at the Jacques Cartier wharf, Mrs. Clarkson, residing in St. Louis street, of this city, noticed a young, well-dressed French-Canadian with black curly hair, jump off the steamer into the river. She screamed and gave the alarm to the officers, and a boat was at once put off, but no trace of the body could be found. Dr. Geo O. Beaudry, professor of Physiology in Victoria University, and residing on Dorchester street, gave notice at the Central Police Station that his brother had threatened to drown himself, and it is thought that perhaps he may be the unfortunate man.

OUTING FOR SEPTEMBER.

The September issue of the Outing concludes the fourth volume of this popular and rapidly growing out-door magazine. It is a number of substantial excellence, both in literary matter and illustration. The leading article is a fully illustrated description of the new building of the New York Athletic Club, which numbers 1,500 members. 'With the L. A. W. at Washington' is a comprehensive discussion of the recent League Meet, and is handsomely illustrated. William H. Rideing contributes an exciting pilot boat sketch, entitled 'A Cruise in the Petrel,' and A. N. Everett a bright story on the amateur photographic camera. 'The Shaybacks in Camp' and 'A Strange Idyle' are concluded, and one of President Bate's unique bicycle club sketches is given. The poetry of the number is unusually bright. "Orion's" Explorations in the Colony of Queensland.

NARROW AND SLOW RAILROADS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Letter No. 17.
Gympie, Queensland,
Australia, July 10, '84.

There are several lines of intercolonial steamers that ply from Adelaide on the south to Cooktown, Thursday Island and Normanton, on the south of Australia. The principal of these are the Australian Steam Navigation Company, having a fleet of forty steamers, the Wm. Howard Smith & Sons line, with nearly as many, and the Queensland Steam Navigation Company with four splendid steamers, and more being added. It was by the Leura of the second above named line, that in company with a couple of genial fellow B. A.'s, on Her Majesty's natal day, that I bid good bye for a time to New South Wales, and soon we were on the bouncing billows with Port Jackson on our lee. I'm sure they were bouncing billows for the first night out they bounced Smart out of his berth and he shot clear across the state room on top of me. He was a little too smart that time. About noon of the second day out we reached Queensland's capital, majestically enthroned on either bank of the Brisbane river, with an appearance of newness and a freshness as well as of solidity and prosperity that bespoke a bright future for this fair young city of the north. With more time at my disposal than on my former visit, now nearly a year ago, I enjoyed the privilege of studying the city more closely.

THE CITY OF BRISBANE.

The museum was the first that attracted us and we were greatly surprised at the splendid and varied collections of "curios" that we saw. There were mummies of aboriginals, idols, war implements, domestic utensils and many marvellous things from not only native Australians, but from the Papuans, Fijians, Samoeans and many others of the dusky races that inhabit the 'green isles of the sea.' There were specimens from the wonderfully rich gold, silver, copper and other mines of the colony; and animals, fishes, serpents, alligators and all the rest to an incomprehensible variety. This museum had only been in existence about three years. Next was the Parliament Buildings—only recently built. They were very creditable, Large, commodious and convenient, with a splendid library for its age. The cicerone bowing gracefully and smiling blandly asked us to sit in the Governor's chair. I found it quite comfortable and if pressed to do so could have sat there for an hour. Then we visited the Botanic Gardens and Governor's residence, charmingly situated on the bend of the river, My attention was called to a peculiarity of the names of the streets of Brisbane. All those running east and west are of the names of females, as Queen Street, Elizabeth Street, &c., and from north to south of males, as George Street, Edward Street, &c. There seemed to be a wish to be impartial, and a desire to show the equality of the two classes that to me who am an advocate of 'woman's rights,' 'co-education of the sexes,' 'higher education of women,' &c., was very pleasing. A large amount of building is being carried on at present, and improvements are being carried on on all sides. I formed a very favorable opinion of the city and its people who seemed both friendly and enterprising.

We went to the railway station, As unseemly as it might have appeared to the onlookers we could not refrain from a bit of laughter indulgence as we examined the little boxes they called railway carriages and the minature engine on wheels that propelled them. The N.S.W.R.R.'s were pretty ancient and slow, but these were more so by far. The railway is very narrow guage—only three feet six inches and the regular rate of speed is fifteen to sixteen miles per hour, 'Hold your hats on tight or you'll loose them' sings out one of the boys as we crawl away. An hour and a half we get to Ipswich—twenty-four miles! All are the same as regards guage, speed, &c. You are obliged to stoop down to enter the door as they are so low. Queensland is pushing her railway construction pretty rapidly forward just now, and as she has just contracted a loan for £8,000,000, all parts of the colony are agitating to get a slice of it to build their railway. Queensland's railroads are all in little detached pieces. The South and Western, running from Brisbane west to Mitchell, (about 500 miles), being the longest. There is a line from Maryborough to Gympie, (62 miles), from Rockhampton to Pine Hill, (252 miles), and the Northern RR. between Townsville and Homestead (127 miles). There is also a short line from Bundabery to Mount Perry (56 miles). All these lines are adding to their length at short intervals. They are just now agitating strongly to connect Brisbane and Gympie, and Maryborough and Bundabery. It is quite possible and likely that within the next half decade that a train will run from Rockhampton in Queensland to Melborne, Victoria. The late Government had a project of uniting Brisbane with the Gulf of Carpentaria by rail, but the electors thought the movement too premature and so the ministry resigned. There is no doubt that a transprovincial R. R. joining the extreme north and south and tapped by the branch coast lines would do much for this country. The Darling River (the largest in Australia) rises about 150 miles west of Brisbane and gives to this vast tract the name of the Darling Downs. Toowoomba, Warwick and Dalby are the principle towns in this district—the former, where I stopped over night being the largest and nearly the size of Belleville. All this interior country was seriously affected by the late drouth. I found the climate at Toowoomba (situate in the mounts) very cool and in fact the nights in winter are cold, snow sometimes falling. The scenery along twenty-five of this mountainous route was very pretty. We passed through numerous tunnels and passed over many ravines as we wind around steep mountain sides or dash over trestle bridges on our circuitous way. Another night and day on the 'Burwah' and we entered the beautiful Mary River (after waiting three hours for the fog to life so we could cross the bar), and were soon winding along its wandering course in search of the town to which its gives its name. Amongst our passengers from Brisbane was the whilom champion sculler, Edward Trickett, who, with his wife, family and boats was going to Rockhampton to make his home there.

MARYBOROUGHTOWN

is the centre of a large and wealthy farming and sugar growing district. It also is about the leading town in Queensland for lumbering. There are five or six quite large saw mills in the city (10,000 pop.) and several more along the R. R. route. At Yengarrie (8 miles out), is one of the largest sugar mills in Australia, the largest being at Bundabery and costing £1,000,000. This letter is being written in Gympie; probably the richest gold field in Australia; although it is only in its infancy as yet.

About fourteen years ago a teamster accidentally discovered gold while boiling his billy of tea beside a stream here, and soon a town sprung into existence. The find of gold was, however, confined to the caps of the reefs and the alluvial. On going to a certain depth they came to a slate bed when the gold disappeared. The idea became established that 'no gold lay beneath the slate bed.' The surface findings were soon exhausted and the field was being rapidly deserted when an American appeared on the scene and all was changed. He said that the gold lay beneath the slate, and that its presence was the indication that gold was to be found. One claim began boring down again through the slate and behold the yellow metal was found in abundance. Then another deserted 'claim' was resurrected and like results followed, and now the once despised slate is eagerly sought for and its absence sorrowed for. The 45 tons of quartz; 1,100 ozs. (3 days ago from the writing of this) from one blasting; £36,000 from one dividend from one mine for one month are a few sample facts in connection herewith. Similar to every gold mining town, I suppose, in the world there is a spirit of speculation and a current of excitement that keeps every one on the qui vive.

NEHEMIAH GILBERT.

Poses from Kansas City as an Injured Innocent.

PICTON, Aug. 22.—Mr. N. Gilbert, the barrister who left here with his servant girl has been heard from again. He writes to the Times from Kansas City with reference to the reports published about him. He says he must express great surprise to think that without knowing the facts the paper should exaggerate and strive to injure his family by such uncalled for and untrue statements. He adds:—

1st, I am alone. 2nd. Never took any person's money but my own. 3rd. I have a little honor left in me, if you have none, and feelings for my family, whom I now respect more than ever in my life. I now hope you will in your next publication correct the errors I have pointed out, to put my family truly before the public.

OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

"CAPT." ABBIE'S WEDDING.

NEWBURG, Aug. 21.—This town is shortly to be the scene of one of the highest old times at a wedding that Newburg has ever seen. The racket is termed a "hallelujah wedding," and will be accompanied by meetings, etc., that will keep going all night.

CAUSE OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

'Whatever the cause of the earthquake around New York, on Sunday,' added Prof. Merriam, 'I think the earth in the region where it took place has either settled in a new position or forced back into an old position from which it was pushed by former earthquakes.'

A FIELD OF CORNS,—Thomas Sabim, of Eglington, says:"I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

VALUE OF WATER WORKS

Brockville Times, Aug, 20.

The value of our new system of waterworks could not have received a better illustration than was afford at last night's fire. As soon as the preliminary awkwardness in dealing with a novel method of water supply had been got through, a stream of water was levelled against the burning building which had more extinguishing force in a few minutes than all the other streams under the old system combined. This augurs well for the safety of property in the future, and will increase the general feeling of security against any wholesale destruction by the devouring element.

"BUCHU—PAIBA."

Quick, complete cure, all Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Diseases, Scalding, Irritation, Stone, Gravel, Catarrah of the bladder. $1. Druggists.

A DRUGGIST'S ERROR.

While on their road from Waterloo to Grimsby, two daughters of Mr. Buckberrough stopped at Galt, and the elder feeling unwell went to a drug store before she started and purchased what she supposed to be 8 grains of quinine. Before dinner in Galt she took half of it and was almost immediately taken very ill. Medical aid was summoned and seeing that the young lady had been poisoned, prompt measures were taken and her life saved. It was found that the drug clerk had put up morphine instead of quinine. When the young man discovered his mistake he made efforts to prevent the drug being taken, but his telegrams were not received in time.

Johnston, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which has a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all Diseases of Throat, Lungs, or Bronchial Tubes. Trial Bottles Free at R. Templeton's Drug Store. Large Size $1 00.

About six o'clock last evening Conger's wagon was being driven down Front Street, just behind the hotel bus. When opposite the Axe Factory a boy about 8 years old ran out from a gateway behind the 'bus and against Conger's horse, which of course knocked him down. The front wheel passed over the centre of his body, but the driver, Mr. Dulmage, reined in his horse so skilfully that it left the boy lying between the front and back wheels. A man jumped quickly from the 'bus and pulled the child out of the danger into which he had so foolishly run. He was not seriously injured.

Mrs. Annie E. Abrahams, M.L.A., has just been appointed Preceptress of Alexandra College, (the Ladies Department of Albert College,) in place of Miss Baker, resigned some weeks ago. There were various candidates from Canada and the United States, but of all Mrs. Abrahams' recommendations were the highest. Hannibal Hamlin, late Vice-President of the United States. She is a graduate of Maine Conference Seminary and Female College and Normal School, and in Modern Languages Mrs. Abrahams took a further course in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston, with high honors. She has taught in a Collegiate Institute and East Maine Conference Seminary, and has been acting Principal of Pleasant Grove Grammar School for six months, since last January, in place of the Principal who was absent on account of illness. She has just been pressingly invited to one of the highest positions in the public schools of Dakota but prefers to come to Belleville. Mrs Abrahams is a fine scholar in Latin, French, German, Spanish &c. and has taught nearly all the subjects of a Female College course. From all sources she is represented as a lady of great accomplishments, of very pleasing manner and highest Christian character. She is a lady of mature years and large experience and high success as a teacher. Albert College is to be congratulated on this valuable addition to the teaching staff.

BURGLARS IN PETERBORO'.

Daring Safe Cracking and House Entering.

PETERBORO' Aug. 22,—Early yesterday morning burglars entered Messrs. Porter Bros.' carriage factory and there obtained a sledge hammer, two chisels, a brace and a punch. They then attacked Mr. M. Halpin's Hotel where, in their estimation, a goodly haul was to be had, but after forcing the safe found nothing in it.

AT WILSON'S HOTEL.

They then went to Wilson's hotel One of them entered and softly stole along a narrow hall, at the end of which a small lamp was burning. The lamp hung directly in front of the room in which Mr. Wilson was sleeping. When Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were retiring to bed Mr. Wilson had some fears about burglars, and said he thought it advisable to have the bed-room door locked, but the door was afterwards left open for air. The burglar entered the bed-room. He took Mr. Wilson's trousers, which were lying on a chair at the foot of the bed, and also his coat, in which there was $110, from the bed post at the head. In taking Mr. Wilson's coat, the burglar must have passed within a few inches of Mr. Wilson, who was placidly sleeping while the burglar was depriving him of his money.

WHAT MRS. BELLEGHEM SAW.

While Mrs. D. Belleghem was quietly slumbering she was wakened by a shrill railway whistle, and having decided the night before to take her children for a short holiday trip, she got up to see what time it was. She and her husband slept in a room adjoining the dining room, in which a lamp was dimly burning on a square table in the centre of the room. The clock was on a bracket which was against the wall. Mrs. Bellegnem arose, came to the dining room door, and glanced to her right at the clock. It was ten minutes after three. On taking her eyes from the clock, imagine her terror and fright—not more than five feet from her stood a man in a stooping posture in the act of turning out the light. Both the burglar and Mrs. Belleghem were completely nonplussed. For an instant they gazed at each other as if petrified, When she recovered her breath she cried, 'Oh, there is a man in the house!' In an instant Mr. Belleghem was out of bed and into the dining-room, but the burglar had silently evaporated. In going out he had closed the front door and the gate. Mr. Belleghem in his night dress pursued the burglar as far as Alymer street, when he turned northward and dissappeared around some dark corner. Mr. Belleghem thought the decretion was the better part of valor, and returned home.

The fight between the deep boats built to cut through the water, and weighed down with lead on their keels, called cutters, and the wide shallow boats made to go over the water with big centre boards, called sloops, still continues with varying results. The cruise of the New York Yacht Club was a complete victory for the cutters. There has as yet been only three regattas sailed by the Lake Ontario associations, and the cutters won one race easily and have taken second to Cuthbert's flyer, the Norah in the other two. At Chicago, the Verve, a Scotch ten tonner imported this spring, has beaten the crack sloop Cora very badly, and has proved herself the fastest boat on the upper lakes, The Forest and Stream, a pronounced cutter advocate, bursts into triumphant song as follows, over the cutter victories, the yachts apostrophized being all sloops:—

> "What are the wild waves saying,
> Hildegarde! Fanita! Athlon!
> Running, reaching, or staying.
> I hear but the same sad song;
> And not while under way only,
> But at anchor by day or by night,
> Comes the weird, monotonious greeting,
> 'The skimming dish passeth away.'"

Jabesh Snow, Gunning Cove, N S., writes: "I was completely prostrated with the asthma, but hearing of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I procured a bottle, and it done me so much good that I got another, and before it was used I was well. My son was cured of a bad cold by the use of half a bottle. It goes like wildfire, and makes cures wherever it is used."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS' THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence, These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-uscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without stomach medication by the Marston Treatment, effective, cheap, pleasant, cheap. Send for sealed treatise. MARSTON REMEDY CO., 73 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swaton, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Bowing again, the negro returned to his horses and his former position.

Waiting until he was out of sight, the other, facing the direction of the glade, slowly extended his hands.

'Dream,' he murmured; 'dream,' herepeated, adding something inaudibly.

After that he hurried down the grassy path to the spot where he had left his horse tethered.

Mounting the animal, he rode gently away, keeping on the soft velvety turf which bordered the path.

An hour after, Pauline awoke from her sleep, which for a long time had been troubled and restless, with a cry of terror.

In alarm she clung to her companion, who was instantly aroused.

Looking down with surprise upon the slight trembling figure, she asked—

Pauline, what is the matter?'

'Oh, again—it has come again, Juliette,' sobbed the girl in a stifled whisper. 'I have dreamed—dreamed of that fearful man. Again he has been with me. He held me in his arms, he pressed his lips to mine; he laughed at my struggles—I could not escape—as he whispered in my ears—'mine, mine!''

The Creole's cheeks turned pale.

She was startled.

However, with a laugh of raillery, she rejoined—

'Absurd! You have been excited lately; you were tired, my darling slept uneasily and have had the nightmare a nightmare that has taken the old—old form. I thought your fear of Mr. Loring had been dispelled since the kind and valuable service he rendered me. Look up, dear, see where we are. Behold our superb boudoir reflect how far we are from Longueville—from New York, and consequently'—her voice faltered slightly—'from Stuart Loring. Come, not only are we suffering from fatigue, but want of refreshment, so let us proceed, and at the first settlement or ranche we reach we must breakfast and dine together.

Her animated tone, the knowledge of where they were, in a measure encouraged Pauline, soothing her terrors and they prepared to continue their journey.

Before they did so the negro brought them some wild, succulent, refreshing fruits which were most welcome, as they removed the faintness that hunger was creating.

The simple repast concluded, the party remounted the horses, and despite the increasing heat of the day, again set forth, the sisters alone ignorant of the solitary horseman in advance, who, though himself concealed, never once during the journey lost sight of them.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A FALSE STEP—SUSPICION.

Through the day, with the hot sun shining fiercely down, seeking forest shade whenever possible, the sisters with their guide and Keziah rode on.

Pauline bore up bravely, her only present trouble the effect of the unusual fatigue,

Juliette was a prey to great anxiety.

As the day declined, and their journey proceeded, she became possessed with a restless nervousness as to the result.

Was Stuart Loring true?

Was their no deception?

Were they really hastening to safety—or what?

Keen and watchful her suspicions were aroused by the wild course they were taking, though the negro never seemed to hesitate in the route, and the singular fact that from the moment they had quitted Longueville, they had passed neither settlement nor ranche.

Struck by this, she seized an opportunity to bring her horse by the guide's, and mention the peculiarity.

'I had orders to keep this yar track, missy,' was the response, 'jist cos there ain't no settlements and ranees. Does missy want ebery body to know ob her flight that dey may put Massa Scladden after her?'

'That is true,' said Juliette, struck by the sense of the remark, and the thoughtfulness of Stuart Loring. 'I was wrong not to think of it.'

She was silent awhile.

'Then glancing over her shoulder, she perceived Pauline had fallen back to converse with Keziah.

It offered her an occasion she had been desiring all day.

One of her chief anxieties was the fear that if Stuart Loring were to join them, which fair or false he might do, he might utter words that would at once betray to her sister her knowledge that the American had been instrumental in their flight and that she had practised a deception in affirming it to be David Ringscole.

'Tell me,' she asked, speaking rapidly, as she bent her beautiful head nearer the negro; are you likely soon to see Mr. Loring?'

Yick glancing up at her, remained silent.

She perceived he hesitated to answer.

She altered the interrogation.

'Is it possible you may see him before I do?'

The negro grinned, nodding his head.

'Yes missy, very possible.'

'Then give him this, On no account forget,

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years."

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wastby giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

CHARITIES OF THE NEEDLE.

The Grand Character of Dorcas, the Benefactress.

SERMON BY REV. DR. TALMAGE.

"Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas."—Acts ix. 36.

There is in Joppa, a seaport town, a woman with her needle embroidering her name ineffaceably into the charities of the world. I see her sitting in the village home. In the doorway, and around about the building, and in the room where she sits are the pale faces of the poor. She listens to their plaint, she pities their woe, she makes garments for them, she adjusts the manufactured articles to suit the bent form of this invalid woman, and to the cripple that comes crawling on his hands and knees. She gives a coat to this one. She gives sandals to that one. With the the gifts she mingles prayers and tears, and Christian encouragement. Then she goes out to be greeted on the street corners by those whom she has blessed and all through the street the cry comes; 'Dorcas is coming!' The sick look up gratefully in her face as she puts her hand on the burning brow, and the lost and the abandoned start up with hope as they hear her gentle voice as though an angel had addressed them; and as she goes out the lane eyes half put out with sin, think they see a halo of light about her brow and a trail of glory in her pathway. That night a half-paid shipwright climbs the hill and reaches home, and sees his little boy well clad, and says, 'Where did these clothes come from?' And they tell him, 'Dorcas has been here.' In another place a woman is trimming a lamp; Dorcas brought the oil. In another place a family that had not been at the table for many a week are gathered now, for Dorcas has brought bread. But there is a sudden pause in that woman's ministry. They say; 'Where is Dorcas? Why, we haven't seen her for many a day. Where is Dorcas?' And one of these poor people goes up and knocks at the door, and finds the mystery solved. All through the haunts of wretchedness the news comes. 'Dorcas is sick.' No bulletin flashing from the palace gate, telling the stages of a king's disease, is more anxiously awaited for than the news of this sick benefactress. Alas for Joppa! There is wailing, wailing. That voice which has uttered many cheerful words is hushed; that hand which has made so many garments for the poor is cold and still; that star which has poured light into the midnight of wretchedness is dimmed by the blinding mists that go up from the river of death. In every God forsaken place in that town; wherever there is a sick child and no balm; wherever there is hunger and no bread; wherever there is guilt and no commiseration; wherever there is a broken heart and no comfort, there are despairing looks, and streaming eyes, and frantic gesticulations, as they cry:—

'DORCAS IS DEAD!'

They send for the apostle Peter. He urges his way through the crowd around the door, and stands in the presence of the dead. What lamentation and grief all about him! Here stand some of the poor people, who show the garments which this poor woman had made for them. Their grief cannot be appeased. The apostle Peter wants to perform a miracle. He will not do it amid the excited crowd, so he kindly orders that the whole room be cleared. The door is shut against the populace. The apostle stands now with the dead. Oh, it is a serious moment, you know, when you get alone with a lifeless body! The apostle gets down on his knees and prays, and then he comes to the lifeless form of this one all ready for the sepulchre, and in the strength of Him who is the Resurrection, he exclaims: "Tabitha, arise!" There is a stir in the fountains of life; the heart flutters; the nerves thrill; the cheek flushes; the eye opens; she sits up! We see in this subject Dorcas the Disciple, Dorcas the benefactress, Dorcas the lamented, Doras the resurrected. Dorcas the benefactress History has told the story of the crown; the epic poet has sung of the sword; the pastoral poet, with his verses full of the redolence of clover tops and a rustle with the silk of the corn, has sung the praises of the plough. I sound the praises of the needle. From the fig-leaf robe prepared in the Garden of Eden to the last stitch taken, the needle has wrought wonders of generosity, kindness, and benefaction. It adorned the girdle of the high-priest; it fashioned the curtains in the ancient tabernacle; it cushioned the chariots of King Solomon; it provided the robes of Queen Elizabeth, and in high places and in low places, by the fire of the pioneer's back log and under the flash of the chandelier—everywhere it has clothed nakedness, it has preached the Gospel, it has overcome hosts of penury and want with the war-cry of 'Stitch! stitch! stitch!' The operatives have found a livelihood by it, and through it the mansions of the employer have been constructed. Amid the greatest triumphs in all ages and lands I set down the conquests of the needle. I admit its crimes. I admit its cruelties. It has had more martyrs than the fire. It has butchered more souls than the inquisition. It has punctured the eye. It has pierced the side. It has struck weakness into the lungs. It has sent madness into the brain. It has filled the potter's field. It pitched whole armies of the suffering into crime and wretchedness, and woe. But now that I speak of Dorcas and her ministries to the poor, I shall relate only the charities of the needle. This woman was a representative of all those women who make garments for the destitute, who knit socks for the barefooted, who prepare bandages for the lacerated, who fix up boxes of clothing for Western missionaries, who go into the asylums of the suffering and destitute, bearing that Gospel which is sight for the blind, hearing for the deaf, and which makes the lame man leap like a hart, and brings the dead to life immortal health bounding in their pulses. What a contrast between the practical benevolence of this woman and a great deal of the charity of this day. I will put one earnest Christian man, against 5,000 mere theorists on the subject of charity. There are a great many who have fine ideas about church architecture who never in their life helped to build a church. There are men who can give you the history of Buddhism and Mohammedanism who never sent a farthing for their evangelization. There are women who talk beautifully about the suffering of the world who never had the courage, like Dorcas, to take the needle and assault it. I am glad that there is not a page of the world's history which is not a record of

FEMALE BENEVOLENCE.

God says to all lands and people, "Come now, and bear the widow's mite rattle down into the poor-box. The Princess of Conti sold all her jewels that she might help the famine stricken. Queen Blanche, the wife of Louis VIII. of France, hearing that there were some persons unjustly incarcerated in the prisons, went out amid the rabble and took a stick and struck the door as a signal that they might all strike it, and down went the door, and out came the prisoners. Queen Maud, the wife of Henry I., went down amid the poor and washed their sores and administered to them cordials. Mrs. Retson, at Matagorda appeared on the battle-field while the missles of death were flying around, and cared for the wounded. But why go so far away? Is there a man or woman who has forgotten the women of the sanitary and Christian commissions, or the fact that before the smoke had gone up from Gettysburg and South Mountain the women of the North met the women of the South on the battle-field, forgiving all their animosities while they bound up the wounded and closed the eyes of slain? Have you forgotten? Dorcas the benefactress! Dorcas the lamented. When death struck down that good woman, oh, how much sorrow there was in Joppa! I suppose there were women there with larger fortunes; women perhaps with handsomer faces; but there was no grief at their departure like this at the death of Dorcas. There was not more turmoil and upturning in the Mediterranean Sea dashing against the wharves of that seaport, than there were surgings to and fro of grief in Joppa because Dorcas was dead. There are a great many who go out of life and are unmissed. There may be a very large funeral, there may be a great many carriages and a plumed hearse; there may be high-sounding eulogiums; the bell may toll at the cemetery gate; there may be a very fine marble shaft reared over the resting place; but the whole thing may be a falsehood and a sham. The Church of God has lost nothing. It is only a nuisance abated, it is only a grumbler ceasing to find fault; it is only an idler stopped yawning; it is only a dissipated fashionable parted from his wine cellar; while, on the other hand, no useful Christian leaves this world without being missed. The Church of God cries out, like the prophet, 'Howl fir tree, for the cedar has fallen!' Widowhood comes and shows the garments which the departed had made. Orphans are lifted up to look into the calm face of the sleeping benefactress. Reclaimed vagrancy comes and kisses the cold brow of her who charmed it away from sin, and all through the streets of Joppa there is mourning—mourning because Dorcas is dead. I suppose you have read of the fact that when Josephine was carried out to her grave there were a great many men and women of pomp, and pride, and position, that went out after her; but I am most affected by the story of history that on that day there were 10,000 of the poor of France who followed her coffin, weeping and wailing until the air rang again because when they lost Josephine they lost their last earthly friend. Oh, who would not rather have such obsequies than all the tears that were ever poured in the lachrymals that have been exhumed from ancient cities? There may be no mass for the dead; there may be no costly sarcophagus; there may be no elaborate mausoleum; but in the damp cellars of the city and through the lonely huts of the mountain glen there will be mourning, mourning, mourning, because Dorcas is dead. 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.' I speak to you of

DORCAS THE RESURRECTED.

The apostle came to where she was and said 'Arise, and she sat up. In what a short compass the great writer put that 'she sat up!' Oh what a time there must have been when the apostle brought her out among her old friends!' How the tears must have started! What clapping of hands there must have been! what singing! what laughter! Sound it all through the lane! Shout it down that that dark alley! Let all Joppa hear it! Dorcas is resurrected! You and I have seen the same thing many a time; not a dead body resurrected but the deceased coming up again after death in the good accomplished. If a man labors up to fifty years of age serving God and then dies, we are apt to think that his earthly work is done. No! His influence on earth will continue till the world ceases. Services rendered for Christ never stop. Here is a Christian woman. She toils for the upbuilding of a church through many anxieties, through many self denials, with prayers and tears, and then she dies. It is fifteen years since she went away. Now the the spirit of God descends upon that church; hundreds of souls stand up and confess the faith of Christ. Has that Christian woman who went away thirteen years ago, nothing to do with these things? I see the flowering-out of her noble heart. I hear the echo of her footsteps in all these songs over sins forgiven, in all the prosperity of the church. The good that seemed to be buried has come up again. Dorcas is resurrected. After awhile all these womanly friends of Christ will put down their needle forever. After making garments for others, some one will make a garment for them, the last robe we ever wear—the robe for the grave. You will have heard the last cry of pain. You will have witnessed the last orphanage. You will have come in worn out from your last round of mercy. I do not know where you will sleep, nor what your epitaph will be; but there will be a lamp burning at that tomb and an angel of God guarding it, and through all the long night no rude foot will disturb the dust. Sleep on, sleep on! Soft bed, pleasant shadows, undisturbed repose! Sleep on!

"Asleep in Jesus! Blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep!"

Then, one day, there will be a sky-rending, and a whirl of wheels, and the flash of a pageant, armies marching, chains clanking, banners waving, thunders booming, and that Christian woman will arise from the dust, and she will be surrounded by the wanderers of the street whom she reclaimed, surrounded by the wounded souls to whom she administered! Daughter of God, so strongly surrounded, what means this? It means that reward has come, that the victory has been won, that the crown is ready, that the banquet is spread. Shout it through all the crumbling earth! Sing it through all the flying heavens! Dorcas is resurrected! In 1855, when some of the soldiers came back from the Crimean war to London, the Queen of England distributed among them beautiful medals, called Crimean medals. Galleries were erected for the two houses of Parliament and the royal family to sit in. There was a great audience to witness the distribution of the medals. A colonel who had lost both feet in the battle of Inkermann was pulled in on a wheeled chair; others came in limping on their crutches. Then the Queen of England arose before them, in the name of her government, and uttered words of commendation to the officers and the men, and distributed these medals inscribed with the four great battle fields—Alma, Balaklava, Inkermann and Sebastopol. As the Queen gave these to the wounded men and the wounded officers, the bands of music struck up the national air, and the people, with streaming eyes, joined in the song:—

SUDDENLY SURROUNDED—

"God save our noble Queen!
Long live our gracious Queen!
God save the Queen!"

And then they shouted 'Huzza! huzza!' Oh, it was for those returned warriors! But a brighter, better, and gladder day will come when Christ shall gather those who have toiled in His service, good soldiers of Jesus Christ. He shall rise before them, and in the presence of all the glorified in heaven He will say: 'Well, done good and faithful servant!' And then He will distribute the medals of eternal victory, not inscribed with works of righteous which we have done, but with those four great battlefields dear to earth and dear to heaven—Bethlehem! Nazareth! Gethsemane! Calvary!

A PROUD DAY

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition; and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE DUTIES ON WHEAT AND FLOUR.

The wonderful tariff which Sir Leonard Tilley five years ago launched on a guilty public strikes many rocks and threatens to go to pieces. The last to raise a row about it are the long-suffering millers who believe the tariff is ruining them. At a general meeting of the Toronto Board of Trade on Wednesday Mr. H. N. Baird there moved the following resolution, of which he had given notice : "That this Board, satisfied that the milling industry of this country labors under a most unnecessary and unfair disadvantage whenever the wheat crop of Canada is less than the consumptive requirements of the country ; and being satisfied further that this disadvantage is due to the tariff discriminating in favor of the American manufacturer of flour, by imposing a duty of 50 cents per barrel on American flour, whereas the duty on American wheat is 15 cents per bushel, and equal to 71 cents per barrel, thereby making it impossible for the Canadian miller to compete with the Amrrican rival, be it resolved that as the principle of the Canadian tariff is avowedly to protect the Canadian manufacturer, and as it most markedly falls in this particular, this Board do memorialize the Government to rectify the injustice by at least equalizing the duties on Americen wheat and flour, so that the American miller will not have an absolutely protected advantage from the operation of the Canadian tariff." Commenting on this, Mr. Baird said : Our object in bringing this matter before you is, as stated in the resolution, to memorialize the Government to rectify the injustice under which the millers now suffer, and have suffered since the inauguration of the National Policy, but more particularly during the past season.

Mr. Plewes, of Brantford, pointed out that there was $20,000,000 invested in the milling industry employing hands representing a population of 50,000 or 60,000. Fully one-third of these men, he said, had remained out of employment the greater part of this year, and fully another third had been compelled to leave the country to find employment, and the remainder had been kept at work by employers who preferred to operate at a loss than to close down and let their men leave. It was not only these men and their employers, but a whole retinue of others who suffered.

Mr. Neelon, M.P.P., said that during the past year, owing to the deficient crop, a large amount of American flour was brought in, and the result was that that supplied the market, and large quantities of Canadian wheat remained still in the garnaries while Canadian mills which could produce as good flour as any in the country had to stand idle.

The President, in putting the resolution, said they had in this case an example of the difficulties a Government got into when it undertook to protect all the industries of the country. They were pretty sure to tread on the toes of some industry and he thought that the Government was beginning to realize that. He thought that if the duty on wheat was an injury, or did not benefit the farmers, the millers should try to secure them as allies ; they would give more assistance than this Board could. He had no doubt, however, that the Board would go as far as it fairly could to assist the millers to secure fair treatment. The resolution was carried and is to be formulated in a memorial to the Government which will have the task of reconciling the duty of 15 cents a bushel imposed upon wheat ostensibly for the benefit of the farmer and the duty on flour which is brought in to the detrimemt of home grain.

Cockades of owl feathers sprinkled with gold dust appear in the fall millinery goods.

Velvet brocades with beadings on the edges of the figures and flowers are among the new goods not yet opened for the fall trade.

THEIR THOUGHTS.

Arabella—Here he is, just where he's been for weeks. Why doesn't he speak out? I'm sure I encourage him enough. George—Here she is, as usual, wearing a costume which cost more money than I can make in six months. How can I ask her to marry me, as it would be impossible for me to support her in the extravagant style in which she now lives.

NOVELTIES IN SHOES.

There are some pretty novelties in shoes, such as colored patent leather with high heels, and bows of their own color. They are specially stylish, and worn either to accord with the dress, with colored ribbons exactly matching the tone of the shoe. Shoes coming well up on the instep, fastened with a steel buckle, the back and front either red, or any other color patent leather, are among the most stylish carriage and full dress shoes now in vogue. Bronze kids are much worn for evening, elaborately embroidered with butterflies, frequently in reds and yellows. They are also trimmed with upstanding bows edged with beads. Black satin beaded in steel with such bows, are very dressy.—American Queen.

RATTAN AND CANE.

Rattan and cane bedroom furniture is growing in popularity. The beds and dressing cases come in extremely pretty and artistic designs. They are cool, and if properly attended to and cleaned once every six months, will last a life time. They are sometimes ornamented with broad satin ribbon, but they look just as well without this addition.

BROILED POTATOES.

Broiled potatoes are a new dish. Cut cold boiled potatoes in slices a third of an inch thick. Dip them in molted butter and fine bread crumbs. Place in a double broiler and broil over a fire that is not too hot. Garnish with parsley and serve on a hot dish ; or, season with salt and pepper, toast until a delicate brown, arrange on a hot dish and season with butter.

MINT VINEGAR.

Now is a good time to prepare mint vinegar. Take pepper or spearmint leaves ; wash them and put them into a large-mouthed bottle, fill the bottle up with vinegar and cork it closely. Let this stand for three weeks, then pour it through a muslin cloth into a clean bottle, and it is ready for use.

DINNER OF BLUE STOCKINGS.

A dinner took place a few days ago in a Paris restaurant given by the ladies of the French press. It was self-styled le dinner des bas bleus. The President of this blue-stocking banquet was Jennie Thilde, the fair editress of the Gil Blas, whose caustic pen makes her admired and feared. At her sides were seen Mme. Paul de Chary of the Pays, Carnee of the Patrie, Camile Delaville of the Presse and Opinion Nationale, Georges de Payreburne of the Telegraphe, Olympe Andouard, the editress of the Pavillon, and many more or less known to fame. The statutes provide that only good-looking women may become members of this ciety and most of the aboved named ladies if not actually beautiful have all that subtle Parisian charm. M. Barbey d'Aurevilley, who has so often overwhelmed all blue stockings with his satire received from the lady President an invitation to attend the banquet. He declined in a most gracefully sarcastic letter. 'Madame,' he wrote, 'it is very difficult to be a St. Anthony, but one can always be a Ulysses.'

FROM THE ANTIPODES.

Belleville's Book Agent's Reception on Gympie.

SAVED FROM A WATERY GRAVE.

A Town Seamed with Gold Mines—Visit to one of Them—In a Cage—On the Streets at Night.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
Letter No. 17.

Gympie, Queensland,
Australia, July 10, '84.

There is a fascination about a gold field that partakes somewhat of a large lottery or horse race, but yet more glittering and hopeful. I was told that I would be unable to stand the pressure of the possibility of making my fortune for a few pounds, but though I laughed at the idea, I was scarce a week in Gympie before I found myself the holder of eleven hundred shares in three separate mines bearing the euphonius names of Gympie Freehold G. M. Co., limited ; the No. 2 South Lucknow G. M. Co., limited, and the No. 1 South New Zealand G. M. Co, limited. Of course they'll turn out better than Bill Nye's mine, and a mammoth fortune awaits me in the near future. I have used the term above 'on Gympie.' Instead of living in Gympie they say on. For example on my arrival here the papers announced the fact something unlike the following :—'Orion, the scribe, all the way from Canada, author of 'A Book Agents Tramp Around the World,' just arrived on Gympie for the purpose of introducing to the gullible public the renowned and astounding lives of Jesse James and Ned Kelly, the celebrated exponents of personal liberty, and which will be sold in forty seven different styles of binding, from five pounds and upwards. P.S.—We have great pleasure in recommending this great work to the Sunday Schools and private families. Now, that's what I call a good send off. The papers here are very accommodating. P.S.—I threw off 20 per cent to the editor of above. Well, it's huge fun to go on when the miners, brokers and sharpers are all abroad. You listen to two or three men in a group talking. One man says the 'Golden Fleece' will strike gold inside of a month. We've sunk the main shaft 347 feet, We've passed through a green conglomerate mixed with slate, and there are leaders beginning to show. If we don't come to the schist before we strike the pyrites, we will have to drive the criss-cross perpinskute and strike the reef on the next level Then we'll follow up the igneus formation till we come to the underlying bric a brac if the water doesn't stop us.' There are about five hundred mines here working away, some with two and others with three shifts of men of eight hours each. The brighter the outlook the harder they work, stopping only for Sunday and some of them not that. Drilling is nearly all done with the small hand drill and the blasting with dynamite.

THE STREET AT NIGHT

The whole town of Gympie (pop. 7,000) is honey combed by gold hunting, burrowing man and the loud reports of vibrations of the dynamite blasting is going on continually, Of course they tell a great many stories of how so and so, such a one and somebody else have made fortunes here, and a few weeks or months ago were poor. The Rev. Mr. S— only a few weeks ago invested a few pounds and already has received £4,000 in dividends and could sell his share in the Ellen Harkins for £10,000 more. A boot black at one of the hotels here invested a few bobs and now he rides a splendid horse, is clad in fine raiment and fares sumptuously every day. A young 'cove' here heard that he could buy 500 shares in the above for £2 (before gold was struck) and he tried to 'raise the wind' to do so, but the people laughed at him and said they would not lend him two pounds to throw away. He now can draw a genuine check for a thousand pounds and more. There are plenty like that, and yet the other side must be told. There are hundreds who have been paying 'calls' on their 'scrips' for fifteen years and never got a penny and perhaps never may.

I went down one of the largest mines the other night. There were four of us ; two clergymen, myself (now don't laugh ; they're the only class I associate with here) and the foreman. We had been to meeting (mutual improvement), and when we entered it was about 10 o'clock. It was the "No. 1 North Phoenix," employing about 150 men. First above ground we went through the crushing mill which works continually, night and day. There we all stepped into the cage and down we went through the darkness like a flash, for 500 feet. It resembled going down in an elevator from the top floor of a very high building. Every few seconds we would pass a 'level' and see the glimmer of the miner's lamps till we reached the bottom, There we got out and after taking in the situation were ready to go to the level above. Now comes the harrowing part of the tale! At the very bottom of the shaft was a well twenty feet deep. This well was about three feet square and used to collect the leakage of the mine. It was now only about half full having just previous to our visit been hoisted out. Lucky 'twas so, for me ! The foreman told us to step (appropriate name). Mr. B—— and I did so when it immediately sank into the well. We yelled but the cage went lower and the water came higher until the top buttons on our vest showed 'high water mark.' Meanwhile the foreman and miners who were spectators of the dire catastrophe and almost tragedy were given the signal to the engineer above, and after we were for a short time in the water we were hoisted up and saved from a watery grave. Although there was some laughing done at our expense after it was all over the paleness of the foreman and the way in which his hand shook as he tried to light a candle, was enough to convince me that it might have been serious. But wasn't it a funny place to be—in an iron cage in the bottom of a well five hundred feet under the ground at midnight, 12,000 miles from home !

INTO THE CAGE,

Gympie and Charter's Towers are the two principal gold fields in Queensland, but are quite different in their nature. Gmypie has been at some early period of the world's history greatly agitated and tossed about by subterranean fires and earthquakes. Nearly all the reefs are broken and displaced at intervals, which fact makes it impossible to determine with accuracy the position of any reef. There have been cases here where a reef carried very rich gold across the entire claim right to the boundary line, while the claim right next and on the same line of reef got none at all.

At Charter's Towers the formation is more regular and therefore the share market is also more steady. Everybody, however, agrees that this is a very rich field, and time and hard work only are needed to cause it to stand in the front rank of the world's richest fields. Another peculiarity of this place is that most of the shareholders are miners themselves and poor men. A half dozen or so of men believing that gold is to be found in a certain locality, make application and take out a miner's license and a claim is pegged off. A company is at once formed with a capital of say £6,000 divided into 24,000 shares at five shillings each. These are thrown on the market at perhaps a penny, per share, and in this way money enough is raised to carry on the work of mining. As the work of sinking progresses and the indications become more favorable the shares or 'script' advance in value from threepence to ten pounds each. The highest at present on Gympie are the Ellen Hardins, which are going at £5 5s. At 'The Towers' the 'Day Dawn are worth about £10.

A BICYCLE IDYL.

BOB BURDETTE, THE WICKED MAN OF THE 'HAWKEYE,' TELLS A STORY.

A minister in Clevelan rode to church last Sabbath on a bicycle. As he swept up to the sacred edifice, a large Newfoundland dog, belonging to the senior deacon, came lumbering out to greet the pastor. The bicycle struck the canine head on; under a full head of steam, and ran him down with a shock that could be distinctly felt with the naked eye. The reverend gentleman took a header and jammed his high silk hat down over his ears so tight that he had to crawl clear through it to get out of it. The scattered leaves of a seven head sermon flew around the avenue like a theological snow storm. The parson's coat was split down the back and his trousers ripped across the knees. He pinned up the knees. and he had to wear a pepper and salt sack coat which the sexton loaned him. When he appeared in the pulpit in this garb, the congregation smiled, and when he announced the text, Second Kings, twelfth and sixth—"But it was so * * * the priests had not repaired the breaches—" there wasn't a dry eye in the conventicle. And now the question before the church is :—Should the pastor ride the bicicle to church. or has the deacon a Christian right to own a dog.'

'So Charley, you've got a sweetheart I hear ?' said one youngman to another.

'I've heard something of the sort, too,' answered Charley.

'Is she pretty ?'

'Rather,'

'Father living ?'

'I should smile. Livest man you ever saw.'

'Well heeled ?'

'I don't know whether he is heeled at all or not but I have cause to believe he is very heavily toed, 'and he limped away with a hurt look and a crumpled coat-tail.—Merchant Traveller.

OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co , and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two mor ths free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

OUR IDOLS.

We fashion still our idols—not of stone,
Nor beaten gold nor costliest Indian wood ;
Ah, no ! our idols are our loved, our own,
In whose sweet veins runs only human blood.

Yet round their brows we see celestial light,
And dream them glorious as the angels are;
Their very presence fills the gloomiest night
With tender radiance, like some wondrous star.

On their dear shrines we lay our choicest gifts,
Devotion, faith—aye, oftentimes a life—
Oh, consecration sweet that strongly lifts
The soul from self through love's divinest strife !

God pity those who live too long and see
That light celestial slowly fade away,
And, like some hideous midnight phantasy,
Their idols crumble into common clay !

SPORTING NEWS.

Having won the handsome silver trophy offered at Hastings the Oka Lacrosse Club intend to capture the cup offered at Bowmanville on the 27th. The Demonstration Committee there were very anxious that the Okas should go up. The reputation of our clever team is evidently not confined by geographical lines. How's that, umpire? The club is now exceedingly active, no less than four matches being arranged. It is desirable that all these should be played by the same team so that that element of victory, team play, may be developed. The team will be chosen from the following, who are all capital players:—Lawrence, Kenny, Burdett, Shultz, Halliwell, Wallace, Henderson, Beasley Garratt, Yeomans, Coleman, Whitelaw Flemming, Thomas, Warham.

ENGLAND'S INTEREST.

LONDON. AUG. 22.—The press this morning generally discuss the probable effect that a Franco-Chinese war would have upon English trade in China. The gravity of the question is apparent from the fact that this trade amounts to one hundred million dollars annually. CHRIST CHURCH PICNIC.

Yesterday the combined Sunday Schools of Christ Church and St. George's held their annual pic-nic at Massassaga Point. The weather was all that could be desired and the children, to the number of 450 were enthusiastic in their merriment. Large numbers of prizes were distributed to the successful ones in the games. Races, football, scrambling for peanuts, apples and bullseyes kept the children constantly interested and excited, so that the general vote of the children was that they were really tired of playing. The superintendants and teachers did everything to furnish enjoyment. All came home more than satisfied, the number present being nearly one thousand. Too much praise cannot be given to Captain Graves, of the Quinte, for his unceasing kindness and attention.

G. T. R. PICNIC.

Annual Outing of the Boys of Brockville Division

From our own Correspondent.

IROQUOIS, Aug. 22—The employees of the Brockville Division of the G. T. R. held their annual picnic at Point Iroquois on Thursday last. Point Iroquois, which is rapidly rising into eminence as a picnic ground and summer resort, is one of those rarely favored spots which unites the fresh beauty of dense foliage and soft carpeting with the sublime grandeur of a situation full within the sweep of the mighty St. Lawrence. At this point the river turns suddenly at right angles to its usual course, follows this diversion for about a mile and then falls again into the general trend, thus causing Point Iroquois to jut well out into the stream and command a view of the river and its picturesque banks for miles. The excursionists arrived with a heavy train about ten o'clock and were greeted with flags, arches and unlimited small boys, when headed by the Kingston band ("B" Battery) they marched to the grounds. Once there the usual games and orthodox lunch were disposed of in true G.T.R. style so well known to those who have enjoyed the picnics on our own (Belleville) division. In the afternoon the interest was pretty evenly divided between the dancing stand with its capital string band, a lacrosse match between the Iroquois and Brockville junior teams, which the Iroquois won in three straights, and the more romantic attraction of wood and river to all so inclined. There were some points however in which I think our Belleville boys' excel their eastern brethren. At our picnic liquor selling upon the ground is unknown. Here, I am sorry to say it was not quite such a novelty and this discrepancy naturally led to many things that mar the pleasure and tone of such a gathering. However, all went merry as a marriage bell, and when the sun had sank to rest cooling its heated face in the waters of the river giving many of the visitors a beautiful sight entirely new to them, the picnickers returned.

AT THE MAKING OF THE HAY.

When the whip poor-wills are calling,
And the apple-blooms are falling,
With a tender tint forestalling
Summer's blush upon the grass;
Where the little stars are keeping
Watch above the meadow sleeping,
And the jack-o'-lantern's peeping,
I will meet my bonnie lass.

I will seek her. I will find her,
I will slyly steal behind her;
And with kisses I will blind her
Till she sets the happy day!
And when the barley's heading,
And the summer rose is shedding,
Oh, there'll be a merry wedding
At the making of the hay!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon resuscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Drawing forth her pocket book, taking no time for reflection she hurriedly wrote on one of the pages thes words—

'My sister is ignorant of who has been my friend, for reasons I cannot here explain, she believes it to be our late overseer David Ringscole. I entreat you never to let her know to the contrary, or let it appear that I, too, have been deceived.

'Tearing out the leaf, and folding it, she gave it to the negro, repeating her injunction.

Yick promised compliance, and Juliette rejoined Pauline.

An hour later while they were taking a temporary rest from the heat of the day to which the negro, since his interview with Loring, no longer demurred, the Creole was suddenly struck by the false step she had taken and trembled at probable consequences.

By that slip of paper, wherein in her own hand writing, she had confessed her deceit to Pauline, she had put herself in this mans power.

Supposing he chose to betray her?

His simple word might not receive credence, the paper bearing her own caligraphy could not be doubted.

Anxious, alarmed, bitterly blaming her folly, which remounted the beckoned Yick to her.

'Return the paper I give to you,' she said, 'I want it.'

'Impossible, missey, I hab gib it to Massa Loring already. He said ebery-thing you wish shall be.'

'Given it him already!' repeated the Creole, startled. 'Then he is near.'

'Yes, missy, he watch over you that no harm shall come. Massa Loring eber near to help you, if bad man follow.'

A cold sensation crept over Juliette.

Her mistrust strengthened,

For the first time she felt fear,

Fear of what?

Stuart Loring's love.

She seemed she recognize the price he would expect her to pay for his service.

Could she wed him—wed him or anyone when Eustace Belmore lived and was not married?

No: never.

Did Stuart Loring know this b

Had he devined it by that subtile power which seemed to read the the thought of his fellow man?

Had he, consequently, laid a cunning trap for her.

'If so,' she reflected, raising her hand to her bosom, 'I have means to escape him even as I have escaped Mr. Scladden. But why should I terrify myself until doubt is nearer certainty?'

The feeling of suspicion, however, was not to be shaken off.

Of a resolute, energetic dispositien she mentally considered the several ways in which the American might prove false, and prepared in each to meet it.

After the brief rest at noon, they made no other halt until they reached the tributary Sarakow.

Here, the Creole' still suspiciously on the alert noted that that after fording the stream, two paths diverged, one to the right, the one to the left.

She watched eagerly their guide.

The small stream, where they crossed, was so shallow that it did not come higher than the knees of the animals.

Consequently Yick had not thought it necessary to lend his aid.

Keeping ahead, he struck boldly into the left road.

Juliette observed that he never once hesitated.

Her suspicions increased.

She shuddered at the the thought of how blindly she had trusted herself to this man—the man she was growing convinced loved her.

Vermillion lay to the south: the road to the right, therefore would be the most direct route.

Where might not the guide be leading them?

She felt they were now safe from pursuit and consequently in a position to exert a will of her own.

'Stay!' she called to the negro, again checking Pauline's horse as her own.

Yick obeyed, but only twisted himself halfround in his saddle.

'I understand you that we were bound for Vermillion?'

Yick, a negro of few words—a rarity—nodded.

'Then that road,' and she pointed towards it with her riding whip, 'tending more south must certainly be the straightest course.'

'The straightest it may be—Yick don't know missy—but him ain't de safest,' was the rejoinder.

'Possibly,' said the Creole, 'but of the two I would prefer taking it.'

'Prefer, Juliette,' broke in Pauline opening he blue eyes in astonishment, 'when the risk may be greater?'

'I do not think much if any risk exists now, dear,' answered her sister, calmly. 'The part we are to make for after leaving Vermillion is so insignificant, that in fact is almost unknown, and it will escape being watched, while, had we been pursued, we must have been overtaken long before this.'

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years."

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

☞ None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

THE NOISES OF THE NIGHT.

"The Lancet will deserve well of the enormously increasing class of insomniacs if it will enter upon an energetic crusade against the greatest of all nuisances—the nuisance of nocturnal noise."—Globe.

The watch dog howls to greet the moon
whene're he gets a peep,
I hear him as I vainly try to snatch a wink of sleep;
Some reveller without a key is hammering at the door,
I really think that slumber now will visit me
no more;
A pussies prowl upon the tiles, they caterwaul and fight;
Oh, terrible indeed we find the Noises of the Night.

Some roysterers now are on the spree, and sing a horrid song;
A newsboy screeches latest news that's certain to be wrong;
A cart goes lumbering by the door, it's full of iron rods,
I'm certain, by the noise it makes; but, hang it, what's the odds?
For sleep is quite impossible, although the window's tight,
So utterly distracting are the noises of the Night.

They're beating carpets, I declare, at night, a ghastly freak;
And now that loose old chimney pot of course
begins to creak;
A cab stops at my neighbor's house, and loud
they bang the door,
Which wakes me when I'd just begun my most harmonious snore;
It's hard upon a nervous man to wake up in a fright;
But what can one expect with all the Noises
of the Night?

And, ere the morning light has dawned, the lively cocks and hens
Emerge 'as fresh as paint,' I know, from out adjacent pens;
And then the loud infernal crow, from that old Chanticleer,
Comes, banishing all further sleep, upon my tortured ear;
I could not slumber until late, I'm roused at earliest light—
Oh, who will rid the fevered brain of Noises
of the Night!

KNEE BREECHES.

BECOMING POPULAR IN TORONTO AS A DAILY DRESS.

TORONTO, Aug. 23:—The knee breeches brigade is making rapid strides. Its membership already includes journalists, limbs of the law, business men, bank clerks, an impressario and others whose professions are not specified. The Toronto bicycle club, at its meeting Thursday night, took the proposition of the league into consideration and decided to try the effect of wearing their knee breeches daily until next meeting, before deciding on entering the league. A number of other gentlemen have also expressed their determination of adopting the "rational" dress provided the league can obtain a certain number of members, and it is safe to predict that Toronto will lead the fashion in this respect for the continent within a short time. As an enthusiast of the change says "it will recommend itself to everyone. For the dress is cooler in summer, warmer in winter, more elegant, and by a large majority more economical. The tailors of course, are kicking, because they would sooner get $8 for a man's nether garments than $3.50. But long pants must go never-the-less, or rather the less by a good deal.

The World, speaking editorially says:—"There is a movement manifesting itself among the men of Toronto to wear the knee-breeches of their grandfathers. The bicycle is one powerful motive in this direction; but there is no denying the fact that the love of the beautiful in dress is a second cause. An artist in sculpture who wears knee breeches said to a reporter yesterday: Knee breeches are artistic and have a tendency to make men courteous and civil. They are moreover economical. The bicyclists all prefer them and wear them when not mounted; a number of the young men who live on the Island also sport them, and within the last few days three or four young men, all more or less devotees of art, have adopted them as part of their regular dress.

THE HOME CROPS.

The Grand Junction division report to the G.T.R; on the crops refers to the Bay of Quinte barley, and indicates an abundant crop, the greater part of which has been harvested in first rate order and with good results. Generally speaking, throughout the Midland division the straw is somewhat light, but all the grain is well headed and the quality and quantity above the average. Hay somewhat below the average. Root crops looking well. Fruit a partial failure.

Why suffer from weak nerves, want of appetite, and general debility? letting the loss of sleep and rest impoverish the system and thin the blood, when such a really meritorious remedy as Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine may be had at any drug store. This article is recommended by the highest members of the medical faculty in cases of indigestion, general debility, loss of appetite, and nervous affections of all kinds. It will strengthen you, keep your system in regular order, and enable you to obtain successfully grapple with the work you have to do. It is pleasant to the taste, and contains nothing injurious to the most delicate constitution. IF IT WERE POSSIBLE to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition; and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE DEVIL GETTING MORAL.

"Satin rebuking sin" is a typical spectacle of an edifying nature. Ex-Ald: Dickson is a gentleman who entered the City Council in 1879 and was chairman of the Finance Committee during 1882 and 1883. In none of these years was there anything added to the Sinking Fund. All the money raised was taken for current expenditure and interest.

This year the estimates contained no item for Sinking Fund, Ald. Diamond seizing on all available revenue and providing for nothing but this year's expenditure. He was thus enabled, aided by a largely increased assessment resulting from the adoption of the one-assessor system he opposed, to cut down the rate to 15 mills. Now Mr. Dickson steps in and says, hold on you havn't provided for Sinking Fund with which to meet your liabilities when they mature, and I am going to apply to a court to compel you to add 5 mills or half a cent additional to this year's taxation. This comparison between my rate of 18 mills and the present rate of 15 won't do. It may appear creditable to the new management. I'd rather see 20 mills this year.

It will be noticed that last year the same writ of mandamus might have been applied for to compel the city to insert provision in the estimates for Sinking Fund, and who would have been the defendant! Ald. Geo. D. Dickson!

THE CHINESE MUST GO.

A public meeting in British Columbia has declared that "Chinese immigration is thwarting our prosperity and threatening our very existence," and reasserted the demand of the people of British Columbia for the enactment of restrictive measures at the next meeting of Parliament. A motion, proposed by a friend of the Dominion Government, urging that those opposed to Chinese immigration should give evidence before the commission was voted down by a large majority. Mr. Chapleau and Mr. Davin will not require to "investigate" the state of public feeling on this question. They find it ready-made and red hot.

The Chinese must go.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ben Butler, Presidential candidate, argues that because the French soldier Lafayette and his men helped America in 1774, the Americans now have a precedent for helping Ireland against England. Ben has a great head and an eye to business but he will get badly left all the same if all his arguments are as sound as this one.

La Patrie says "the attempts which our advarsaries have made to destroy the Hon. Mr. Mercier in the public estimation have only had one result that of putting his enemies to confusion and of, in addition, assuring to the gamey Liberal chieftain the most complete confidence of his party." Mr. Mercier will yet lead the Government of Quebec.

The friends of domestic morality are agitating for an amendment to the constitution of the United States, adding to section 8 of the constitution the words "and divorce"; so that it shall read: "Congress shall have power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies and divorce throughout the United States." There is much to be said in favor of a national divorce law.

A tremendous conflict between the Dominion Government and an aged apple man and his wife has been terminated. Their apple and peanut cart near the Ottawa post office was violently upset and much indignation was aroused in the breasts of many citizens. The Department of Public Works has now promised to pay the old couple an indemnity. Does the Government not want an Inspector of Apple Stands and Examiner of Peanuts? We've the very man for the post right here in Belleville.

Again the Toronto Board of Trade has affirmed the necessity for a Dominion Act respecting insolvents. At its recent meeting Capt. W. F. McMaster moved the following resolution: "That the former deliverances of this Board as to the necessity for an act for the equitable distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors, coupled if deemed necessary, with provisions for discharge, are hereby reaffirmed. That the Committee on Insolvency, viz, Messrs. Elliot, Blain, McMaster, Ince, Clarkson, and the President, are hereby re-appointed and instructed to act if possible in conjunction with similar Committees from the Boards of Trade of Montreal and Hamilton, in urging the Dominion Government to place upon the statute book at its next ensuing session such a measure as was framed by these Boards last year, the present state of the law being alike injurious to the mercantile interest of Canada at home and abroad." This motion was carried.

Mr. Henry Marshall, Reeve of Dunn, writes: "Some time ago I got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery from Mr. Harrison, and I consider it the very best medicine extant for Dyspepsia." This medicine is making marvellous cures in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, etc., in purifying the blood and restoring manhood to full vigor.

TALMAGE AT GRIMSBY.

Grimsby Camp, Aug. 24.—At 2.30 this afternoon the celebrated Brooklyn divine, Dr. Talmage, preached a sermon to an audience variously estimated at from 10,000 to 13,000 persons.

Leading Druggists on this continent testify to the large and constantly increasing sales of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and report its beneficent effects upon their customers troubled with Liver Complaint, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood, and other physical infirmities, and as a female medicine, it has accomplished remarkable cures.

FOO CHOW BOMBARDED.

France's First Victory Over The Chinese.

SEVEN GUNBOATS SUNK.

Paris, Aug 24—The attack of the French ironclads on the defences of Foo Chow began at 10 o'clock yesterday. The French fleet had been anchored in the river Min, below the great arsenal, and at the first flight of shells the Chinese squadron replied. Admiral Courbet signalled for an advance in defiance of the fact that it was known the river had been laid with torpedoes. A terrific cannonade was kept up, but the French ships steamed on and it was soon seen that the Chinese squadron was doomed.

TWO FRENCH BOATS SUNK.

The French sailors as soon as they came alongside of the Chinese vessels boarded them in the old style. Several ships surrendered when disabled by shot and shell and before evening the entire squadron was in the hands of the French. In the bold advance two French iron clads were sunk by torpedoes. The loss of life is not stated but it has been heavy on both sides. The great arsenal and ship building yards are now at the mercy of the French fleet but it is feared that the Chinese on retiring will explode the arsenal.

It is semi officially stated that inasmuch as France has not declared war, neutral vessels going to China are not subject to restrictions which would be imposed in actual war. The French consul of this city has lowered his flag.

QUICK WORK.

Shanghai, Aug. 24.—The Foo Chow arsenal was destroyed yesterday after three hours bombardment by Admiral Courbet's squadron. Seven Chinese gunboats were sunk. Two escaped. The European settlement was not disturbed. The bombardment began at 2 p.m. and ceased at 8 p.m. Only one Chinese battery replied. The report that two French vessels were sunk during the engagement is unconfirmed. The fleet sustained no damage.

WHERE FOO CHOW IS.

The bombarded city is the capital of the Province of Fokien, and is one of the ports open to foreign trade. It is situated 420 miles to the north east of Canton, and 375 miles s. e west of Shanghai. Foo Chow has a population variously estimated at from 600,000 to 1,250,000, and is surrounded by a wall seven miles in circuit, 20 to 25 feet high and 12 to 15 feet thick. It will be almost impossible to bombard the city proper, for it stands on a plain about 2½ miles from the north bank of the Min, and 25 miles from the mouth of that river. But an enormous damage can be done to the immense arsenal and dockyard, situated at the Pagoda anchorage, some distance up the river, and much slaughter of the inhabitants, who live in boats on the river and in the populous suburbs, is among the possibilities. Foochow is a busy manufacturing and mercantile city. There are cotton, paper and hardware factories, and several hundred furnaces for making porcelain within its walls, as well as lead mines and tea-growing districts near by. Its trade is chiefly with Japan and the Maritime Provinces, but it also imports salt, ginger and European manufactures, and over $5,000,000 worth of opium per annum.

EFFECT OF THE WAR.

It is said there will be a material advance in the prices of teas, silks and other Chinese goods if war breaks out between France and China. A war would operate greatly to the advantage of the United States through the almost immediate increase of the trade. The demand for every kind of manufactured goods heretofore supplied to China through French agencies will be largely transferred to this country. The shipments of goods and munitions via San Francisco have already increased.

PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS.

The September Manhattan is singularly varied in its contents, and takes the reader much about the world in five entertaining papers, treating of places widely separated. The North American Review for September will be read with great interest. The articles are: 'The Basis of Popular Government,' by J. L. Spaulding; 'The Demand of the Industrial Spirit,' by Chas. Dudley Warner; 'Inspiration and Infallibility.' Dr. J. H. Rylance; 'The Need of Liberal Divorce Laws,' Elizabeth Cady Stanton; 'Our Remote Ancestry,' Professor A. Winchell; 'The Exclusion of the Chinese,' John H. Durst; 'Evils of the Tariff System,' David A. Wells, T. G. Sherman, J. B. Sargent, and W. G. Sumner.

St. Nicholas for September is an especially attractive number, containing a happy combination of those features which go to make up a successful child's magazine.

In its contents the September Century aims to rival the August 'Midsummer Holiday number' in entertaining summer reading, as well as in articles of unusual importance. Pictorially, it is also of a popular character. 'From Coventry to Chester on Wheels,' the opening illustrated paper, recounts the experience of Mr. Joseph Pennell, the artist, during a trip on a tricycle in England. His pictorial record of the journey, is cleverly supplemented by the text. The prominence given this article in the foremost American magazine indicates the hold which wheeling has taken.

TRAVELING ON PAPER.

A Journey From Belleville to Yellowstone Park.

SOME EMINENT COMPANIONS.

Having recently visited some portions of the United States and Canada in which the numerous readers of the Ontario feel interested, I will at your request write a brief description of the journey which may serve to while a leisure hour away. The party making the journey was of a varied and cosmopolitan character, being composed of representatives of many portions of Quebec and Ontario, it included Dr. Roy, proprietor of Beauport Asylum, Quebec, Dr. Clarke, the resident physician and controller of Toronto Asylum, Hon. James Young, ex Treasurer of Ontario. Hon. Mr. De La Bruere, Speaker of the Legislative Council, Quebec, Mr. Tasse, M. P. for Ottawa and a distinguished author, Jules Tessier, Q C. of Quebec bar, Mons. Brosseit, prominent journalist and advocate, Mons. Le Vasseur literateur and celebrated musician, and many Ontario notables. Some of the gentlemen were accompanied by their ladies and many an hour would have passed wearily had it not been for their delightful companionship. The many accomplishments, brilliancy and fascinating courtesy of the French ladies were most appreciated by the English gentlemen while the charms of their fair sisters from Ontario were not unobserved. The party rendezvoused at the Rossin House and after dining together took train for Sarnia where they found the magnificent steamer United Empire, of the Beatty line in waiting. After a good night's rest all parties made up their minds to have a good time and led by Mons. Le Vasseur, they sang the opening ode and from tha moment all went merry as a marriage bell. For cleanliness, excellence of table, courtesy, and all other attributes necessary to perfect comfort on a lake voyage the Empire cannot be surpassed. The evenings passed delightfully to the accompaniment of the piano and banjo. Soon Port Arthur was in sight, the City Council, heralded by a band, appeared and addresses and replies were the order of the day. A large tug and an abundance of luxuries, most bountifully supplied were placed at the disposal of the party, and in a short time we had crossed the harbor and were breasting the waters of the Kaministiquia. Soon the celebrated Neebing Hotel and the great works of the C. P. R., at Fort William, appeared in sight. It is unnecessary to say that there is active competition between

PORT ARTHUR AND FORT WILLIAM

From the Port Arthur point of view the great success of their city is assured. They look down the vista of futurity and prophesy that Port Arthur has entered upon a never ending era of prosperity. They point to her extensive docks lined with steamers, her large elevators, capacious harbor and line of railroad, to here ever increasing commerce, and the many new dwellings springing up in every direction and they say that they have laid their foundations broad and deep, and that their city is indeed founded upon rock. Other say these men are dreamers. The truth is their prosperity will be ephemeral. As soon as the C. P. R. is complete the necessity for shipping at Port Arthur will not exist, and the whilom city will again become a hamlet. It is also said that the C. P. R. intend removing their works to Fort William, and are about erecting their large elevators and extensive docks at that place. It seems to a superficial observer that the dredging of the bar at the mouth of the river, now actively going on, the long lines of piling already driven indicate an intention on the part of the C. P. R. to take advantage of the admirable shipping facilities afforded by the Kaministiquia river to erect large and substantial storehouses and dockage. The prudent thing to do in the opinion of your correspondent would be not to invest at present in either Port Arthur or Fort William. Silver Islet works are full of water and abandoned, and the minds of investors are turned toward the Rabbing mine.

AT DULUTH.

A few hours run and the beautiful harbor and prosperous city of Duluth came in view. The growth of the city during last year has been enormous, it has certainly doubled. Many of the houses are of the best discription, built of stone in pretty designs. A mine of silver is actually being excavated in one of the streets, and is beginning to yield great returns. Duluth has all the elements and requirements of a large city, surrounded by numerous deposits of iron, which will be brought into the city by the Iron Range Railroad and by other projected roads. Some most excellent silver mines in the immediate vicinity of the city are now extensively worked, but the great, never failing and inexhaustible source of Duluth prosperity will be found in the enormous fields of wheat and other grain, which now whiten the vast plains of Dakota and Minesota. Immense elevators, some of which hold a million bushels, are now erected and being filled with grain, while it will require a fleet of vessels to move the wheat which now pours into Duluth. I saw one steam barge with five masts, towing a barge quite as large, the steamer having as a load 57,000 bushels of grain, and the barge a still larger quantity. The barge is the 'David Dows,' the largest on the lakes. Duluth has 17,000 inhabitants, and is the eastern terminus of the Minnesota Division of the Northern Pacific Railway. Its opera house cost $100,000. There are two high schools costing $65,000, a blast furnace, capacity 80 tons per day, 12 saw mills cutting 150,000,000 feet annually, electric light, 9 miles of gas and water mains. One of the pleasantest sights is the enormous roller skating rink. Here on a vast floor, as level as any sheet of ice, hundreds of young men and maidens were skating most gracefully. Occasionally some mere tyro would lose his feet and slide a rod or two, not upon his skates. It seemed to us a most charming and healthful recreation.

SCENES OF GRANDEUR.

The luxurious Pullman is ready for use and we take our seats anticipating much pleasure, and instruction from the long ride of 1,200 miles through an interesting, and to us almost unknown country. A few miles from Duluth at Fond Du Lac, we meet with some of the finest scenery on the route. Long canyons running between enormous cliffs hundreds of feet high. The bed of the canyon a foaming torrent broken into a thousand picturesque little falls; the towering cliffs with the masses of rock overhanging the road; the glimpses of beautiful, green, restful valleys. There scenes simply electrified the beholder, and one could hear a chorus of exclamations, "Oh, how beautiful, how wonderful, how grand." A thunder storm for our especial benefit came on at the deepest part of the gorge. The play of the lightning and the roar of the thunder as it reverberated through the canyons, producing a most awe-inspiring effect. A monster erection in the shape of a saw mill is seeking, for the sake of a few dollars, to mar one of the most beautiful portions of this remarkable canony. Had we been certain that it was well insured, I think we would have been glad if dame nature has resented the intrusion and levelled the structure to the ground.

To be continued.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

AND ONTARIO IN HIM.

Sir John has lost faith in Ontario.—Kingston Whig.

BUT HAMILTON IS HEADQUARTERS.

There are idiots in other places than Hamilton.—Hamilton Spectator.

STILL INVINCIBLE THOUGH

Hanlan's defeat has removed one source of complaint. The press of the United States no longer speak of him as an American. He is now the Toronto sculler.—London Advertiser.

BORN LEGISLATORS

The Canadian lawyer who, immediately after he passes his final examination, is not seized with the idea that he was born to go to Parliament is a novelty such as Barnum does not possess.—Minneapolis Canadian-American.

A Field of Corns.—Thomas Sabim, of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

THE PROHIBITION CANDIDATE.

It is announced of ex-governor St. John that he ran away from home when 12 years old: was married at 19 became a widower at 20, became a California miner and was chased barefooted by redskins for two days over snow and ice; was wrecked on the Sandwich Islands: become a country lawyer at Illinois; was a soldier during the war, ending as colonel, and lastly became governor of Kansas.

OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 31, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

I have several times examined baking powders in the market to determine their purity, raising power and influence on the health of those using them. I have uniformly found DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER the best in all these respects.

I have just made another examination of the "Royal," "Andrew's Pearl" and "Dr. Price's Cream," and the results are the same as formerly. DR. PRICE'S CREAM is free from AMMONIA, while the 'Royal' and 'Andrew's Pearl' both contain Ammonia. The final reaction of DR. PRICE'S CREAM is acid, while the 'Royal' and 'Pearl' give an ALKALINE reaction, which LEADS to DYSPEPSIA. Price's is a pure, clean and elegant proportion of Cream of Tartar and Bicarbonate of Soda, and there does in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie.

In raising power 'Price's' stands at the head.

The relative amount of Carbonic Acid Gas given off by the same weight (10 grammes) of these powders, heated in the same way, is as follows:

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder -	650 cubic centimeters
The Royal - - - -	600 cubic centimeters
Andrews' Pearl - - - -	543 cubic centimeters

I have used PRICE'S in my family for years. 'Even if the price is higher PRICE'S is always the best.'

MEDICAL MEN'S FEES.

Globe Aug. 23.

How about medical men's fees? A case has been tried in Belleville, the decision on which seems to intimate that a patient is responsible only to the doctor who is engaged by his authority. The Belleville case was that of a man who met with an accident and who had several fingers cut off by the doctor called in. For this $15 was charged and willing paid. Whether at the request of the doctor attending or not is not known, but the brother of the injured man went for another doctor who assisted at the operation and charged $2. Payment was refused. The case went to trial and the doctor was non suited on the ground that the patient had not engaged him. Suppose a man insensible and not able to engage anybody, what then? Could he repudiate payment?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

FIRE PROTECTION AND INSURANCE.

DEAR SIR:—Your article in a recent issue entitled "Fire Protection and Insurance" should draw attention to the general lack of proper fire extinguishing facilities in our town. But I may be allowed to take exception to the argument that is being put forth now, viz. that the Fire Underwriters Association should place Belleville on the same footing as Kingston. The latter city is now classed in 'C.' (not 'B.' as you erroneously put it.) Now if a place with facilities equal to Belleville in other respects and superior in respect of its water pressure could not reach a better position than Belleville of what advantage is a water-pressure system.

The length of time usually taken by the brigade here to get to a fire might be improved even if nothing else is done. Let the horses be trained thoroughly, and improved hitching and time saving appliances used and the horses kept all the time in the halls. Let other horses do general city work, the protection of valuable property from fire demands that not an instant be lost in waiting for horses which are drawing gravel outside. It is false economy. The expense would be saved in a single fire. Is property safe when five minutes or more is consumed in getting an engine from its hall? I think this is a matter deserving of as much attention as insurance rates.

Yours &c.

INSURANCE AGENT.

SPORTING NEWS.

The trotter Clingstone, record 2:14, is at work again, and is rapidly recovering from his lameness.

A fight between a bull dog and a wild cat took place at Cannelton, W. Va., Saturday. The cat won in two minutes.

Australian papers of July 1st, say that after his race with Beach, Hanlan was under engagement to proceed to Adelaide in November.

The recent lacrosse match between Peterboro' and Orillia is said to have been a disgraceful affair from the interference of the crowd, and the "slugging" of the Peterboros.

Jay Eye See was given two exhibition heats at New York Saturday, making the first in 2:22½ and the second in 2:20. A private exhibition was given in Prospect Park yesterday.

Jabesh Snow, Gunning Cove, N.S., writes: "I was completely prostrated with the asthma, but hearing of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, I procured a bottle, and it done me so much good that I got another, and before it was used I was well. My son was cured of a bad cold by the use of half a bottle. It goes like wildfire, and makes cures wherever it is used."

THE SPEEDY SPRINTERS.

Beasley is the favorite for both walking and long distance running.

Wetherston, who will enter for the walk, has done his two English miles in 18 minutes.

In order that the record may be beaten to-morrow evening it will be well to know that the best recorded half mile amateur sprinting in the world is 1:55 2-5 seconds, which was done recently by Myers, beating all English records. Harry Wallace expects to knock off the two-fifths.

Whitelaw wants the band to play quick music when he's running.

Kenny wonders if the lacrosse club wont add to the collection of cups over these races.

If any of these fast barbers enter they will be given the pole.

A BLACK SHEEP.

AN OSCULATING SALVATIONIST KICKED OUT OF A MAN'S HOUSE.

A Wilkesbarre, Pa., despatch states:—Edward Lonkdale, a member of the Salvation Army, called at houses and stated that by applying a plaster he could, with the aid of earnest prayer, remove spots, pimples, &c., from the skin. At the house of J. N. Keelper he was allowed to try his skill upon Mrs. Keelper, and no one being in the room he attempted undue liberties with Mrs. Leelper. Mr. Keelper happened to be in the next room and, catching the fellow attempting to kiss his wife, beat and kicked him out of the house. He then had the Salvation soldier arrested and in default of a fine he was sent to gaol. His pockets were filled with copies of the War Cry.

WITHOUT A PARALLEL.

A GIRL WHO HAS LIVED 163 DAYS WITHOUT FOOD.

Miss Kate Smulsy, of Fort Plain, N. Y., who has gone without food for 163 days, was very low at last reports but still conscious and talking. Miss Smuley was a dress maker, and, when able to work had plenty to do. She is 20 years of age, and was naturally bright and intelligent. Two years ago last July she was taken ill. There is no denial of the fact that for 163 days she has not tasted food, and that for eight weeks she has not swallowed. Her case stands without parallel. Dr. Zoller, attending physician says she looks as though she had normal dropsy. Dr. Ayers thinks it a peculiar form of St. Vitus' dance.

Fort Plain, N.Y., Aug. 25.—Kate Smulsley, the faster, was in a sinking condition Saturday night. She has been able to talk faintly.

THE CORNWALL CRIMES.

PILLAR GETS TWENTY YEARS—THE OTHER CASES.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—James Pillar, who pleaded guilty to the various indictments for felonies and conspiracies against him in connection with the Cornwall scandals at Dublin, was sentenced Saturday to twenty years' penal servitude. The jury were unable to agree to a verdict in the case of ex Secretary Cornwall and Capt. Kirwan, who were tried jointly on an indictment for 'conspiracy and soliciting.' The second trial of this case was postponed to the next commission, and the prisoners were set at liberty on providing suitable bail.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA CORRECTED.

Ottawa Sun.

Oh, yes, it's all very fine to expect a puff for nothing in the paper. Does it ever strike you that it takes money to run a newspaper? That there's a terrible fighting editor to pay: that there are hard working reporters to pay; that the patient printer who sets up the free puff you ask for has to be paid; that printer's ink and massive machinery, and paper to print on and telegraph bills, and mail clerks, and carriers, and canvasser, must be paid for. 'But it will do to fill up the paper.' you say. That is an ignorant and delusive idea, for there's good stuff in the way of news, (which would far more interest the public to read than about your hen egg, or horse, or concert, or picnic, or any other private concern) which has to be left out of the paper every day for want of room in its crowded columns.

Why suffer from weak nerves, want of appetite, and general debility? letting the loss of sleep and rest impoverish the system and thin the blood, when such a really meritorious remedy as Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine may be had at any drug store. This article is recommended by the highest members of the medical faculty in cases of indigestion, general debility, loss of appetite, and nervous affections of all kinds. It is also specially beneficial to children and delicate females, and to business men, students, and those who have much brain work. We would say, Never be without it. It will strengthen you, keep your system in regular order, and enable you to obtain? successfully grapple with the work you have to do. It is pleasant to the taste, and contains nothing injurious to the most delicate constitution. Remember to ask for the Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman Toronto, and we are sure you will be satisfied that you have full value for your money. Druggists sell

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

TO THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, WEAK LUNGS AND CONSUMPTION.

My motive is not one of money only, but for science and the good of suffering humanity.

To convince the public and press to the sceptical that the Spirometer is the best instrument ever invented for the treatment of diseases of the air passages, and that it is all I have ever claimed for it, anyone suffering from the above named diseases who call at the Dafoe House, Wednesday or Thursday, August the 27th or 28th, 1884, and consult the surgeons of the International Throat and Lung Institute, will be given a spirometer free the medicines alone to be paid for. I do this to show the confidence I have in the treatment, and to convince the medical profession and others who are still sceptical (notwithstanding the thousands of people who have been cured by it) that the Spirometer I have invented and the medicines and treatment prescribed by the surgeons of the International Throat and Lung Institute are curing and will cure a larger percentage of these diseases than any other treatment in the world.

If impossible to call upon the surgeons during their visit to your city, write for International News and List of Questions.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS: THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-uscitate, They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'Still,' murmured Pauline, pleadingly, more anxious for the Creole than the latter seemed for herself, 'If the other is safest, why for a little delay, run any risk?'

'Do not ask me please,' rejoined Juliette, evading a question she dared not answer.

She added, with an abrupt laugh—

'You know I am sadly wilful at times, dear; so bear with me.'

Here however she could not help saying, as she dropped her voice.

'I have my reasons.'

Pauline regarded her curiously.

The Creole's meaning was not to be read upon her features.

She merely gave another laugh and turned her horse's head towards the road on the right.

'Come, Pauline,' she said: 'trust in me.'

But another voice now joined in the dispute—Keziah's

'Missy Julie,' she said, 'look at that thar big, black, obstinate nigger.'

'What of him?' asked the Creole, turning her head.

There was no need of reply.

Yick's position was sufficient to answer for itself

The negro had flung the reins on the horse's neck, and composedly drumming its sides with his bare heels, was leisurely filling a pipe with tobacco, a luxury he renounced all others for in his hours of idleness.

'Why don't you obey?' demanded Juliette, angryly, her olive cheek reddening.

'No, missy, Yick not coming dat road, he rejoined with perfect coolness.

'No! How dare you refuse?'

'How dare dis child, missy? 'Cause dat ain't the road you can take; its dangerous. You, missy, were put under Yick's care, and Yick will take care of you safe if you'll let him, and go de right way; if not, Yick throws up the sponsibility, and don't budge an inch.'

The Creole's eyes flashed with indignation.

How was she to act?

Her pride resented yielding to the negro yet without him she was helpless being ignorant of the road.

At the moment, Pauline bending nearer, whispered—

'Dear Juliette, what is the meaning of this? Why do you resist? Do you suspect this man? Do you believe him treacherous? Surely David Ringsoole would never have intrusted us to any one upon whom he knew he could not confidently rely.,

The name of the overseer recalled the Creole to her position,

At any cost, she dared not betray the nature of her suspicions to her half sister.

Would not her present strange behanior create doubt in Pauline's mind of her when it was discovered who had organized their escape?

She took but a second to reflect then anwered—

'Why, because I think we could go a quicker route and save time. No, Pauline I do not doubt; of course the man is true, only as Keziah says, obstinate.'

'But he says this to the left is the safest.'

'Tush! he is unnecessary careful.' remarked the Creole, with assumed petulance. 'But we are in his power, or though I am sure this it the directest route, we could not travel without a guide.'

Yick had apparently been smoking with the utmost indifference, but the dark, negro eyes had not lost a change in the Creole's features.

Now he gathered up the reins, dug his heels into the horse's ribs and advanced a few paces.

'Missy is right,' he remarked rather more respectfully. Dat is de shortest, as de crow flies; but we ain't crows, and der is a great big morass, and after dat a turn of the Sarakow, which makes de road go so, and so.'

And the negro described a rapid detour in the air with his bony finger.

'Yick knows de road well, and thar ain't any place for de missy to sleep—no ranch, no settlement.'

'What do you think, Juliette?' whispered Pauline.

'That probably he is correct,' responded the Creole, after a pause. 'At any rate, we must do what he orders' especially as he holds out the prospect of shelter and refreshment. The extra time after all, is so small as to be of little moment.'

So she spoke, but all the above had only strengthened her suspicion.

Speaking louder she notified her intention to go the road to the left.

Yick made no sign of exultation at his triumph. Merely inclining his head, he turned his horse and rode on.

The sisters followed.

Juliette was more thoughtful than ever.

The day was declining when they entered the sparse trees which formed the commencement of a mighty forest, the growth of which was so rapid that the trunks ran sheer up, straight and unbroken by branches until near the top,

They did not penitrate far; the path they traversed doubling back again into the vast savannah. It was here that Juliette received a shock and had her doubts confirmed

ADVERSSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it.'—THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop, or "Hops" in their name.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY;

is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.s. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL.

THE WAY OF THE RAIN.

I heard an old farmer talk one day,
Telling his listeners how
In the wide new country far away
The rainfall follows the plough.

"As fast as they break it up, you see,
And turn the heart to the sun,
As they open the furrows deep and free,
And the tillage is begun.

"The earth grows mellow, and more and more
It holds and sends to the sky
A moisture it never had before,
When its face was hard and dry.

"And so, wherever the ploughshares run
The clouds run overhead,
And the soil that works and lets in the sun
With water is always fed.

I wodner if that old farmer knew
The half of his simple word,
Or guessed the message that, heavenly true,
Within it was hidden and heard

It fell on my ear by chance that day,
But the gladness lingers now,
To think it is always God's dear way
That the rainfall follows the plough.

—S. D. T. Whitney.

HIS OWN LITTLE GIRL.

A FARMER SHOOTS A BEAR WHICH DEVOURED HIS DAUGHTER.

A Shrewsbury, Que., despatch says:—A Frenchman living in the parish of St. Marguerite, on leaving home in the morning, a few days ago, told his wife to send him his noon dinner, as he was going to a distant part of the farm to work. After waiting until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he shouldered his gun and started for home, and in a piece of woods of about eleven acres, between where he was working and his home, he saw a large bear busily engaged in eating something, but the bear did not see or hear the man's approach. The Frenchman's gun had two balls in it, which he fired into bruin, killing him instantly. He then approached and made an examination, when he found to his horror and grief that it was his own little daughter of about 12 years of age that the bear had killed and eaten, there being nothing left whereby he could recognize her but the hand which had hold of the expected dinner. The afflicted family have the sympathy of their neighbors in their sad bereavement.

A NOBLE RIVER.

The Sport an American publication speaks thus of the river St. Lawrence "No other river I imagine carries such a volume of pure cold water to the sea. Nearly all its feeders are trout and salmon streams and what an airing and bleaching it gets on its course. Its history, its antecedents are unparalelled. The great lakes are its camping grounds; here its hosts repose under the sun and stars in areas like that of States and kingdoms. and it is its waters that shake the earth at Niagara. Where it reaches the Saguenay it is twenty miles wide, and where it debouches into the Gulf it is a hundred. Indeed it is a chain of Homeric sublimities from beginning to end, The great cataract is a fit sequel to the great lakes; the spirit that is born in vast and tempestuous Superior takes its full glut of power in the fearful chasm. If paradise is hinted in the Thousand Islands, hell is unveiled in that pit of terrors.'

FEDERAL BANK.

The Federal bank's statement of assets and liabilities which appears in the last official Canadian Gazette, exhibits a better showing than was generally expected. From the figures given it appears that there is still a surplus of $4,585,000 of assets, equal to $85,000 in excess of the "share capital" and "rest." Since June 1 the amount under discount has been reduced by the sum of $1,705,912, and the banks liabilities retired to the extent of $3, 720,100; and seeing that the reduction in its indebtedness has been achieved out of its own resources, with the exception of $790.000 borrowed from other banks, it it may be fairly claimed that that the handling of affairs displays good management, and the large amount of deposits still on hand would further show that the public have restored in great measure their confidence to the bank,

MANUFACTURERS COMBINING,

TROY, Aug 25.—The executive committee of the Knit-goods association has sent a circular to the manufactories of knitted underwear in the United States, announcing a meeting to be held at Saratoga Sept. 2, to consider a plan to control the production and strengthen the market, and if 90 per cent. of the whole industry conclude to organize for their mutual protection, to perfect the organization.

HER 103D BIRTHDAY.

POLSON'S NERVILINE

Hundreds who have experienced the wonderful power of Nerviline in subduing pain have testified that it is the most potent remedy in existence. Nerviline is equally efficacious as an internal or external remedy. Polson's Nerviline cures flatulence, chills, spasms, cholera, cramps, headache, sea sickness, summer complaints, &c. Nerviline is sold by all druggists and country dealers. Only 25 cents a bottle Try it.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE;

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public, and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition, and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE PROVINCIAL Board of Health is now issuing the Bulletin as a monthly instead of a weekly report.

* * *

SOME FEW papers seem very much annoyed that a Liberal constituency, West Ontario, returned a Liberal.

* * *

UNDER the heading "Criminals in Canada," a western paper records 11,509 convictions for drunkenness. Is drunkenness a crime?

* * *

LENNOX election for the Legislature takes place on Thursday. The indications are that Mr. Hawley will defeat both Mr. Blackstock and his money bags.

* * *

EX SENATOR GRADY, of Tammany Hall, who opposed the nomination of Gov. Cleveland at Chicago, has withdrawn from the Democratic State Committee.

* * *

THE DISTRICT Assembly of the Knights of Labor, Hamilton, has issued a circular to the various trades-unions calling for a mass meeting of workers to express their indignation against the present Government's policy of assisted Chinese emigration.

* * *

THE municipal board of Rat Portage in an address presented to Hon. Alex. Mackenzie refer to his honesty of purpose, integrity of character and distinguished services, and adds, "your visit will be felt for good on all matters affecting our interest in the councils of the nation."

* * *

MR. CHAS. H. TUPPER, M. P. for Pictou, charges the Government of the Dominion with having arranged the duties upon molasses to suit certain parties in Halifax engaged in the business of refining, upon condition that they would support Mr. Stairs, the Government candidate for the city, and secure his return without opposition.

* * *

IT IS THE FACT that with the increase of hard times the Government Savings Bank deposits increase as the following table shows:

	Total deposit.
1881	$ 6,208,226
1882	9,473,771
1883	11,976,237
1884	13,483,986

The figures were once used by Sir Leonard Tilley to prove that times were extra good but that was merely on a par with his other arguments.

* * *

THAT the Tilley tariff of high taxation is an inequitable one, not even protecting where it was meant to protect, is evident from the conclusion of the memorial from the millers endorsed by the Toronto Board of Trade and reading as follows:—'Therefore your memorialists humbly pray that you would seriously consider the great injustice suffered during the past year by the large manufacturing interest in the Dominion of Canada," meaning the milling interest.

* * *

MR. MACKENZIE, now in the Northwest, praises the enterprise of the C. P. R. and all the Tory organs shout and howl and say how do you like that? Why? Because they are sure that a Tory politician in his place would have lied about it at all hazards for fancied political advantage. But no one objects to admire railway push and enterprise. At the same time admiration of enterprise does not involve endorsation of a score of other features connected with the work. Mr. Mackenzie's opinion of the railway policy of the Government in the Northwest may be easily found in the debates of Parliament.

* * *

SPEAKING of the kick of the millers against the tariff the Montreal Herald says:—"Nothing less than double or treble the present duty on flour will suffice at times to exclude United States flour, and this special tax consumers will not submit to. The whole question will have to be disposed of under a new Reciprocity Treaty, and the sooner people on both sides of the line understand that a permanent settlement can only come through liberal treaty arrangements the better." If double or treble the present duty is necessary why not impose it? The consumer would have to submit, and the principle of the thing had better be carried out.

THE MONTREAL COUNCIL having resolved that the police should be able to speak both French and English, a list has been prepared by Chief Paradis of the members of the force, showing their ability as linguists. It is found that out of the sixteen English and Irish sergeants, only seven speak French while all the French Canadian sergeants speak English. Of the 216 constables on the force half are French, and the remainder English and Irish. Only five of the 108 Frenchmen are unable to speak English, while of the other half of the force only 24 are able to speak French. This leaves a large average in favor of the French Canadian in the matter of language.

MR. HENRY MARSHALL, Reeve of Dunn, writes: "Some time ago I got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery from Mr. Harrison, and I consider it the very best medicine extant for Dyspepsia." This medicine is making marvellous cures in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, etc., in purifying the blood and restoring manhood to full vigor.

CAMP MEETING ROW.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25.—At a colored camp meeting near Princess Anne yesterday Hamden Beavens and Milton Wilson quarrelled about whiskey. Wilson struck Beavens on the head with a stick fatally wounding him. Beavens' brother interfered and was stabbed and killed by Wilson who escaped. The camp meeting broke up.

FRANCO-CHINESE WAR.

More Fighting Yesterday to be Continued.

DESTRUCTION OF FOO-CHOW ARSENAL

PARIS, Aug. 25.—A despatch from Havre states that General Millot has taken necessary measures for repelling the expected Chinese invasion of Tonquin. It is rumored in Paris that China has made a formal declaration of war and notified the powers to that effect. The French papers are indignant at the statement made by the London Times respecting the bombardment of Foo Chow.

TIEN TSIN, Aug. 25.—The French charged d'affairs has departed, the acting consul remains.

PARIS Aug. 25.—The republique Francaise says that France will soon seize and retain such territory in China as is useful to her.

Chang Pei Lun will lead the Chinese against the French.

FOO CHOW, Aug. 25.—The French ironclad entered the mouth of the river this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The White fort opened fire with Krupp cannon, while the ships were three miles away.' After an hour's engagement the French retired. The Chinese fire was good.

PARIS, Aug. 25.—Le France says that the Chinese forseeing the bombardment of Foo Chow, stripped the arsenal of portable valuables. The French are making coaling stations of Pondicherry and Mahe.

SHANGHAI, Aug 25.—The arsenal at Foo Chow is in ruins. Eighteen hundred workmen are out of employment. The arsenal cost 42,000,000 francs, and the arms and ammunition destroyed are valued at 140,000,000.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—It is reported that during the bombardment of Foo Chow a French officer of high rank was killed. Only three Chinese gunboats were destroyed.

FOO CHOW, Aug 25.—During the engagement this afternoon a French Ironclad was struck and badly damaged. She will repair during the night. The French will recommence firing at three o'clock in the morning.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The war between France and China has led to an increase in business at Lloyd's and various other insurance offices.

HONG KONG, Aug. 25.—The Chinese who were wholly unprepared for war, denounce the malpractices of the provincial governors, and will hold them answerable for any collapses of the national defences. The French are elated at the display of Chinese pugnacity, because it will conduce to protracted hostilities, in which case only the capture of Pekin will effectually end the war. Night traffic on the Canton river is prohibited.

HUMBUG SPECIALS.

About the greatest fraud going in the journalistic line at the present time is the Mail's alleged special cable service. We showed a short time ago that its 'special cable despatch about Lord Claude Hamilton's death was made up on this side of the ocean by some one totally ignorant of English matters. About every day since then there has been some new exposure of the nature of the despatches. On Saturday the Mail published a long 'special' about the mail service between England and New York. Nearly the whole of this 'special cable despatch' can be found almost word forword in the London Times of Aug. 12, which arrived in this city on Friday night and in New York on Thursday night. If the Mail had any character to lose such a palpable fraud as this would destroy it.—Toronto World.

COULD NOT CHECK IT.

The Toronto Telegram says: 'Lieut. Mary Brock, Salvation Army, Heaven is my Home,' was the inscription emblazoned on the brass plate fastened on an enormous Saratoga which the Grand Trunk baggage handlers had to wrestle with. The Grand Trunk baggage master reported that he could check the piece to no such station and consigned it to the care of the C. P. R. baggage master.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A Head Master Jealously Shoots a Lady Teacher,

AND THEN COMMITS SUICIDE.

MARKDALE, Aug. 25.—About eleven o'clock this morning, when the school was dismissed for intermission, Mr. Norris, head teacher of Markdale school, county Grey, shot Miss Ford, second teacher. Three shots took effect, one in the face below the cheek bone and two in the side of the head. Those in the head glanced off the skull and out again; the one in the face is still lodged in at the side of the upper maxilla. He then shot himself, the ball entering the skull over the right eye, and lodging somewhere in the brain. Mr. Norris expired in about an hour. Miss Ford, although very low, is quite conscious, and hopes are entertained of her recovery.

This morning the teachers were all on duty as usual. At the forenoon intermission Norris went from his room into the room of Miss Ford and they were engaged in conversation for over half an hour, when Miss Ford gradually approached her desk, while leaning with her elbow on the desk and her hand on her face Norris approached the other side of the desk. He then asked her to marry him, and she refused. He then drew a revolver from his pocket and fired at her, the ball going between her fingers and into her face. She immediately dodged down under the desk, when he caught her by the arm with his left hand and dragged her out and fired two more shots, which struck her in the head as before stated. She then ran out screaming, and ran to the first dwelling, about one hundred yards. Doctors Sproule of Markdale, and Barnhart, of Owen Sound, are attending the young lady and up to the present time have not extracted the ball which entered her face. She lies in very weak condition, having lost a very large quantity of blood. Norris before moving from the place where he shot her, fired one shot at himself, the ball entering his right temple. He dropped to the floor insensible, never a [illegible], and died about an hour afterwards. Two or three children were in the room during the time of the tragedy. Miss Ford is an extempary young lady, under twenty years of age.

The following official statement relative to the recent reports of the treatment of the dead of the Greely expedition was obtained from Commander Schley:

"From the relations made by exhuming some of the bodies, inferrences have been drawn that incisions have been made in all the bodies, and that portions of the flesh had been used either for food or for bait for catching shrimps. The following is an authentic extract from Commander Schley's report now being prepared:

"In preparing the bodies of the dead for transportation in alcohol to St. Johns, it was found that six of them (Lieut. Kislingbury, Sergeant Jewell, Private Whistler, Private Henry, Privtte Ellis, and sergeant Ralston) had been cut and the fleshy parts removed to a greater or less extent, All the other bodies were intact."

CYTER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1881.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

FOR GORDON'S RELIEF.

Seven Hundred Canadians to Join the Expedition.

GEN. WOLSELEY WANTS THEM.

OTTAWA, Aug. 25.—His Excellency the Governor General has received instructions from the Imperial War Office to furnish 700 voyageurs to go up the Nile to the relief of General Gordon at Khartoum. Lord Wolseley's experience in the Red River expedition leads him to believe that our Canadian canoe men are just the men to lead the relief expedition. The engagement of the volunteers for this service has been entrusted by Lord Lansdowne to Mr. J. T. Lambert, lumber agent, of this city, who had already had a number of offers from persons willing to go to Egypt.

THE CLASS OF MEN REQUIRED

are those who have been engaged in running timber on Canadian rivers. They will be needed in taking the flat bottomed boats up the Nile and making portages around the rapids. Lord Melgund is awaiting instructions from the Governor-General before issuing an advertisement calling for volunteers. The men will be required to sail from Quebec about the 14th of September, so as to reach England in time to join the Gordon relief expedition, which leaves about the first of October. It is expected that three months will be occupied in the trip and that the cost of each boatman sent from Canada will be about $700 in addition to passage money, clothing, food, equipment, &c. An effort will be made to get qualified foremen

TO ACCOMPANY THE VOYAGEURS,

so that there will be no necessity for placing them under military discipline. It is proposed to take 300 men from the Ottawa district, and 300 men from the Quebec and St. Maurice regions. Some Indians will be accepted. Leading lumber merchants here say they think there will be be no difficulty in getting the number of men provided the inducement offered is sufficient, because lumbering is very dull now, and many young men without families would regard a three or four months' voyage to Egypt merely as a good holiday trip. Lord Lansdowne has consulted with a number of Quebec timber merchants, who also think that no difficulty will be experienced in carrying out the scheme.

MURRAY CANAL

HANLAN'S DEFEAT.

THE WORLD'S CHAMPION EXHAUSTED—ROWING AT A TERRIFIC RATE,

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—The first despatches giving particulars of the races in Australia are to hand. The race was well contested for two miles, both oarsmen making a desperate struggle for the end, Amid the wildest enthusiasm and tremendous cheering Hanlan for a few seconds appeared to shorted his stroke and at the same time Beech gained the lead, Hanlan pulled hard and vigorously to close the gap, but Beech who was rowing in splendid form, appeared to have more strength than the American, and he continued to widen the gap. Hanlan tried all he knew to deep up with Beech, and the pace was terrific for half a mile, when Hanlan showed signs of exhaustion, Beech kept the lead and won easily at six lengths. The scene at the finish beggars description. Cheer after cheer bame from thousands of throats, flags were waved, and on Beech reaching his boat he was carried to his boathouse amid cheers given for the champion oarsman of the world. Beech is 5 feet 11 inches in height, and weighs 170 pounds. He has made the fastest time ever rowed over the paramatta championship course (which is three miles 330 yards in length), 20 min, 44s. Hanlan was a heavy favorite at 7 to 4, owing to the fact that he had easily defeated Elias C. Laycock since his arrival.

Jabesh Snow, Gunning Cove, N S,, writes: "I was completely prostrated with the asthma, but hearing of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, I procured a bottle, and it done me so much good that I got another, and before it was used I was well. My son was cured of a bad cold by the use of half a bottle. It goes like wildfire, and makes cures wherever it is used."

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY

The Baking Powder War.

The Royal Baking Powder Company is still making enemies among those who are manufacturing and selling impure articles for leavening purposes (and their name is legion), and this fact shows that it is continuing its vigorous work in the interests of the public.

This Company set out some time ago to expose the character, and so far as possible, to break up the sale of adulterated baking powders. Having found from an examination of a number of specimens procured from grocers that they were generally of an inferior character, some devoid of all leavening properties, and many of them actually poisonous, it brought the matter before the public, denounced the makers by name in the press and to the health authorities.

The affair was soon taken up by physicians, Boards of Health, and Legislatures throughout the country: chemists were employed to make scientific tests of the various powders in the market, and the Government itself directed analyses to be made before it would purchase the supplies needed for army, navy and Indian uses.

The results more than justified the charges so boldly made by the Royal Company. Not only were the majority of baking powders in the market found to be largely adulterated, but many of them were ascertained to contain lime, alum, and other poisonous ingredients to such an extent as to render them positively unsafe for use in human food. The information spread throughout the country and created a profound sensation. As a result many of these injurious mixtures were driven out of the market, and the sale of all of them seriously interfered with.

No occurrence of recent date has been so far-reaching as this in its beneficial influence upon the public health, and the action of the Royal Baking Powder Company in the inauguration of such a warfare, and in carrying it forward with such important results, were universally commented upon and appreciated. In making the charges they did not hesitate to enter into competition with every other baking powder in the country, and it is a public satisfaction that in all the tests and analyses made the Royal Baking Powder was placed at the head of the list and declared by Boards of Health and by the Government chemists, Drs. Mott and Love, to be superior of all others in strength, and absolutely pure and free from all inferior substances.

In continuing this warfare against the adulterated food, more particularly the alum, lime, and otherwise impure and inferior baking powders which unscrupulous manufactures are endeavering to force upon the market in this locality, the Royal will no doubt meet with the old-time opposition and abuse. We are confident, however, that the public will appreciate, as heretofore, both the object of the "stop thief" cry and the work of the Royal Company in its attempts to protect it and to rid the market of these dangerous articles of food.

The Montreal Post is rather hard on Morgan and Westbrook, of whom it speaks as follows: 'These are the two men who are to make a match for the bicycle championship, (professional), of Canada. One of them cannot ride fast enough to keep himself warm, and the other has been beaten handily by the amateurs of this city. The race was fixed for to-morrow, the 27th.

George M. Hendee is said to predict that the one-mile will be wheeled over to the Springfield tournament in 2:44 or less. This would beat Hendee's best time, 2:50 2 5, and, considering the difference in the track, would be equal to the best record time in England. As Hendee has made a mile in 2:45, and is believed capable of doing it in 2:40, his prediction may not be far out of the way says the Boston Globe.

The Canadian Wheelman for August contains an account of the Belleville Ramblers' Tournament on the 18th, an attention which will be appreciated. Notwithstanding the local interest in this number it is certainly not a good one. The news of Canadian and the world's wheeling at the most active period is conspicuous by its absence. It is therefore satisfactory to all of us who want to see a good Canadian journal, to note that in future this publication will be managed by a company called the "Canadian Wheelman Coy.," consisting of 24 prominent Canadian wheelmen. It is intended to enter upon the second volume next month enlarged and improved, printed on toned paper from new and handsome type, and issued monthly through the winter and semi monthly during summer. With these promises fulfilled the paper will be worthy the support of Canadian cyclists, and it is hoped will receive it abundantly. London will remain the place of publication.

SPORTING NEWS.

Financial Condition of the Oka Lacrosse Club.

LATEST NEWS NOTES.

At an adjourned meeting of the Oka Lacrosse Club last evening, the Vice-President in the chair, Secretary-Treasurer Burdett submitted a financial statement showing the position of the club. The expenditure for the season amounted to $142 50, and the receipts showed a balance in favor of the club of some few dollars. There is, however, a small outstanding liability on account of the play ground, the precise amount of which has to be ascertained, a committee being appointed for that purpose. It was thought adviseable to separate the joint offices of Secy.-Treas., and Mr. W. Henderson was unanimously appointed Treasurer. Arrangements were advanced for pending matches and various committees appointed, which will report at a meeting on Friday next. The meeting was well attended, about twenty members being present, and it was satisfactory to note the interest maintained in the club which is determined to win lasting laurels before the season closes. The best part of the season for lacrosse playing has yet to come.

CHEESE MARKET.

New York Bulletin.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Cheese has had a bad week. Indeed, for this time of the year, matters were in a worse state than we have seen them for a great many seasons, and to put it as mildly as possible the market is in a decidedly disjointed condition. The close is flat, tame and to a great extent nominal, with the probability that 33⅓ @ 50 per cent of the export will be consigned. Indeed, there was nothing that could be called a regular market, and it is simply useless to claim any positive basis for valuation. Some few buyers were in attendance, but the prices they paid were simply a matter of courtesy in some cases, and in others the necessity of sellers in reducing the asking rate. We have heard of goods passed at 10c, but for business over the tryer 9¾c is a positive extreme at the close, with 9½c about all that seems to be shown on any bid, and sales made at 9½c on which the buyer claims to have obtained as good quality as the highest priced stood changing hands. Real perfection, however, is something of a rarity, as nearly every lot at hand is more or less touched with the heat, and in some cases the condition is very bad, affording additional excuse for standing off on the part of buyers, though the evidences are that, good or bad, the stock would have received pretty much the same neglect. Orders from abroad are few and far between, the cable continues to weaken, and sellers have literally been without an opportunity for placing their stock. To overcome the difficulties, cold storage and direct consignment are still resorted to, and it is believed that nearly half the exports this week will go out on receiver's account. Private advices from abroad are very tame and in Canada recent speculative buyers are said to be making an effort to sell out.

SUNDAY IN KINGSTON.

There is a great kick in Kingston over the prosecution of the barbers for Sunday shaving. The tonsorial artists demand that all engaged in secular work on the Sabbath be prosecuted, including the reporter who takes the sermon. The milk vendors it is reported are to be brought to the police court for selling milk on Sundays. If this is the case it would occur to an outsider that the men who are now running the city of Kingston have been drafted from Rockwood Lunatic Asylum. Will it be said that ice should not be delivered on Sunday or a steamer which has met with an accident repaired? To hold that a man shall not be shaved on Sunday is as consistent as to hold that the hotel boy shall not black the boots that morning.

CITY COUNCIL.

Reappointment of Tax Collectors—The Sinking Fund.

After a long holiday the city council met last night and rushed through with the work of the session in a business like style.

Ald. Dickson's letters with reference to the Sinking Fund were read and referred He suggested the apointment of a Committee to meet him and discuss the matter. The result of such a conference in his judgment would possibly save the costs of a suit, but the Council naturally declined to comply with his request, and Ald. J. W. Johnson expressed his willingness to discuss the merits of the case if the other Aldermen were desirous of so doing, but the feeling prevailed that no discussion should take place then. As Mr. Dickson threatened to prosecute the case it was decided when the Council adjourned to do so for one week only.

A by-law reappointing Messrs. D. Ockerman and J. Ross tax collectors, was passed and $100 voted to the Women's Christian Association.

Ald. Diamond moved and Ald Tickell seconded that the Street Surveyor furnish a statement showing the amount so far expended in the Public Works department and when, also estimate of lumber and nails required for balance of season. This was carried.

On motion of Ald. Cooper, seconded by Ald. Biggar, Chief Engineer, Campbell, was requested to furnish the council with the number of fire stands required.

The resolution of Ald. Hanley, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the Street Surveyor visit St. Catharines and Dundas with a view of ascertaining the cost and other information necessary in respect to cement and other sidewalks, provoked considerable discussion, and was finally lost.

Ald. J. W. Johnson gave notice of motion instructing the Executive Committee to take steps to invest the sinking fund, now on deposit in the bank, in such securities in accordance with the statute as they may deem best in the interest of the city.

ONTARIO LICENSES.

FOUR DOMINION LICENSEES FINED FOR ILLICIT SELLING.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 26.—At the Police Court yesterday morning the adjourned liquor licenses case brought up the Ontario authorities against Messrs. Croombe, Elliott, and Pearson, three hotelkeepers holding Dominion licenses for illegal selling, came up for hearing. The Police Magistrate strated that until the Supreme Court settled the present liquor license question the Ontario law in his opinion was in force. The three defendants, therefore, although they had Dominion licenses, he considered had been guilty of illegal selling, and he would fine them each $20 and costs. There is some talk of the decision being appealed.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-ustitate, They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances, The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

COMING!

The countries where Cholera prevails, as in India, China and Africa. Pain-Killer is considered the surest and safest of all known remedies, and natives place the most perfect reliance in it.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON,
Missionary to Swatow, China.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations. Ask for the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other. y 2nd&w

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Owing to the narrowness of the way, the party had to proceed Indian file; the Creole followed the negro, and lost in reverie her eyes were fixed before her, when she suddenly descried at a distance, stealing rapidly among the tall tree trunks, the figures of a horse and man.

They came and went like a flash.

But the vision had lasted long enough to enable her to recognise the equestrian, Stuart Loring.

Involuntary—why she knew not—the Creole would have urged her horse to a quicker pace but an obstacle appeared in her path.

Yick had suddenly brought his animal to a halt and was leisurely dismounting.

'What is the matter?' asked the Creole.

'Dis ole hoss has picked up a stone, dat am all, missy,' was the quiet rejoinder, as, kneeling, the speaker the speaker took the horse's hoof in his lap.

Juliette bit her lip. She said nothing; she however, read the truth.

Stuart Loring was ever near them; they had by accident followed too quickly on his steps. Yick had seen him as had she, and the stone in the hoof was only a ruse, to enable the American to disappear.

Five minutes elapsed before the guide remounted and they continued on their way.

In a short space they emerged upon the savannah.

The Creole cast a sharp glance round.

The rider was nowhere visible; he must still be in the forest.

Was it Stuart Loring?

The Creole did not doubt a second.

Two hours later after day had settled down, to Pauline's delight, a ranche the first they had seen came in sight.

'Is that where we are to sleep? Ask our guide, Juliette?' she exclaimed.

But Yick had overheard.

'Yes, missy, dat am de ranch. Bery nice pussons lib dar, missy. Dey will be bery glad to gib de ladies sleep and nice supper.

'What a blessing,' remarked Pauline, 'I am so glad, and am so—so tired.'

The Creole said nothing.

Something whispered her the period was drawing verry near when she would discover whether Stuart Loring was friend or foe, whether he had been disinterested in the assistance he had rendered, or whether she had fallen from one peril into another.

'If so, I am powerless,' she murmured, 'No,' she added her fingers again rising towards the silken bag concealed around her neck, 'not powerless; I am my own mistress while I possess this.'

CHAPTER XXX.

THE RANCHE—THE VEIL LIFTED.

Night, the night of the tropics had already descended before the party came in sight of the ranche.

It was a dwelling of plain construction, apparently built for use and defence during the period when raids from the Indians were not unfrequent. The walls thick, the windows small and narrow.

Slightly increasing his pace, Yick announced their presence by a rather discordant shout, only capable of issuing from negro lips.

The door of the ranche was immediately thrown wide, and in the opening appeared a man whose figure outlined by the light behind him, seemed colossal.

His sunburnt face would have made it difficult to declare his race but the bright, dark eyes black lank hair and style of features pronounced him Mexican.

Though gigantic, his form was lithe, and easy in movement, possessing also that of bearing upon which the blue-blooded hidalgo prides himself.

Untanned leather leggings, much worn, encased his lower limbs, while a scarf, not over-clean, was flung with some grace over his shoulder.

Riding forward, the negro addressed him in too low a tone for the others to overhear.

'The senoritas are welcome.' was the louder response. My dweelling is a poor one, but such shelter it affords is theirs.

Yick rejoining his party, imparted this intelligence.

'We can forget the poverty of the dwelling,' said Pauline, 'in the kindness of the welcome. Let us alight Juliette.'

Yick lending his assistance she sprang to the ground.

As he rendered the same service to the Creole, she said—

'If it is possible, we should like to go to the room destined for us at once; we are very tired. Besides we wish to start early in the morning.'

All shall be as missy desires,' responded the negro, whose manner now become very respectful.

Entering the ranche, the Mexican, Don Alba De Ventana with a courtesy that suited his picturesque attire and high-sounding appellation, conducted them to an underground floor, making the while many apologies for the rudeness of the accomodation in a hybrid language composed of Mexican and English.

The sisters as courteously responded, thanking him for his hospitalty, and hinting at their fatigue,

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

MORE IN THE MAN THAN IN THE LAND.

(Sidney Lanier in Southern Cultivator.)

I know a man, which he lived in Jones,
Which Jones is a county of red hills and stones,
And he lived pretty much by gettin' of loans,
And his mules were nothin' but skin and bones,
And his hogs was flat as the corn-bread pones,
And he had 'bout a thousand acres of land.

This man—which his name it was also Jones—
He swore that he'd leave them old red hills and stones,
For he couldn't make nuthin' but yellerish cotton,
And little 'o that, and his fence was rotten,
And what little corn he had, hit was boughten,
And danged if a living was in the land.

And the longer he swore the madder he got,
And he riz and he walked to the stable lot;
And he hollered to Tom to come thar and hitch,
For to emigrate somewhere whar land was rich,
And to quit raising cockburs, thistles and sich,
And a wastin' their time on the cussed land.

So him and Tom they hitched up the mules.
Pertestin' that folks was mighty big fools
That 'ud stay in Georgy their lifetime out,
Just scratchin' a livin' when all of 'em mought
Git places in Texas whar cotton would sprout
By the time you could plant in the land.

And he driv by a house whar a man named Brown
Was a livin' not far from the edge of town,
And he bantered Brown to buy his place,
And said that bein' as money was skase,
And bein' as sheriffs was hard o' face.
Two dollars an acre would git the land.

They closed at a dollar and fifty cents,
And Jones he bought him a wagin and tents,
And loaded his corn and his wimmin and truck,
And moved to Texas, which it tuck
His entire pile, with the best o' luck,
To git thar and git him a little land.

But Brown moved out on the old Jones farm,
And he rolled up his breeches and bared his arm
And he picked all the rocks from off'n the groun',
And he rooted it up and plowed it down;
Then he plowed his corn and his wheat in the land.

Five years glid by, and Brown, one day
(Which he'd got so fat that he wouldn't weigh)
Was a settin' down, sorter lazily,
To the bulliest dinner you ever see,
When one o' the children jumped up on his knee,
And says: "Yan's Jones, which you bought this land.

And there was Jones, standin' out at the fence,
And he hadn't no wagin', nor mules nor tents,
For he had left Texas afoot and cum
To Georgy to see if he couldn't get sum
Enjoyment, and he was lookin' as humble as ef
He had never owned any land.

But Brown he asked him in, and he sot
Him down to his vittles smokin' hot,
And when he had filled hisself and the floor
Brown looked at him sharp and riz and swore
That, "whether men's land was rich or poar,
Thar was more in the man than thar was in the land."

ACROSS THE BAY.

From our own Correspondent.

Rossmore, Aug. 24.—Farmers are vigorously commencing their fall ploughing preparatory to another harvest.

Our potato crop is above the average, corn is also likely to be fair.

Some early varieties of apples were sold here last week, at fair prices for shipment.

The busy threshing season has again commenced, and the hum of the machine and the lively whistle of the engine are to be heard.

Rev. Mr. Edmison, of the Rednersville circuit is likely to be well employed soon, as the matrimonial boom seems to have got hold of the young people of that vicinity.

Though our happy community is generally favored with good health, it has been visited with much sickness of late, especially in the vicinities of Rossmore and Rednersville.

A lawn social is to be held at the residence of Mr. G. Howell, on Wednesday evening, when a very pleasant time is expected. The proceeds are to be devoted to the support of the church.

The Massassaga Paint Sunday School held their annual pic-nic at the point on Wednesday last. It was largely attended from neighboring schools and pronounced a great success by all present.

ACCIDENT IN SIDNEY

From our own Correspondent.

Sidney Town Hall, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Stephen Miller and her daughter were returning home from Belleville on Saturday last, and, when opposite Mr. Wilmot Lane's residence, were met by a whirlwind which carried off a part of Mr. Lane's shed roof, and one of the sheathing boards was hurled against the top of the buggy and horse with such violence that horse, carriage and all were upset into the ditch. Miss Miller succeeded in regaining her feet before the horse did his, and with commendable courage kept the animal from struggling till her mother extricated herself from the wreck. Help was then got from Mr. Lane's, and Mrs. Miller was assisted to the house. Dr. Stevenson of Frankford, was summoned, and he found that Mrs. Miller's left collar bone was broken, and that she had sustained severe bruises on the head, right arm and back. Her many friends unite in wishing her a speedy recovery. Miss Miller, though considerably shaken up, escaped without serious injury.

Mr. William Boyd Hill, Cobourg, writes: Having used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for some years, I have much pleasure in testifying to its efficacy in relieving pains in the back and shoulders. I have also used it in cases of croup in children, and have found it to be all that you claim it to be.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition; and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

THE RATE OF TAXATION.

The city of Belleville with no water works, sewer or park system to maintain or contribute to, no large bonuses to manufacturing concerns to provide for, and with no public improvement of any moment under way should not be a municipality inflicted with heavy taxes. The year 1884 being a year of decidedly hard times, and the cost of living never before so high, it is not a favorable period for the collection of large taxes. The new system under which this year's assessment was made was calculated to raise more money with the old rate of taxation or the same amount of money with a less rate. These were arguments used in favor of a change in the system and the result shows that they were sound arguments. People naturally expected that with an increased assessment in personalty the general rate would be lowered and in troubled times the prospect was viewed with satisfaction.

The rate this year was struck at 15 mills on the dollar. The estimates did not provide any sum for deposit in Sinking Fund, a fund for the protection of the city's creditors. Now, although some level-headed members of the Council thought this rate was a little too low for general purposes and for the early portion of next year's expenditure no one was apprehensive of any great evil because nothing was added to the Sinking Fund. The practice of the Council for years had been to allow the fund to accumulate from back taxes and non-resident land taxes, resources that are still applied to this fund. There are $45,000 of non-resident land taxes and for the first time the city will this year be in a position to advertise these lands for sale.

On the whole we fancy that the wisest course has been pursued in not burdening the citizens in a hard year when a largely increased assessment enabled the Council to strike a low rate.

Since writing the above we have perused ex-Ald. Dickson's letter which appears in another column. The statement in it that our expenditure is increasing year by year out of proportion to the increase of assessable property may apply with a great deal of truth to the last three years during which Mr. Dickson directed municipal affairs—he will best know—, but it is not true of this year.

Mr. Dickson says the Chairman of Finance is not the Council. He thinks this very obvious but he knows as well as we do that as a rule the Chairman of Finance controls the Council in the same sense as the House of Commons is controlled by its chief member. So that in Mr. Dickson's own case the Chairman of Finance was the Council, or a majority of it. We did not err in saying that had the writ of mandamus now about to be applied for been taken out last year Ald. Dickson would have been the defendant. A child knows that the Corporation of the City of Belleville would have been endorsed on the writ, but the defence would have been directed by Ald. Dickson as Chairman of Finance whose policy it would have attacked. And a court now would undoubtedly take into consideration the fact that the plaintiff in the present suit would have been defendant in a similar suit last year, and to a great extent it must in equity estop Mr. Dickson from complaining. If one of the city's creditors complained the case would be a stronger one. But where this is not the case, where, on the contrary, the man who himself neglected to provide for Sinking Fund when he had the power, and is now complaining that his own precedent is followed, the court will be loth to interfere in the affairs of the municipality. There is no reason to suppose that had Mr. Dickson been in office this year he would have estimated for Sinking Fund any more than he did last year or the year before.

A tabulated statement of liabilities can always be used as a bugbear. Being of a serious nature they should not furnish material for intimidation and made to serve sinister ends. Several questions might be asked ex-Ald. Dickson. First, generally, why was not all this discussion about the general finances of the city brought on a year earlier? Were the same liabilities not in existence then? Were we in any better position then to wipe them out by means of the Sinking Fund? Did your financing place us in a better position to meet our liabilities? Why this sudden conviction that the city is going to the dogs? Is it because Mr. George D. Dickson is not at the helm? What is it that has suddenly made matters so much worse than they were last year? Was nomination day not the time to declare the neglect of Sinking Fund when the fact is that what is true of it now was true of it then? Did you think that your present proposition of imposing a rate of 20 mills would tend to hurt your election as Mayor? And do you think your present course will tend to hurt the reputation of the present Council to which you vainly sought access? Lastly, why did not you make your assertion, "my object is to benefit the ratepayers," read "my sole object is to benefit the ratepayers?"

We did not call Mr. Dickson "the devil," as he rashly asserts. The heading of the article was merely intended to illustrate the leading idea in it. We suppose it is because we have never applied harsh terms to the letter writer that he refers to a vocabulary of hard words. The only epithet applied to Mr. Dickson in the article which called forth his letter was "gentleman," and we are willing to retract that if it is considered too hard. We would not ourselves feel prompted to do so however.

Mr. Dickson as a lawyer sees a long way. In a heading placed over his former communication reading, "The wisdom of a cheese-paring policy questioned', he sees an endorsation of the views set forth in the letter. A good heading will display the chief features of an article, and we judge that the one in question fulfilled its purpose. But the opinion of this paper need not be sought for in head lines. As to the manner in which we will discuss affairs we would be sorry to be compelled to please ex-Ald. Dickson.

The ex-chairman of the Finance Committee would like to pose as one solicitous for the welfare of taxpayers. He would fain make the citizens believe that he would make the best custodian of their interests. But the citizens of Belleville have too great an experience of the Dickson regime, and hold those interests to be too important to entrust to the care of the Discredited and the Rejected.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Sir,—But for the unworthy motive you attribute to me, I would not ask your space. My object is to benefit the municipality and the ratepayers. Perhaps I am mistaken in the measures which I have and do still advocate for that purpose, but I believe the time is not far distant when property owners, large and small, particularly the latter, know and feel it. Indeed, they are feeling now the results of an opposite policy. I have always advocated a higher rate, not for the purpose of increasing our expenditure, but of reducing our liabilities and, in a short time, permanently reducing our rate. The expenditure is increasing year by year out of proportion, to increase of assessable property—the estimates are higher this year than last; I am very far from saying improperly so; and we are only estimating for the necessaries of municipal life.

Had the council of last year committed the mistake, in my judgment, of using the whole of the balance from previous years for last years expenditure, and struck a rate of 15 mills, as it could have, and as this year's council has done, I would have done then as I am doing now, applied to the court to increase the rate. And had 15 mills been imposed last year, there would have been no balance for this year, as there can be none comparatively for next, and had this year's council appropriated a portion only of the balance from last year to current expenditure, leaving the remainder to ease off future years, I should not have felt called upon to interfere.

The Chairman of Finance is not the council. The councils of 1880-1-2 and 3 did not adopt the estimates as submitted by the late Morgan Jellett or myself. The individual is of small consequence to the municipality; the financial policy is of great importance to the property owners and corporation.

You must, I think, have forgotten yourself for the moment when you informed your readers that if a mandamus had been applied for last year "Ald. Geo. D. Dickson would have been the defendant." The corporation of the City of Belleville alone can be the defendant in such a proceeding.

On the 4th of this month you were good enough to publish a letter of mine relating to the finances and to add me a heading in these words "Municipal Affairs; The wisdom of a Cheese Paring Policy Questioned" Apparently you were then in favor of a higher rate.

Sanitary science tells us that night soil, etc., continuously filtering into the ground from which drinking water is drawn, is the fruitful parent of fever epidemics, disease and death. Asiatic cholera has once visited Belleville. It is abroad now and may come again. Drainage and water works are necessary to keep a large place healthy—these improvements cannot be had without money. Until our financial position is improved we cannot think of them. The plain truth is we are so handicapped with debt that we cannot help ourselves.

I know that your vocabulary is well stored with hard words. Let me be "the devil" as you call me, or not, you will perhaps allow me to suggest that it would serve the interests of the municipality better if you would at the same time discuss the financial policy and the position on its merits. Municipal reform like political begets opposition and requires time.

Your obd't servant,
GEO. D. DICKSON.

INTO THE NORTHWEST.

Jottings on the Lakes to Duluth and Onward.

MAGNIFICENT LAKE STEAMER.

The Canada press excursion this month to Thunder Bay, Duluth and Yellowstone Park was an enjoyable trip. A member of THE ONTARIO staff who was one of the party, furnished an account of the excursion which will be read with interest in Belleville. Leaving Toronto on 1st August the party arrived at Sarnia at seven in the evening. Here they took the magnificent steamer United Empire, of the North West Transportation Company, Capt. Robinson, for their TOUR UP THE LAKES.

Of the superiority of this steamer as a sea-going vessel, of the beauty and perfection of its equipments, of the nautical skill and carefulness of its commander, of the uniform courtesy of its officials, it would be impossible to speak too highly. It is 260 feet long, by 36 wide, has 62 first-class staterooms, with sleeping accommodations in cabin and elsewhere for 250 passengers. The furniture and equipments are of the most elegant description, and the vessel is as much like a home in its appointments as any of our large ocean steamers. The engine is 1,500 horse power; and the great length and strength of the vessel enables it to ride steadily on the roughest sea. An illustration of this fact was seen on the upward passage, on Lake Superior on which occasion, though the waves were rolling "mountains high," there was comparatively little motion of the craft. The cabins are all carefully kept; while the table is quite equal to that of any first-class hotel in the country. The Messrs. Beatty have striven to make this the model vessel on the upper lakes; and they appear to have succeeded well. No liquor is sold on board. Capt. Robinson is one of the most skilful and careful commanders on the upper lakes; and the Company show their wisdom in placing him in his present position. A sufficient number of staterooms had been reserved by the party and by eleven o'clock they had committed themselves to the bosom of Lake Huron keeping the east shore, up the peninsula of Bruce, and calling, successively, at Goderich, Kincardine, and Southampton. At the two latter places addresses were presented; and the excursionists visited the towns, to examine the landing industries in each. At 5 o'clock on Saturday evening, Southampton was left behind; and the route lay Northwesterly across Lake Huron. All Saturday night was spent on the lake, the west shore of the Manitoulin being passed about 6 o'clock on Saturday morning. After this the North Channel was followed, the steamer running past Bruce Mines, on the main land, and Hilton, on St. Joseph's Island, in the St. Mary's River. The once flourishing copper mines at the former place have been for some years abandoned on account of the want of facilities for completing the process. But the

BEAUTY OF THE SCENERY

of this North Channel is worthy of a more glowing description than could be given in a hasty recital; and is of such a character as to be fully enjoyed and appreciated only by a personal visit. The ever-varying phases of land and waterscape, of lake, and strait, and island, and mountain, and rock, interspersed with here and there a fishing hamlet, or a rude attempt at tillage among the rocks, combine to make this one of the most charmingly picturesque little trips which can be found on this continent, and one in comparison with which even the beauties of the Thousand Islands must take second rank. This part of the route is nearly one hundred miles in length, and in its course the Grand Manitoulin, the Little Manitoulin, Drummond, St. Joseph's, and Sugar Islands are passed,—to say nothing of thousands of islets and rocks which stud the channel and rivers as though broken off from the larger ones, or rained down promiscuously to variegate and beautify the scene. Especially is the St. Mary's River below the rapids a most delightful sail, constitution as it does the outlet of Father of Lakes, and completing, in a most charming manner, a succession of beauties such as are only to be found in wild countries like this. The party reached Sault Ste. Marie, at the eastern end of Lake Superior, on Sunday, about one o'clock. Here are two fine villages,—one on the Canadian side, with about 1,000 inhabitants, and the other on the American, with about 2,000. The Canadain village is an important station at the head of the Huron and Georgian waters; and must with rich soil and the probability of its being made an important station on the Canada Pacific Railway, in a few years become a large and flourishing place. The rapids between the two villages have a descent of about 60 feet to a mile, and are very picturesque. The Indians glide down in their canoes, and even larger vessels have occasionally made the descent with safety. At Sault Ste. Marie on the American side is the Sault Ste. Marie canal, famous for the possession of what is said to be the largest lock in the world. It is a most magnificent work, being built of solid masonry, its length being 600 feet; its width 80 feet, the height of walls, 40 feet, the lift, 18 feet, and the depth of water in the basin, 16 feet. The cost was $2,000,000. This lock will accommodate the largest vessels which will ever be brought to these waters,—the large United Empire not occupying more than one fourth of its space. The canal is a mile and a quarter in length; and is notorious as being the place where, as our readers will remember, the Canadian troops were intercepted on their way to quell the Riel rebellion, at Fort Garry. At 5 o'clock on Sunday evening, the party entered and made sail to the north-west for Thunder Bay. The course in this direction lay through the midst of the broad lake, where, during the whole night and most of the next day, with the exception of here and there a distant island not a vestige of land was to be seen. Nearing Thunder Bay, however, the scene changes; and as the boat wends its way among the innumerable islands and island-mountains, the scenery is of the most gorgeous character. Point Magnet, Edward Island, Passage Island, Isle Royale, Silver Islet, Thunder Cape, and Pie Island, deserve especial mention. Thunder Cape is the highest point of land on the north shore, and stands like a grim sentinel, with its massive pillars of solid rock and its stunted shrubbery, as if keeping guard over the surrounding objects, its head towering to a height of 1,350 feet above the surface of the lake. The old Indians declared that and immense eagle manufactured the thunder on the summit of this mountain and sent it rolling over the waters. Thunder Bay is a fine, expansive harbor, a natural inlet to what must, in future years, be a very important place. Port Arthur was reached at 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Large numbers of new buildings have been erected here of late, the imports and other branches of business of the place have increased four-fold; and the town, so beautiful for situation at the head of Thunder Bay, gives ample evidence of material progress and prosperity. An address of welcome was here presented by the Mayor and Council; and after a run about the town, and an examination of the numerous evidences of progress everywhere presented, the party were taken on board the steam tug "Mary Ann," belonging to Mayor Marks, and through his generosity, conveyed up the Kaministiquia River, past the old Fort Williams and other historic points, to the town of Fort William, which nestles picturesquely on the banks of the river, with the grand old MacKay mountain overlooking it on the south. This part of the trip was greatly enjoyed,—the party being much interested in the operations of the Pacific Railway Company, which is preparing to build one mile of wharfage on the river, and to use this as a safer harbor of refuge than Port Arthur, as their headquarters of the railway business for the Lake Superior trade. In this they are vindicating the wisdom and forethought of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie in selecting this as the safest and most available harbor, as far back as 1874. After leaving this neighborhood, the

LAKE SUPERIOR.

TOURISTS PROCEEDED TO DULUTH

on the extreme western shore of Lake Superior, in the State of Minnesota. The place is very advantageously situated at the head of lake navigation and at the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific Railway and must thus, probably become a great and prosperous city. The revival of the Northern Pacific Railway has given a new importance to Duluth; and it cannot fail to profit by its position as the Lake Superior terminus, and the depot of a flourishing trade between the west and east, by the way of the lakes. It is now a city of some 12,000 and has every appearance of being a prosperous place. Tuesday afternoon on reaching Duluth, the excursionists bade good-by to Capt. Robinson, and in doing so presented him with a complimentary address, recognising his qualifications for the past, and his kindness upon the trip, and referring in appropriate terms, to the sea-going qualities of his boat. Then having taken their special Pullman, set out on their eleven hundred miles trip to the west, on the way to the National Park, in the Territory of Wyoming.

To be continued.

Mr. Henry Marshall, Reeve of Dunn, writes: "Some time ago I got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery from Mr. Harrison, and I consider it the very best medicine extant for Dyspepsia." This medicine is making marvellous cures in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, etc., in purifying the blood and restoring manhood to full vigor.

The animal was then killed by shooting.

Jabesh Snow, Gunning Cove, N.S., writes: "I was completely prostrated with the asthma, but hearing of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, I procured a bottle, and it done me so much good that I got another, and before it was used I was well. My son was cured of a bad cold by the use of half a bottle. It goes like wildfire, and makes cures wherever it is used."

BLACKMAILING A TORONTO MERCHANT.

HAMILTON, Aug. 27.—Mrs. Emma Moore, a widow residing on St. James street, in this city, was in the police court yesterday on a charge of blackmail, preferred by G. H. Furner, a wholesale millinery and mantle dealer of Toronto, formerly of this city for some years. Mrs. Moore has been writing letters to Mr. Furner. She had a child several years ago. She alleges that Mr. Furner is its father. The trial lasted for a long time and resulted in Mrs. Moore being committed for trial at the next assizes.

I have several times examined baking powders in the market to determine their purity, raising power and influence on the health of those using them I have uniformly found DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER the best in all these respects.

I have just made another examination of the "Royal," "Andrew's Pearl" and "Dr. Price's Cream," and the results are the same as formerly. DR. PRICE'S CREAM is free from AMMONIA, while the 'Royal' and 'Andrew's Pearl' both contain Ammonia. The final reaction of DR. PRICE'S CREAM is acid, while the 'Royal' and 'Pearl' give an ALKALINE reaction, which LEADS to DYSPEPSIA. Price's is a pure, clean and elegant proportion of Cream of Tartar and Bicarbonate of Soda, and there does 'in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie.'

In raising power 'Price's' stands at the head.

The relative amount of Carbonic Acid Gas given off by the same weight (10 grammes) of these powders, heated in the same way, is as follows:

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder	650 cubic centimeters
The Royal	600 cubic centimeters
Andrews' Pearl	543 cubic centimeters

I have used PRICE'S in my family for years. 'Even if the price is higher PRICE'S is always the best.'

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM.

There is a strong probability of a private company being organized in the city. to take the management of the Wright telephone system. The cost to the subscriber in that event would only be about one half what it is at present, and the exchange would be kept open all night as well as during the day, so that the police might be summoned in case of a burglary in any part of the city. The machine and wires have been tested on the telegraph poles between here and Roslin in the Great North West Telegraph Company's office and found eminently satisfactory, the sound being as distinct and clearly audible as through the Bell telephone where no telegraph wires connect.

The schooner Bell of Hamilton, loaded with 168 tons of egg coal for the Rathbun company sank at the "gap" in about 12 ft. of water, The crew were saved. This is the same schooner that sank in the harbor here last fall. A telegram from Picton says after running for some distance across the lake The Belle sprang a leak. The crew put to the pumps and working hard succeeded in keeping the craft afloat. The sea was very heavy, and the water splashing over the little vessel drenched the sailors. The Captain beached the vessel at Indian Point, about about thirteen miles from Picton, and she now lies in fifteen feet of water.

DR. BADGLEY'S DEPARTURE.

Presented Last Night with a Gold Watch.

ADDRESS, AND HIS REPLY.

Some fifty or sixty friends assembled at the residence of Rev. Dr. Badgley, last evening to bid him a final farewell ere he departed for his new field of labor, Victoria University, Cobourg. Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, read the following address:—

To the Rev. Dr. Badgley, Prof. of Metaphysics and Ethics, Hebrew, Greek, &c., Victoria University:

Respected Sir and Brother,—As friends and neighbors, citizens of Belleville, in which good town you have lived so long, and brethern in church fellowship, we feel it at once a duty and pleasure,—a duty imposed by your removal to another sphere of labor, and a pleasure mingled with regrets—to bid you an affectionate God-speed in your new sphere of toil, to bear our united testimony to your fidelity to principle and to duty, and to express our appreciation of your personal worth, of the excellent and abundant fruit of your labor, and of the influence for good you have maintained in our community, to be perpetuated, we are sure, in the good providences of God, even after you shall have left us. A youth of these townships we knew and honored the Christian home in which you were nurtured. We marked with great pleasure and peculiar satisfaction your industry and ability as a student; we had a deep interest in your welfare, rejoiced when you were called to the chair of a professor in the college and university you had honored as a student and a graduate, and rejoiced still more with even a justifiable pride when your fidelity, ability, increasing learning and decided success justified the wisdom of your election, upheld the efficiency and character of the university, and aided to spread its fair fame throughout the Dominion. In your work as Professor of the College, and Registrar of the University, you have certainly laid the Board of Management, the Senate and the Faculty under a debt that is only discharged by gratitude and by evidences of appreciation and monuments of success. While it is a matter of sorrow to us that we should be deprived of your example, counsel and influence in our midst, we can assure you that it is a matter of unspeakable satisfaction also that the Albert University and our goodly town and county are to be represented in the Consolidated University of the United Methodism of the country by one in whom we have such confidence as a gentleman, a scholar and a Christian. We can only desire and pray that in your extended field of labor you may be as prosperous and as highly honored as in the past. Be assured, that yourself, Mrs. Badgley and family carry with you our highest regards and our most earnest wishes for your happiness, the fruitfulness of your labor, and long continued life and abounding prosperity. You will please accept this watch as a token of our love and respect, and we hope a remembrance in years to come of the friends and associations of Belleville.

Belleville, Aug. 26th, 1884.

Mr. I. G. Walker, Steward, of Albert College, then stepped forward and in the name of Dr. Badgley's many Belleville friends, presented him with a handsome gold watch, on which his monogram was cut.

In reply Dr. Badgley said:—

Dear friends and neighbors: this is to me a complete and unexpected surprise. Nothing affects me more than kindness, consequently I find myself but poorly able to express my gratitude for your very beautiful gift, and what I prize yet more, the spirit of good will and friendship thus represented. For your very flattering address accept my deepest thankfulness. You do me the honor to refer in your address to my wife. I have always thought her 'the better man of the two,' and on her behalf I thank you for your expressions of sympathy and love. To the reader of the address—Dr. Carman, who has been to me a teacher, brother, neighbor, and friend—I must express my deep respect for the wholesome and religious influence he has ever exercised over me, both in mind and heart. One other point you mention to which I must allude. You speak of the 'religious influence of the home from which I came. In the presence of my sainted father, who never found life so busy as to neglect the family altar I wish to record the undying influence of early religious training and the solemn responsibility of the parent to the child. I can find language to speak no further, except to thank the kind friends, among whom I have lived so long, for this expression of their kindness, and especially to express my gratitude to those who originated and carried into execution the expression of your esteem in the flattering address and beautiful gift with which you have honored me.

RAMBLERS WHEEL CLUB.

Repetition of the Popular Weekly Promenade Concert.

FOOT AND BICYCLE RACES

Fully a thousand people attended the weekly promenade concert of the Ramblers Wheel club last evening at the Bicycle Park. The Oddfellows Band was present and played good lively music. It was a beautiful evening and everyone seemed to thoroughly enjoy it.

A half-mile walking race was first brought on with Beasley and Kelly entered. At the end of the first lap Beasley led closely followed by Kelly who was urging him to a great pace. On the second lap some one shouted "go it Kelly" and Beasley pushed on still ahead. At the finish Beasley came under the wire, well in front of all his competitors some of whom gazed at him from the fence. It transpired that after the first lap Kelly took a cramp and had to retire. Beasley's time was of course slow.—4.51.

The half-mile running race was entered by Butterfield, Beasley, Watts, (of Canifton) Gordanier and Kelly. On the first round Gordanier was leading but coming under the wire the second time Beasley passed to the front and won the race in 2.20.

The bicycle handicap followed after an intermission for promenade and music. The race to be in three heats of a mile each the first and second man in the first two to enter and form the final heat, the winner of which would take the race. The men were started as follows:—Northcott and J. Retallack got 5 seconds start of S. G. Retallack who got 2 seconds start of Foster who got 5 seconds start of West, who was scratch man giving the first starters 12 seconds. Northcott and J. Retallack kept well together for half a dozen laps. On the fifth lap West passed Foster and on the seventh S. G. Retallack. He failed, however, to overtake Northcott, who had a good lead at the finish. Time not taken. A mistake caused Northcott and West to go the ninth lap, and the latter overtook and passed Northcott, who, however, let up when the bell rang, and so lost considerably. The second heat was to have been between junior men, but as only two entered, Scantlebury and Mathison, that heat was "taken as run," and the third and test heat started in this order:—Mathison and Scantlebury were given 20 seconds by Northcott who was given 8 seconds by West, or 4 less than in the first heat. Scantlebury and Mathison were well matched and hung together for seven and three-quarter laps, Scantlebury leading. On the home stretch however Mathison spurted and won by a few feet. During this time West was pumping after Northcott who was wheeling well but of course loosing a little on each lap and coming in on the home stretch Northcott was overtaken by West who finished a magnificent piece of riding about three feet in advance of his competitor amid enthusiastic cheering. The race was won by Mathison in 3.50. West's time was 3 22, undoubtedly the fastest mile ever wheeled between Toronto and Montreal. West's own record of 3.17 was for a mile about seven seconds short.

The 200 yard foot race was an exciting and well contested event won by J. Hamilton, H. Wallace second and Newton third.

His Worship Mayor Dunnet then presented the prizes of the evening to the winners, announcing that the prizes won on the Civic Holiday would be presented next Tuesday evening on which occasion a program would be prepared for a benefit to the Womens Christian Association, probably for the Hospital Fund, when he trusted the attendance would be as large and even larger. His Worship referred to the popularity of these entertainments and said that the citizens were obliged to the Ramblers Wheel Club for providing them. He called for three cheers for the club which were heartily given and as loudly echoed for His Worship himself. "God Save the Queen" from the band closed the entertainment at 10 o'clock.

NOTES.

It is understood to be the intention in future to compel the crowd to keep inside the enclosures and in the corners thus leaving the entire track clear and free from accident. West last evening was thrown, after the race was finished, by a spectator but sustained no injury.

It is to be presumed that the stupid mistake about the bell will not be repeated. The rule is to ring the bell when there is one more lap to go in order to let both riders and public know of the finish.

The first two games were taken by the Okas in about five minutes and the third in fifteen minutes. OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co, and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-crcitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

The Mexican, whose dark eyes regarded his visitors' beauty with ill-concealed admiration, instantly withdrew, to send an attendant of their own sex, while Yick departed to look after the horses.

As the door closed, the sisters, being now alone, save for Keziah who stood in another part of the room, glanced inquiringly at each other.

The eyes of the younger were full of nervous trepidation.

The Creole's were steady and inscrutable.

'Well, Pauline, she smiled. 'this is an adventure, is it not? I begin to feel quite a heroine of romance. What do you think of our abode? It is very unlike our silvan chamber of this morning.

'It is not its poverty I care about,' answered the girl, casting a hurried glance round.

'Care about! What do you care about?'

'I scarcely know. But as I came here a sensation stole over me as if I was entering a prison, or a grave.

'Good gracious, my dear Pauline, how terrible. You are tired. Your nerves are unstrung, hence such gloomy fancies. Take courage, to-morrow must see our journey over.'

Heaven grant it,' answered the girl, shivering; 'I suppose it is fatigue, but I feel strangely depressed and nervous. I did not mind in the day but I dread the night. We seem so powerless, and we are so utterly alone. Oh, Juliette, if we had Eustace here.'

She raised her hands to her wan face and began to sob hysterically.

'Pauline do not give way, I implore you!' exclaimed the Creole, fearful of her own self command for she had been sorely tried that day. 'What is there to fear now more than at first? Rather should my heart be full of exultation, having narrowly escaped the clutches of J[illegible] Seladden. Hush!' she added quickly; some one comes dear. Take heart, we are not utterly alone; have we not,'—and she glanced across the apartment—'our faithful Keziah?'

At that burst of grief, Juliette had mov towards her sister, who had sunk upon a roughly fashioned settle, and now stood over her, her arm about her neck, while the younger clung as for protection, and comfort round her waist.

The picture thus presented was a striking one.

It fascinated apparently even the old woman who now entered the room.

Jaunita De Ventina may possibly have once been good-looking, but of a race living in a climate that makes women aged when in a colder land they are but in their prime, the wrinkled skin, yellow and withered, gave a bag like appearance to Don Alba's mother, that was by no prepossessing, especially when it was to be added and expression of senility and cunning.

She was attired in a dark petticoat, and silver embroidered bodice, a bright-hued sash was twisted around her waist, her bony arms were partly bare, and a crimson handkerchief bound her grey locks, while from her ears depended massive gold earings.

The Creole felt Pauline's arm tighten convulsively, and her slight frame tremble.

After the first glance of surprised admiration Donna Jaunita advanced, her features distorted by a smile of greeting that sent myriads of wrinkles to every avialagle portion of her face and said—

The beautiful senoras are welcome. My son, Don Alba De Ventina puts his dwelling at their feet. He is poor, senoras but he is noble. His forefathers were hidalgos, and he knows what are the duties of his station. once a hidalgo, always a hidago, charming senoras. Poor or rich, it is nothing.'

'We thank you much for your kindness, senora., replied Juliette, in Mexican, which she she knew sufficiently well to make herself understood. 'We have ridden far to day, and stand in much need of rest, especielly my sister.'

Ah, truly, the sweet senora is pale, Come, I will show you to your couch. It poor, but it is our fate. What matter?—my son is noble. They cannot take that from him. He may hold his head with the highest, though his dress be rags. Come sweet senoras.'

Taking a lamp from the the table she moved from the room.

The sisters followed.

Keziah with her bundles, brought up in the rear.

'What a horrible looking old thing. How she leers and chatters,' whispered Pauline, 'Oh, Juliette, every event that succeeds the other in our flight seems more frightful.'

'Hush, dear, beggars must not be choosers. Never mind her looks; let us judge her by her words, and actions which apparently are friendly enough.'

Donna Juanita led the way, upstairs to a room which, from its aspect the sisters rightly divined was her own sleeping chamber.

There was a bed in it; beyond that the furniture was scant and poor. with one exception—a large handsomely framed mirror which had a most incongruous appearance among its surroundings.

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it.' —THE PARENTS.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

☞None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasthy giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas, Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee" to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY; is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co.'s own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL.

The VOLTAIC BELT Co., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above,—N B.—No risk is incurred,as thirty day's trial is allowed.

The reason why "Nonsuch Washing Compound" should be used in preference to all other washing preparations. First, It is perfectly harmless. Second. It saves more than half the labor. TRAVELING ON PAPER

From Belleville to the Yellowstone Park

SCENES AND INCIDENTS EN ROUTE.

In going to the Yellowstone Park we pass seventy stations on the Northern Pacific Railway, enter Minnesota at its eastern boundary at Duluth, traverse the entire width of Minnesota and Dakota, within a few miles of the entire width of Montana, and strike southward into the northwestern part of Wyoming Territory. The Park is about two hundred miles from Salt Lake City. The first city of importance after leaving Duluth is Braenard, the county seat of Crow Wing County, situated on the east bank of the Mississippi River. There is 10,000 of a population. The Northern Pacific Railway have shops here employing 1,200 men, also the hospital for N.P.R. employees, cost $25,000. There is a splendid hotel with 80 rooms, water works, opera house, electric light and so on. There are immense pineries in the vicinity. Near Aitkin, a little distance east of Braenard, at Lake Itasca, the wonderful Mississippi River has its source, and down this river the timber and logs for the Minneapolis Mills are floated, passing the St. Louis Gull and Partridge Rivers, and the various small villages located thereon. We reach Wadina, the county seat of Wadina County, and here we lose some of our fellow travellers who take the N.P.R. branch for Black Hills. Passing Gull Lake and Ottertail River the beautiful City of Detroit is approached, the county seat of Becbo County, and in the centre of the Lake and Park Region. Here is a situated on the shores of Detroit Lake. It has six hotels, mineral springs, and is a great pleasure resort for business men of Fargo, Moorhead, St. Paul, &c, Up to this point the land has been diversified. Much forest, a good deal of broken rough country, but an occasional district with fine agricultural capacities, but at Glyndon, Fargo and Moorhead the face of the country is entirely changed and you enter what I firmly believe to be the most beautiful agricultural country in this world. Here wheat is king and rules with undivided sway. I visited Fargo and Moorhead two years ago and can only say that I was totally unprepared for the rapid growth they exhibit since my visit. Injured by the great western boom, they undoubtedly were, but they are recovering with that astonishing rapidity only known to western cities. Moorhead is on the Red River, population 5,000, 12 hotels, 7 churches, 5 school buildings, elevators, car wheel shops, agricultural works, and a college costing $25,000. Practically Fargo and Moorhead form one city, the river dividing them. Fargo has 10,000 population, 28 hotels, 12 churches, 4 banks, 6 newspapers, several monthly publications, opera house, theatre, manufactories, 3 elevators, 250 stores, electric light, &c. It is actually the commercial centre of the American Northwest, situated in the heart of the Red River Valley, known the world over for the excellence of its wheat.

FINE AGRICULTURAL DISTRICT

A GREAT FARM.

A few miles from Fargo is the Dalrymple farm of 75,000 acres, under one management, but divided into three great farms of 25,000 acres each. How impossible it is to convey on paper an adequate description of what is presented to the eye. Imagine a plain, boundless in every direction—one expanse, one apparently illimitable ocean of golden wheat, just at maturity. Bands of machines are going forward under the eye of a director on horse back, with regular measured tread cutting and binding and threshing the grain. A railroad track is run in the fields and the grain is there threshed and loaded into cars. Such is the spectacle presented to the eye frequently on travelling westward on the N. P. R., a finer agricultural country from Fargo to Bismarck cannot well be imagined. Yet it must be borne in mind that this charming country is not unfrequently visited by cyclones and storms of fearful severity. Recently, within a few days, a hailstorm destroyed 50,000 acres of wheat, inflicting a loss of $200,000, and leaving the farmers destitute. It is claimed by Manitoba farmers that Manitoba is exempt from the fierce blizzards that sweep through the Red River valley. The great effort of the N. P. R. is now to attract people to Northern Dakota.

STRETCH OF POOR COUNTRY.

After leaving Bismarck, which is the great territorial capital, and which is a thriving city of 5,000, you enter a most extraordinary country, it cannot be called a great agricultural country, and yet you meet with some districts of great fertility, but the country from Bismarck westerly must be described as the whole as a poor country, vast plains, where nothing meets the eye but broken country, villages of prairie dogs, which very much amuse the beholder, dry and dusty plain, grey and withered. Clumps of sage brush and tufts of withered grass, and occasionally, in river bottoms, long stretches of beautiful green. And yet we are in the country of the ranches. Occasional herds of cattle some of them numbering thousands, are seen guided by the cow-boys. It gives one a peculiar sensation to look from the windows of the car and see these cow-boys about, whom you have read such blood-curdling stories, —men who ride up to a town and clean it out firing their pistols at every human being in sight, wild, reckless, lawless whisky—loving men, outcasts and pariahs of society, who have escaped to these western wilds to get out of the reach of the long arm of the law, and ready at a moments notice to commit some deed of blood. From what I have seen and heard I believe the truth to be that the cow-boy is as courteous and civil as ordinary men, while attending to his avocation, but when a number enter a frontier village or mining camp, they are assailed by all sorts of temptations, and when fired by whisky they are prepared to do anything. They have laws among themselves and a code to which they strictly adhere. If a man steals a horse or cow, shoot him or hang him on sight. If two men have an altercation and draw their pistols simultaneously, if one kills the other it is all right. The man is buried quietly and no more said. If one man gets the drop on another who is armed but is not prepared to shoot the man having the drop requests the other to put up his hands or drop his pistol, if he complies, the man making the request possesses himself of the others arms and all is quiet. If the man requested does not comply he is shot. Should he comply and then be shot the shooter is hung. Thirteen horse thieves a short distance from us were coralled by the cow-boys. Nine were shot, five escaped.

THE COW BOY

is dressed in deer skin leggings and shirt, broad sombrero, belt with revolver and knife. I met a young Philadelphian who has been in the country one year and has a ranch of 120 horses. What seems withered grass of no substance or value, is in fact cured hay. The absence of rain and the hot sun curing the hay as it stands and leaving all the nutritious matter untouched. In many of these regions the horses remain on the plains all winter, pawing away the snow and thrive remarkably well.

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public, Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

CRIME IN CANADA.

We have just received the volume of criminal statistics of the Dominion for 1882, published a year and a half after the close of the year for which they are compiled.

The summing up gives 44,082 persons charged with crime of all discriptions, of whom 12,126 were acquitted, 577 were committed for trial, 74 detained for lunacy. There were 31,305 convictions, of which 25,996 were a first conviction, 2,236 a second conviction, 3,073 "reiterated" convictions. 26,299 were committed to gaol with an option of a fine, 3,210 were sent to gaol under one year without option and 181 for one year and over. Eleven persons were sentenced to death, 2 to the Penitentiary for life, 82 for five years and over, and 270 to two years and under five.

Three hundred and forty six persons were committed to Reformatories, of whom 181 were in Ontario, 161 in Quebec, 4 in Nova Scotia.

Of the death sentences, all were executed, in Ontario (5) and Quebec (6).

Of the "residences" of the sentenced, 20,286 dwelt in the cities and towns, and 3,369 in the rural districts. There must have been a good many who did not live anywhere, if the other tables are correct.

The occupation of offenders are thus stated:—Agricultural 1,203, commercial 4,659, domestic 1,985, industrial 4 856, professional 307, laborers 8,299. There were 9,370 married, 1,108 widowed, 13,642 single.

Four thousand one hundred and six accused elected to be tried summarily. Of these 2,485 were convicted, and 1,619 acquitted; 2 were detained for lunacy.

Of those tried by jury 592 were convicted. 509 acquitted and 3 detained for lunacy.

In regard to the crime of drunkenness which is included in the above, the parties charged number 43,505 in all, or 1 in every 101 of the population. These are divided among the provinces as follows:—Ontario, 25,058, or 1 in 78 of the population; Quebec, 9,481, or 1 in 145; Nova Scotia, 1,876, or 1 in 238; New Brunswick, 3,050, or 1 in 106; Prince Edward Island. 654, or 1 in 169; Manitoba, 2,724, or 1 in 28; British Columbia, 638, or 1 in 99; the Territories, 21, or 1 in 2,857.

Classifying how disposed of according to Provinces, in Ontario there were 17,460 convictions, and 7,550 acquittals; in Quebec 6,698 convictions and 2,772 acquittals; in New Brunswick, 2,278 convictions, and 771 acquittals; Nova Scotia, 1,294 convictions and 582 acquittals; Prince Edward Island, 514 convictions, and 149 acquittals. Manitoba, 2,505 convictions and 2,109 acquittals; British Columbia, 548 convictions and 89 acquittals; Territories. 8 convictions and 13 acquittals.

In proportion to population there was 1 offence charged against every 101 people in the Dominion; in 1881 the rate was 1 to every 107.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto News "infers" that when it suits Mr. Blake "to have his say" he will will have it, and when it doesn't he won't. Marvellous penetration that!

* * *

It is not true that "protection protects the manufacturer and contractor and leaves the wage-earner to the mercy of unrestricted competition."—Hamilton Spectator.

Our esteemed Conservative contemporary is replying to a circular issued by representative artizans and the question arises whether the denial of the Spectator is worth as much as the assertion of the men themselves.

Arrangements for a great Liberal demonstration at Kingston on Friday Sept 5, have been concluded and there will be a notable gathering. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Blake, Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Wm. Patterson M. P. for Brant, Hons. T. B. Pardee, Fraser and Hardy. It is not often our privilege to hear public affairs discussed by men so well informed as these gentlemen are, and with such ability and oratorical excellence. An address by any two of the above named gentlemen would be well worth going a distance to hear. Arrangements have been made for reduced fares on railroads and steamboats.

CONTEMPORARY COMMENT.

SOCIETY SIZED UP.

Society forgives and condones debt but will not tolerate patched breeches.—St. Thomas Times.

HON. ALEX. MACKENZIE.

All citizens, irrespective of party would be glad to do honor to a gentleman who has occupied so prominent a position in the Dominion, and whose career has been characterized by so much sterling worth, ability and patriotism. Let something be done to testify our esteem for a man so worthy of honors.—Brandon Sun.

THEY TRY TO DECEIVE.

Those Conservative papers in the East which insist that Manitoba is better provided with railroad facilties than her competitors in the immigration field, do not speak by the book. There are in round numbers 500 miles of railroad in this province. In Northern Dakota alone there are 850 miles in opeartion and 150 more under contract.—Winnipeg Sun.

OFFSET TO A BOARD OF HEALTH.

An ardent admirer of Oscar Wilde has placed on our table a fine specimen of sunflowers. There are some fine displays of these honest, open-countenanced flowers to be seen this year in many gardens. They are said to be excellent preventives of malaria and their growth should therefore be encouraged in order to counteract the baleful supineness of our insufficient Board of Health.—Deseronto Tribune.

FOR GORDON'S RELIEF.

Troops Comprising the Expedition and their Equipment.

The expedition for the relief of General Gordon, includes about 5,000 men, taken infantry regiments and Royal Marines, and augmented by mounted infantry, and blue jackets. The force have not been definitely apportioned, but will be drawn principally from regiments now in Egypt, viz, 2nd Battalion Duke of Cornwall's 1st Battalion, Sussex, 1st Battalion Royal Highlanders, 2nd Battalion Essex, 3rd Battalion King's Royal Rifles, 1st Battalion Gordon Highlanders, 1st Battalion Cameron Highlanders. In addition to these the Orontes will land the first Battalion Berkshire Regiment at Alexandria, from Gibraltar then proceeding to Cyprus for the 1st Batalion West Kent, and bringing them to Alexandria. The Himalaya was yesterdry ordered from Simon's Bay to Bombay to embark the 2nd Battalion of the East Surrey, while the Hankow will arrive at Bombay in six days, and take the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Regiment to Egypt. The regiment will, it is anticipated, be used to garrison Egypt in the absence of the troops forming the expeditionary force. A number of marines from Suakim, where there are at present over 1000, will be conveyed to Assouan the Assouan route for the expedition was selected after Major Kitchener's report on the line of route to Dongola, it being considered safe to transport troops in open boats along the Nile, and a board of officers being constituted at the War Office the details of the expedition were being drawn up. It was decided yesterday that 400 boats of light weight and draught would suffice for the transport of the expedition, and invitations for tenders for the supply of boats, 32 ft. long, 6 ft. 10in. beam, and 2 ft. 8 in. depth, were sent to the principal boat-building establishments of the kingdom. These are presumably for horses of the mounted infantry, while others are given of dimensions slightly below those named. The boats are to be delivered at various docks within a month, are to be fitted with six oars and two sails each, not to weigh more than a thousand pounds and to accommodate men's stores.

ABSTRUSE CONUNDRUMS.

Inasmuch as the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council reduces the constituency of Varennes to one voter, we should like to ask a few questions of Sir John, the "great constitutional lawyer."

1. Should the representative of Varennes in the Manitoba Legislature speak of "my constituent" or my "constituency?"

2 What course should the representative follow should the constituent call a mass meeting of himself and ask the representative to resign?

3. In case the constituent is opposed to being represented by an outsider, could he act as returning officer, nominator, and nominee and declare himself the unanimous choice of the constituent?

4. Suppose the constituent should bribe himself to vote for himself, could he be compelled to give the evidence that would commit himself, and if so, how many?

5. Suppose the constituent did not like his own politics, would he be justified in voting for a person more in accordance with his own ideas, or if not, what is the remedy?

6. How often should the constituent call a meeting of himself in order to lay before himself his ideas, of the political questions of the day?

7. Should the constituent succeed in electing himself, would he ever be justified in asking the House to excuse him from voting till he had ascertained the views of his constituent on the question at issue?

We think it very important that the great constitutional lawyer should at once take his massive intellect out of his trunk and bring it to bear upon these questions.—London Advertiser.

A NEW TOWN.

Representatives from the Toronto City Council and Parkdale waited upon the Provincial Secretary yesterday, with reference to the proposed annexation of 110 acres to Parkdale, lying between that village and High Park and also as to the formation of Parkdale into a town. The Provincial Secretary promised that the Government would consider the matter at an early date.

A HEARTLESS HOAX.

A London cablegram says: Fleet street was startled yesterday by a wild rumor that Queen Victoria had suddenly died. All the vast machinery of the London press were promptly put in motion to ascertain the facts. Marlborough House, Buckingham Palace, the Home Office and the residence of Sir William Gull were besieged by reporters sent to gather every scrap of information, and telegrams were flying in every direction. A few inquiries however, showed that the rumor was only a hoax.

Other Butter Color.
Burlington, Vt., May 31, 1882.
I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.
I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

"ALL RIGHT JOSIE."

Elopement of Members of a Toronto Church Choir.

THEY LEAVE THEIR FAMILIES BEHIND

Toronto, Aug. 28.—The residents of the North-western part of the city are agitated over a scandal caused by the elopement of a married man with another man's wife. Both of the foolish couple were members of the choir of the College street Baptist church. Their names are Jonathan Madell, of 213 Lippincott street and Mrs. Josie Martin, wife of Mr. Jacob L. Martin, cabinet maker who also resides on Lippincott street, a few doors west of College street. Madell, who is a builder and contractor, leaves a wife and two young children, and his guilty companion deserts her husband and leaves two grown up daughters. Mrs. Martin for some time past has occupied the position of organist of College street Baptist church; in which capacity she formed an intimate acquaintance that Madell, who was a member of the choir. This intimacy recently formed a subject of open comment among the members of the congregation. Protests were made to Mrs. Martin by some of her friends, but she indignantly spurned the insinuation that her conduct was improper. At the recent excursion to St. Catharine's of the West End Mission of which Mrs Martin was pianist and choir conductor, the conduct of the pair caused general comment. The scandal reached its climax on Saturday last. On the day previous Mrs. Martin had left her husband ostensibly to pay a visit to some friends in Hamilton. This part of the scheme worked all right, for the husband suspected nothing, knowing that the wife had friends in the "Ambituous City." Madell's wife was spending a few weeks in Claremont with her two children. On Saturday Madell informed his business partner that he was going to visit his family and spend a few days in the country. He left the city that morning. At 10 o'clock a telegram was brought to the workshop of the firm addressed to the absentee. The partner thinking it but a matter of business requiring immediate attention, opened the envelope and read the following document. The message was as follows: "Hamilton Aug 23. All right, Josie."

HER LAST PLAY.

SAD DEATH OF A CHILD ON THE RAILWAY TRACK.

A St. Thomas telegram says: When a little this side of Ingersoll this morning, Engineer Phipps, of the Credit Valley express noticed an object on the track which he at the time took to be a dog. As he drew nearer, however, he was horrified to behold a little girl seated upon the track. He yelled but she could not or did not move, and the cow catcher struck her on the head killing her instantly The whole train passed over the body. As soon as the train could be brought to a stop the men went back and picked up the lifeless remains of the little one and conveyed them to her home near by, only to discover that there was no one in the house, the child's mother having apparently left her alone with the dog to take care of the house while she went to visit Ingersoll. The child was three years of age and a daugter of Mr. John Minard, a farmer.

THE EASTERN CONFLICT.

Shanghai, Aug. 27.—The French loss in the bombardment of Foo Chow was 7 killed and 14 wounded. The Chinese loss is estimated at 1,000 killed and 3,000 wounded. The Chinese man-of-war Yangwu was exploded by a torpedo, but afterwards fired a broadside at a French torpedo boat. The boiler of the latter was exploded by hand grenades thrown by the Yangwu. After which the boat was sunk by the Volta to prevent the Chinese capturing it. The French expect to occupy the heights commanding the Pagoda ancharage. It is reported that there are 75,000 Chinese troops in the vicinity of FooChow. According to the report received at Sontay 80,000 Chinese Troops have invaded Tonquin and had an engagement with the French, in which it is asserted that the French were annihilated and several thousand Chinese killed.

A Field of Corns,—Thomas Sabim, of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

CANADIANS FOR EGYPT.

Ottawa, Aug. 27.—The Governor General has written to the Militia Department asking for the names of some Militia officers whose services can be obtained to take charge of the contingent of Canadian voyageurs that will be sent to aid in relieving Gen. Gordon, Preference will be given to officers who served under General Wolseley in the Red River Expedition, and some French Canadian officers will also be taken, as it is expected that the majority of the voyageurs will be French Canadians. An advertisement calling for volunteers will be issued.

THE LIQUOR LAWS.

Windsor, Aug. 28.—Tuesday the liquor cases which have been remanded so many times were dismissed, the complainant, the License Commissioner, paying the costs. There were thirteen cases in all, but three of these did not hold Dominion licenses, and plead guilty to the charge of having a light in their bar-rooms after eleven o'clock. The Magistrate said that the law would not justify him in convicting where the Dominion and Ontario licenses clashed. The council for the liquor men pointed out that the License Commissioner had overreached his authority in trying to curtail the time of keeping a light in the bar-room. The Town Council has the authority to fix the time for saloons to close on week days, and a by-law passed by the Council gave the hotel keepers the privilege of keeping open until eleven o'clock.

A Brantford despatch says: Mr. Fisher an hotelkeeper holding a Dominion License, was fined $20 and costs at the police court this morning, on a charge of illegal selling preferred against him by the Ontario Inspector. He and Mr. Elliott, another hotel-keeper so fined, have given notice of appeal.

MANITOBA LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Brandon, Aug. 21.—Farmers have begun harvest and the yield of wheat and oats promise to be more than was at first estimated. Binders are all the go, in fact it would not pay any farmer here to use a reaper. The Massey Co., of Toronto, have sold 100 binders from Brandon alone this year The Harris Co. about the same, and there are about half a dozen other firms that have done a good business. This will give your readers some idea of the amount of machinery handled in a place with a population of about 2,500. The farmers will put up an elevator for their own use here. Shares will be sold out at $25.00, and no farmer allowed to take more than one share.

The Hon. J. W. Sifton, who has the ongest crop near here will at a reasonable estimate sell over 12,000 bushels of wheat, while James A. Johnston follows next with about 10,000 bushels. About six miles from here John Doran, Esq., is farming 2 600 acres of land, and his crop, what I have seen of it, is splendid. This season of the year farmers begin to feel uneasy, owing to probable early frosts, should on these come in many cases, as last year the wheat is damaged much. However they live in hopes of a good harvest. The ducks are now plentiful and good hunting can be had any place around. Prairie chickens are not allowed to be shot until 1st of Sept. The fine for shooting any kind of game here before the season is open is $50 and costs and imprisonment if the magistrate may see fit. No game is allowed to be exported from the Province under penality of a severe fine.

Large group of men pass here daily for the mountain to work up on the R. R., while about as many return daily disgusted with the section. The principal objection, I believe, is the wages. Whether it be true or not I do not know, but many of these men have told me the wages given barely paid their board, and a winter of 60° below zero is staring them in the face, and they refuse to work without some prospect of laying aside an amount for winter.

The Mounted Police have been stationed along the border south of this city having as their headquarters Wakapa. They will guard from the Rockies to the Red River. The idea that many have here that this horse stealing is done altogether by cowboys is a mistake, The cowboys are the first to lynch these thieves who are miners, buffalo hunters, trappers and so on, that have taken to this life now that game in their line of trade has about played out.

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood. &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send self-addressed envelope to Rev. Joseph T. Inman, Station D, New York City d&w

BAKING POWDERS CONTAINING LIME

Why "Royal" is Absolutely Pure.

Analysis shows the presence of Tartrate of Lime in several brands of Baking Powder placed upon the market:

'PRICE'S' Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.
'Pearl' Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.
'GROFF'S SNOW-FLAKE' Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.
'DE LAND'S' Baking Powder contains Tartrate of Lime.
All BULK Baking Powders contain Tartrate of Lime.

The presence of this substance in the above-named Baking Powders results from the use of Cream of Tartar in their manufacture, The Cream of Tartar of the market, from which they are made, contains Tartrate of Lime in amounts varying from six to ten per cent, and hence these powders contain this impurity as a foreign substance to a corresponding extent which is of no value, but a positive detriment in any powder in which it is found.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes by which the tartrate of lime is totally eliminated. This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery and appliances by which the crude cream of tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable tartrate of lime, but from other foreign substances. This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care and regardless of labor and expense an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance and absolutely pure in all respects. No lime, earth, alum or impurity of any kind can, by inadvertence or by the use of adulterated articles or otherwise, be introduced into the 'Royal,' and it contains no ingredients except those certified by the most eminent chemists necessary to make a pure wholesome, and perfect baking powder.

It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only 'absolutely pure' baking powder made.

BELLVILLE'S CHAMPION BICYCLIST.

The recent performances of T. West, of the Ramblers club of this city, mark him as a racer of no mean powers. A novice at wheeling in 1883, he entered upon the present season with a mile record equal to about 3:24. The other day he won the five mile championship, lowering the local record to 18:31. On a recent evening he made a mile in 3:22, though the time was not official, it may have been less. Of a club of 50 riders he remains to-day the fastest and pluckiest man for one, two, three, or five miles. What makes these performances notable is the fact that West is but a youth of 18, who has been racing virtually only a single season, and the statement is not too bold that he will in a short time vie with the champion amateur wheelmen of Canada. His records have all been made on an eighth of a mile track, which must be six or eight seconds slower than the quarter-mile track, on which Davies took 3:15, in which to win the championship of Toronto. The club is proud of West, who takes his honors in a most modest and becoming manner. He rides a 54.

SPOKES.

Lavender, of Toronto, lowered the Canadian record of 3:06 to 3:05, at Woodstock on Monday.

At the Buffalo tournament yesterday in a two mile dash, Lavender, of Toronto, had an arm broken in collision.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

A DISTINGUISHED OPENING—LORD LANSDOWNE'S SPEECH.

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—The opening meeting of the British association yesterday was a great success. Queen's hall was crowded with members of the association and ladies. The opening address of welcome was given by Lord Lansdowne, who referred in complimentary terms to Sir Wm. Dawson, recently knighted. Sir Wm. Thomson, as vice-president, in absence of the president, Prof. Cayley, introduced the new president, Lord Rayliegh, in a felicitous speech. The latter delivered a masterly inaugural, in which he reviewed the recent progress of physical science. Sir John Macdonald and Lady Macdonald occupied seats on the platform amongst a large number of distinguished scientists. The Premier made a short but witty speech.

Mr. William Boyd Hill, Cobourg, writes: Having used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for some years, I have much pleasure in testifying to its efficacy in relieving pains in the back and shoulders. I have also used it in cases of croup in children, and have found it to be all that you claim it to be.

The Iolanthe for Toronto; The Norah not to go.

OKAS DEFEATED—GENERAL NOTES.

J. I. Case authorizes the statement that Jay Eye See is not for sale.

It is reported that the owner of the Atalanta refused an offer of $2,500 for her.

The owner of the Norah declines to allow her to sail in the Toronto regatta on 6th September.

The Iolanthe was hauled out this afternoon to be put in proper racing condition for the Toronto regatta. She will leave on Saturday.

The Oka lacrosse club will have a meeting to-morrow evening and should arrange for a first class exhibition of the game in Belleville and put the strongest possible team in the field.

The Yacht Club meeting for some reason better known to those who were present, did not transact any business last night, notwithstanding there was a fair attendance. It is certainly time that a meeting was held to wind up the business of the late regatta. The Secretary has resigned, and refusing to act some one should be appointed to fill the vacancy.

The Okas met their Waterloo at Bowmanville yesterday in a match with an unknown team, which, the boys say, was drafted from the west as there were only about five Bowmanville men on it. The Okas were at all events defeated in three straights in an hour. There was considerable slugging, Garratt and Beasley being laid out. Not having either Coleman, Wallis or Halliwell the team was not of course as strong as it would have been had these players been on it. It is suggested that the boys were so exhilirated with the exuberance of their new grey plug hats and sunflowers they wore that they fancied themselves altogether superior beings and underrated the skill of their opponents. Well, other great athletes have made similar mistakes. Hanlan probably did the same thing. But æsthetic dudes must not be too lanquid between the flags. More definite information is to the effect that the game was a "slugging" one and several of the Okas bear painful evidence of it.

Mr. Henry Marshall, Reeve of Dunn, writes: "Some time ago I got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery from Mr. Harrison, and I consider it the very best medicine extant for Dyspepsia." This medicine is making marvellous cures in Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, etc., in purifying the blood and restoring manhood to full vigor.

THE MOWAT DEMONSTRATION.

COUNTLESS THOUSANDS WILL HONOR ONTARIO'S PREMIER.

TORONTO, Aug. 28—Arrangements for the reception of Ontario's Premier are fast being completed. Everything will be ready at the appointed time. The first reception on Canadian soil will be at Niagara Falls on Monday evening the 15th September. Already one thousand badges have been ordered for Canadians from Stanstead, Chippewa, Buffalo and Niagara Falls. These are all American Canadians, and great interest is being taken in the matter in that section. The next reception will be at Hamilton at nine o'clock in the morning of the 16th. The Hamilton demonstration is expected to be something immense, and six thousand Torontonians will go by boat to escort the Premier from Niagara to that point. The reception at the Ambitious City will occupy from 9 o'clock till 10:30. Toronto will be reached by 1 o'clock and then the great demonstration will commence. Possibly 100,000 people will march in the procession up Yonge Street. In the park addresses will be presented and the speeches will be made. Workmen are now engaged putting up platforms.

MEDICAL MEN'S FEES.

Kingston Whig.

The Judge's decision in the case recently tried at Belleville, non-suiting a doctor who sued a patient for a fee charged as consulting physician, has suggested several interesting queries. The judge held that, whereas the doctor was not summoned by the patient himself, and without his consent the latter was not responsible for the charges. The question, therefore arises, "Supposing a patient is insensible, or not capable of deciding what medical attendance he requires, can he repudiate the charge made by such physician or physicians as are summoned by friends?" The decision may be law, but is it equity?

Jabesh Snow, Gunning Cove, N S., writes: "I was completely prostrated with the asthma, but hearing of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, I procured a bottle, and it done me so much good that I got another, and before it was used I was well. My son was cured of a bad cold by the use of half a bottle. It goes like wildfire, and makes cures wherever it is used."

CRIMINAL ASSAULT.

Alleged Outrage by Seven Men and Boys.

Philip Soles and Cournelius Beaupree, two young men under twenty years of age, were arrested near Bleeker street church about two o'clock this morning on a serious charge by Constable Newton and Hayes. It is alleged that the accused were members of a gang of boys, six or seven in number, who called after midnight at Mrs James Stapley's house, corner of Pine street and Bleecker avenue in search of a young girl naned Nancy Ann Jackson, who on this occasion they were unable to find, the "boss" of the house having concealed her. They however, called again and finding the girl, dragged her from the house to the woods, where it is alleged each one of the party ouraged her. The police soon after arrived on the scene. Jackson gave the names of the prisoners as two of the guilty parties. It should be stated in connection that the house where the girl was found did not bear a very good repuation. At the court to-day Soles and Beauphrey were remanded until ten o'clock to-morrow, the magistrate declining to accept bail.

GORDON AND WOLSELEY.

EGYPT BANKRUPT—ANOTHER RED RIVER EXPEDITION.

CAIRO, Aug 27.—It is reported that General Gordon gained a great victory over the rebels on August 11, and that two rebel leaders were killed.

It is rumored that Egypt has notified England that she is bankrupt since yesterday, and unable to meet current expences.

CAIRO, Aug. 27.—Wolseley's appointment is due to the statement of Gen. Stephenson that the present plan for the campaign via the Nile is impracticable.

CAIRO, Aug. 27.—The rebels attempted to capture Khartoum on the 12th, and continued the attack till the 14th, when Gen, Gordon cleverly outflanked them. Many rebels were killed.

LONDON, Aug 27.—Newspapers approve of the despatch of Wolsely to Egypt. The official announcement of the appointment says the preparations which have been in progress for some weeks for the expedition up the Nile resembles in a great degree those adopted in 1870 for the Red river expedition which gave to Wolseley experience that no other officer possessed.

HASTINGS REFORM CLUB

Meeting and Re-Arrangement of Offices.

THE MOWAT DEMONSTRATION.

A meeting of the Hastings Reform Club was held last night in their hall, Harrison Block, which, considering the short notice, was largely attended. A letter was read from Mr. J. J. B. Flint, tendering his resignation as President, on account of his recent appointment to the Police Magistracy, and thanking the club for the honor they had conferred upon him in choosing him as their president. He hoped the club would prosper in the future. The resignation was accepted. Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, secretary of the club, was then unanimously elected President, and Mr. John Williams, second vice president, was chosen secretary. Mr. Wm. Smeaton was then elected to the office of second vice president. The officers of the club now are:—President, P. J. M. Anderson, first Vice-President, Dr. Murphy; second Vice President, Wm. Smeaton, Corresponding Secretary, John Williams; Financial Secretary, Stephen O'Brien; Treasurer, W. T. McIntyre, with an executive committee composed of members from every polling sub-division in the city. The Club is now in a prospering condition and with a good membership and a healthy balance in the treasury, the association is bound to make its influence felt for the cause of Reform throught the county.

In connection with the Mowat demonstration in Toronto on the 16th September, the Secretary submitted a budget of correspondence he had had with the the Executive Committee in Toronto, and the club decided that they should send a full delegation to attend this provincial welcome to the Attorney General on his return home from England. Any member of the club who desires to accompany the delegates, should leave his name as early as possible with Mr. John Williams, the secretary, in order to secure tickets and badges before the rush. It is probable that at least thirty members of the club will attend the demonstration. The meeting adjourned for one week.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-ucitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without the Marston Treatment, [illegible] MARSTON REMEDY CO., [illegible] Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Read the following extract from the letter of a missionary in China:—

DEAR SIRS—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera appeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KILLER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me dear sirr, gratefully and faithfully yours, J. M. JOHNSON, Missionary to Swatow, China.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

Leaving the lamp, Donna De Ventina hastened away, soon to return with refreshments, which placed on the table, she withdrew for the night first having shown a small room adjoining on the same landing, which was to serve for Keziah's sleeping closet.

Pauline, in an aside would have had the negress remain with them,

To this, however, the Creole objected, whispering that she would better guard them outside, for they would be safe enough within.

On being left alone the first thought of the sisters was to perfectly examine the apartment.

In doing so Juliette chanced to approach the head of the bed.

She started, with difficulty suppressed an exclamation of surprise.

She had detected in the wall another door.

Yet it was not altogether a door. only a faint crack indicated it.

It possessed neither lock or handle'

It had the appearance of a portion of the partition having been sawn out and put back again.

She tried it with her hand.

It was firm.

What should she do?

Should she acquaint the others?

No.

After all there might be nothing in this, and Pauline was already so nervous that any additional excitement might produce hysterics

Still she was determined to take precaution.

She tried to move the bedstead.

It was heavy but with Keziah's aid they could push it from its place.

She summoned the negress, and told her what she wanted.

'What do you wish to do, Juliette? asked Pauline, who had wearily seated herself by the table.

'Only to move the bed, dear,' answered the Creole. 'Do you not see the window almost faces it? the morning sun would awake us before it is necessary to start, and we shall need all the rest we can get.'

Keziah said nothing, but her black eyes, fixed on her mistress, seemed to be trying to discover there another reason.

When the bed had been pushed so that head of it rendered any attempt to open the door within impossible, Juliette gave Keziah her supper, then dismissed her for the night.

She desired much to be alone, and though she had no suspicion of the negress, fidelity her presence was a restraint.

Having bidden the woman be on the alert should they summon her, the Creole securely fastened their door, too quickly to note that Keziah glided downstairs instead of into the sleeping closet.

Returning to the table, she sat down her forehead resting pensively on her hand.

She was thinking of Stuart Loring.

Of what fear respecting him, that fear of his love which was upon her.

'Will you not eat Juliette?' asked Pauline, breaking in upon her reverie. You had better, you will need all your strength.'

Starting, the Creole looked up.

'I am not hungry, dear'

She began extending her hand to the tray.

Abruptly, however, she paused.

A dreadful thought occurred to her.

Supposing the American should be playing her false.

All she knew of this man had been singularly mysterous, while not many things not to be described in words, voiceless presentiments rather occurred to arouse her suspicions.

Supposing the viands and drink had been drugged.

It was an absurd, a foolish thought, bu it could not be shaken off.

'No she said in a loud weary tone, I am too tired for hunger; the food sickens me I shall go to bed, sleep if I can, and rise with an appetite for breakfast.'

She sat and watched Pauline eat, unable to warn her, fearful to instil into her own suspicions, which at moments she, herself regarded as absurd.

The meal over and the sisters prepared for rest.

Dressed as they were they laid down on the rude bed.

For some while slumber came came to neither.

The Creole, indeed had secretly determined not to sleep at least, until dawn.

Fatigued, she had imagined this wor'd be a difficult trial.

She found it easy.

Made so by her companion.

Overtired, or over excited' she could not sleep, and after a hysterical fit of weeping on her sisters bosom she began to talk of Eustace Belmore.

She chatted of when he would overtake them, and how safe they would be under his protection.

The thought of her lover brought joy to the poor child's heart.

She forgot her troubles, her fears, and ignorant that she was cruelly lacerating her companion's heart with every word she uttered she babbled on of their return to England of her future marriage and of their future home which Eustace had never been tired to picture and plan when they were man and wife.

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years."

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery.

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

"Twenty-four years experience," says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY; is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL

Address as above.—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty day's trial is allowed.

TRAVELING ON PAPER

From Belleville to the Yellowstone Park.

SCENES AND INCIDENTS EN ROUTE.

No. 3.

Now we approach Mandon on the west bank of the Missouri River, At this place we catch our first view of the Missouri River, and a very unpleasant river it seems. Very broad, muddy, full of snags, approached by very large flats, evidently overflowed in high water Multitudes of boats, with light draught, and propelled by enormous stern wheels, ply out stream. Huge timbers placed at the bow which are used when the boat runs upon a mud bar to enable the steamer to walk over the bar like some huge grasshopper. An immense bridge spans the river, connecting Mandon and Bismarck. Mandon is in a flourishing condition. Large workshops have been built by the R. R., costing over $200,000, excellent hotels and large manufactories, coal is mined a few miles from the town. Fort Abraham and Lincoln is only three miles distant. It is at this point the change in time is made from 'Central' to 'Mountain,' now standard time. Gladstone named after Britain's premier, is a very thriving place, it is situated at the junction of the Green and Heart rivers, it has roller, corn, sugar and sorghum mills. Medora and Little Missouri lie on the east and west banks of Little Missouri River, only 80 rods apart, large mines of coal exist. This is the head quarters of several stock raising companies and of the extensive abattoirs of the Marquis de Mores, a French noblemen who has several large ranches in the vicinity and is engaged in the dress beef trade shipping from this this remote point, large quantities of dressed beef by the Pacific Refrigerator Car Co. Possessed of large fortune, young, gay, with a wife whose beauty is the talk of the country, what strange infatuation possessed the young marquis to leave la belle France and choose for his permanent residence a tract of country the most unprepossessing imaginable. It is situated in the Bad Lands district now called Pyramid Park, this is a scene of the terrible Indian wars. The entire country is torn up and distorted, it seems what it probably has been the bed of some large sea, not a foot of arable land visible, but enormous bluffs or buttes standing isolated, shaped in all conceivable forms, conical pyramidal. These pyramids are from one hundred to four hundred feet high, separated by innumerable ravines. In a war each butt would have been a citidal, and nothing but starvation could dislodge an enemy. These lands extend for hundreds of miles. Many of the erections seem of volcanic origin, the surface showing the action of fire and many of them apparently masses of burned rock and ashes. Large blocks of scoriae can be described, Some of the forms are nearly grotesque. The watch dog is a huge mass of burned rock on the summit of a bluff, bearing the exact semitude of a dog. Notwithstanding the arid and parched country large herds of cattle maintain themselves in this terrible land. For a time the Marquis was beseiged by Indians and a band of whites with the object of driving him out of the country, fancying the dressed cattle trade would interfere with their hunting grounds, but the Marquis is an expert shot and by the proper use of the Sharpe repeater brought his enemies to reason. The scenery can truly be described as weird and unique. I have never seen a country at all approaching it. At Glendine we strike which is by far the most beautiful river we have met with in this country, very broad and majestic, flowing for hundreds of miles through a beautiful park country, well wooded. Miles city has a population of 3,000, has mines of lignite in active operation is situated on the north of Torgue river, on the Yellowstone a short distance from Fort Keyh, which has ten companies of soldiers. We are now on a desert country where crops cannot be grown without irrigation—immense trenches, some of them forty miles are constructed, down which water is brought. Fair crops are grown thro' irrigation, but it is a melancholy sight to behold poor people hard at work ditching and irrigating and persuading the desert to yield a scanty crop where east and north of them lie millions of acres that require to be merely tickled with a hoe to laugh into a harvest. The whole country seems to be a coal deposit every village has its coal mine and we can see the bands of coal cropping out on almost every hill side. We are now at Custer, near Fort Custer and Fort McKinney, the largest military posts in Montana. It was in the little Big Horn Valley, close by, that Gen. Custer, the brave and chivalrous soldier was slain by the Indian Chief 'Rain in the Face,' whose charming photo I have. Billings, Park City and Livingston are three go ahead frontier towns—all life and activity. Cow boys, bull whoskers, ranch men, miners, drovers—half a dozen saloons shouldering each other. Silver, gold and coal mines in the mountains about them. Ranches in their immediate vicinity, one gets a proper idea of frontier life not to be obtained in any other way: At Livingston I met N. Davenport, who likes the country very much. Livingston is one year old, 2,600 of a population, immense railway shops of 1,000 men capacity, In '83 returns showed half a million of cattle in the ranches, 50,000 cattle were shipped in that year from the east to Montana to pasture—and Montana is the leading stock country. It is the natural home of cattle, owing to its climate and grasses—spring rains produce a luxurient crop of grass. Then the dry weather without rain effectually cures it. Last year half a millions pounds of wool were shipped at Livingston. The town is the gateway to the Yellowstone Park, the branch running to the park starting at Livingstone. It is the centre of the greatest mining district in the northwest. Placer gold, gold quartz, silver, copper, iron, coal lead, zinc and marble all mined in its vicinity, The great Crow reservation is now thrown open for settlement and some of the richest placer diggings have been discovered thereon. Large hydraulic machines wash the face of some of the large mountains and the quantities of gold obtained is wonderful. There will shortly be a great rush to this region by miners. Fifty miles along the Gardner River through and sublimity brings you to Cennobar, six miles from the Mannoth Hot Springs. One moment you are running along a river bottom, between lofty mountains whose peaks are covered with snow, and the next the train slowly and laboriously climbs some dizzy height from which you can see the floor of the dark and mysterious canyon hundreds of feet below—so grand is the scenery that the party was wild with enthusiasm as they realized that at last they were traveling along a spur of the Rockies. Coaches each with four horses were in attendance at the depot, and in a few moments we were climbing the mountains Six miles of ascent and an occasional decent brings you to the Mammoth Hot Springs Hotel. The hotel is situated upon a level plateau, and is a fine erection capable of accommodating two hundred guests What will not Yankee pluck accomplish. Every board and all the materials except lime and stone had to be transported over those rugged mountains, and yet here, solitary and alone, stands an hotel quite the equal of almost any of the large watering place erections on the Atlantic coast, The U. S. Government fix the prices and keep police patrolling the park.

THE YELLOWSTONE RIVER

A REGION OF ENCHANTING BEAUTY

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

FUNCTIONAL HEART TROUBLES are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition; and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

LENNOX GOES LIBERAL.

There is a tremendous significance in the news furnished to-day that Lennox has returned the Liberal candidate to the Legislature, and in the fact that the riding is now represented in both Federal and Provincial Parliaments by supporters of Messrs. Blake and Mowat. The campaign was warm, the Opposition fought hard, money was no doubt used by them, yet Mr. Blackstock was rejected. The recent history of this constituency is profitable reading. In the last general election Lennox returned, triumphantly as it was said, Sir John Macdonald. The courts unseated the first Conservative for bribery and corruption and a new election came on. Mr. Allison, the Liberal candidate was elected. In the Local Legislature at the general election the late Mr. Roe managed to get returned in the Conservative interest but the seat again became vacant by his death and it has been carried by a Liberal. Here we see two encouraging instances of the triumph of political honesty over political corruption, and the endorsement of Reform policy as against Tory policy.

We cannot mistake the way the wind blows even though it is shown only by a straw. And we have had recently many straws which indicate the trend of public opinion in political affairs from Halifax to Muskoka. The Liberals are winning seats in every direction and losing none. They have forced their opponets to relinquish Muskoka, Megantic, Cumberland and Lennox. They have just won a splendid victory over the Tories of Halifax. The outlook for the Liberal party was never brighter. The country sees how it was deceived and humbugged and upon every opportunity is resenting the treatment at the polls.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE GENERAL AVERAGE of the United States wheat crop is one point higher than in August of 1882 and 1883 and has not been exceeded in any year since 1877.

THE AMOUNT to be raised by muncipal taxation in New York this year is $29,991,172.85. The rate of taxation is 1.25 per cent, as against 1.29 percent last year.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT makes slow headway in American cities as a competitor of gas. In London it is a flat failure. Twenty-five milllion dollars were invested there by sixty-two companies, all founded in 1882. And an expert, Arnold White, formerly a managing director of the Edison, now doubts whether the combined earnings of the survivors are equal to a profit of five per cent. on one fifth of the capital sunk.

ALTHOUGH less frequently spoken of in the east, the Government's policy in the Northwest still bears bitter fruit. The Brandon Sun says:—"The railway monopoly is a most unjustifiable and unwarranted interference with rights, and is a terrible drain on the whole country. Without competition the C. P. R. are enabled to impose such tolls as they see fit. To all remonstrance they reply with a show of virtuous indignation that most if not all the Manitobans are fools, or worse, and that the Syndicate are most anxious for their welfare, and know better what is wanted than the people do themselves. What is most intolerable in all this is that the Government have rendered this attitude on the part of the C. P, R. possible, and that assistance is rendered them whenever solicited, while the people may supplicate in vain."

SPEAKING of the Quebec Lieutenant Governorship L'Electeur says:—"It is certain that the Federal Government is seriously embarrassed. Mr. Chapleau is hastening back from British Columbia to have Sir Hector Langevin appointed, and Sir Hector has cleared out to escape appointment. The Castors have made and are making still great efforts to get the nomination for the Hon. Mr. DeBoucherville, and, if they succeed, Judge Angers will re-enter politics and become Premier. What is most probable is that Mr. Robitaille's term will be extended. The thing will not be done at once, but little by little beginning with an extension for a few months and ending with an extension five years. If Mr. Robitaille is not reappointed Lieutenant-Governor he will be made a Senator and will re-enter the Cabinet as the French Minister in the Senate."

AT THE MEETING of the Dominion Medical Association at Montreal Dr. Mullin, of Hamilton, read the report of the Committee on Ethics, in which he recommended that any member not feeling himself in accord with the rules of the Association should withdraw from it. He called attention to the numerous cases appearing in the newspapers describing surgical operations, etc., and deplored the frequency of such notices. The public had, he admitted, rights which should be respected, and since the illness of President Garfield it had proved that they took great interest in the progress of the sickness of a public man. But the speaker did not see the need of recording such operations as the removal of fingers or toes, as likely to advance or benefit either the public or the profession. He also denounced the publishing in the daily or weekly journals of the cards of regular practitioners. The tendency to professional advertising was becoming larger daily, but the speaken believed that the general public willingly took notice and advantage of any specialty in a practitioner without any advertising. The paper is said to have been received with applause.

GIVE CANADIANS A CHANCE!

This is from the editorial column of the Mail:—

"Operatives in the mills in Eastern Connecticut are in a wretched condition through lack of work, most of the mills being closed for periods of one to sid weeks."

The Mail need not have gone to Connecticut for a chance to express sympathy with idle cotton operatives. OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other Butter Colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid. or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

CANADA'S WELCOME

To the British Science Association at Montreal.

SPEECH BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL

At the reception to the British Science Association at Montreal on Wednesday Lord Lansdowne, after some opening remarks said:—The occasion, Lord Rayleigh, is the first upon which the British Association has held a meeting beyond the narrow limits of the United Kingdom. Such a departure from the usage which you had hitherto observed though an innovation, is certainly not inconsistent with the object of the Association or with the doings of its founders. Its earliest records contain the statement that it was introduced for the promotion of intercourse between those who cultivated science not merely of the British Isles, but of the British Empire. I question whether any means of promoting this intercourse could be more effectual than the holding of your annual meeting in one of the great cities of this colony, and my object in now addressing you is to express at the very outset the satisfaction with which the people, not only of Montreal, but of the whole dominion, hail your arrival here, and to welcome you in their name to these shores Perhaps you will allow me to state my own belief that if you were to select a place for your meeting within the Colonial Empire of England you could not have selected a colony which better deserved the distinction either in the warmth of its effection for the Mother Country or in respect of the desire of its inhabitants for

THE DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE

and of culture. In a young country such pursuits must be carried on in the face of some difficulty. yet amongst those who have done scientific work within the Dominion are men known and respected far beyond the bounds of their own nation. In this connection I cannot deny myself the pleasure of referring to the honors which have been conferred upon Sir J.W. Dawson within the last few days. He is, unless I am misinformed, more responsible than any one person for the visit of the association, and I feel sure I shall command the acquiescence of all those who have worked in the cause of Canadian culture when I say that we regard the Knighthood which Her Majesty has bestowed upon him as an appropriate recognition of his distinguished services and as an opportune compliment to Canadian science. But the significance of this meeting is far greater than it would be if its results would be measured by the results which it will make to the scientific wealth of the Empire. When we find a society which for fifty years has never met outside of the British Isles, transferring its operations to the Dominion; when we see several hundred of our best known Englishmen who have acquired a public reputation, not only in the scientific, but in the political and literary world, arriving here, mingling with our citizens and dispersing in all directions over this continent—when we see in Montreal the bearers of such names as Rayleigh, Playfair, Frankland, Burdon, Franklin Thomson, Rascoe, Blanford, Moseley, Lefroy. Temple, Bramwell, Tyler Galton. Harcourt and Bonney, we feel that one more step has been taken towards the establishment of that closer intimacy between the Mother Country and her offspring which both here and at home all good citizens of the Empire are determined to support. A desire for such a closer intimacy is one of the most remarkable and best features of the present day. Our periodical literature our proceedings in Parliament, and the public discussions which have recently taken place and in which some of our prominent Canadians have taken part, all indicate a remarkable awakening to the importance of the noblest Colonial empire which the world has ever seen, and a desire to draw closer the ties of sympathy and allegiance which bind us reciprocally; and, ladies and gentlemen, whatever difficulty there may be in the way of a revision of the political

RELATIONS TO THE MOTHER COUNTRY

and her colonies, it is satisfactory to repeat that there are none in the way of such an alliance as that which you are establishing to-day between the culture of the old world and that of the new in the domain of science. There can be no conflict of local and Imperial interests—no constitution to revise, no embarrassing considerations of foreign and domestic policy—we are all partners and co-heirs of a great empire, and we may work side by side without misgivings, and with a certainty that every addition to the fund of knowledge and learning is an unmixed advantage to the whole empire. I believe Lord Rayleigh, that your visit will be fraught with far-reaching advantages, both to hosts and guests. We shall gain in acquaintance with our visitors, and in the publicity which their visit will give to the resources and attractions of this country. We believe that it will be in proportion as it becomes widely known and more thoroughly understood. Sympathy, as a distinguished Canadian has already written, begets knowledge, and adds to sympathy. You, ladies and gentlemen, who have lately left the mother country, will gain in the opportunity which will be afforded you of studying the life of a people younger than your own, but engaged in the solution of many problems similar to those which engage your attention at home and observing the conduct of your own race amidst the surroundings of another hemisphere. On every side you will find objects of interest. Our political system, the working of Federation, the arrangements of the different Provinces for the education of our youth, our railways pushed across the continent with an enterprise which has never been surpassed by the oldest and largest communities, our forests, our geology, our mineral resources our agriculture in all its different phases, ranging from the quiet homesteads and and skilful cultivation of the older Provinces to the newly reclaimed prairies of the Northwest, which we expect to yield us this season a surplus of 6,000,000 to 9,000,000 bushels, the history and

MORE JUSTLY APPRECIATED

CHARACTERISTICS OF OUR NATIVE RACES.

and the manner in which we have dealt with them. All these will afford you opportunities of study which few other portions of the globe could present in such variety. Of the facilities which will be afforded, and of the pains which have been taken to render your explorations easy and agreeable, I need not speak. Some of you are aware that a distinguished member of an assembly to which you and I, Lord Rayleigh, have the honor to belong has lately been cautioning the English public against the dangers of legislation by picnic. I have heard that in some quarters misgivings have been expressed lest we too should be exposed to a similar danger, and lest the attractions which the British Association as offered here should conflict with its more strictly scientific objects. I will only say of them, if there is any ground for such apprehension you must remember their hospitality is an instinct with our people, and that it is their desire that you should see and learn a great deal, and that you should see it and learn it in the pleasantest manner possible. (Great applause.)

SPOKES FROM THE WHEEL.

Lawyer Weston, of the Boston 'Cyclists' Touring Club, mounted on a bicycle, encountered a waggon placed crosswise of the street so as to prevent his passage. An attempt to turn the horse around being unsuccessfully made owing to the opposition of the driver. Mr. Weston timed the obstruction, and, finding it more than the six minutes allowed by law, he brought an action of damages. The defendants argument was that a bicycle did not come within the legal or popular definition of the word vehicle. Judge Adams, however had not the slightest doubt, if the question was brought before the Supreme Court, but that a bicycle would be adjudged a vehicle under the statutes.

THE NEW TELEPHONE.

Agreement to Put up 100 Instruments in Belleville.

THE SYSTEM A SATISFACTORY ONE.

The Dominion Telephone Company has taken out a Dominion charter for the purpose of acquiring and operating the Wright telephone in the Dominion. Headquarters are in Montreal where the machines will be manufactured. One of the directors is Mr. Colby well known member of Parliament for Stanstead and Mr. J. J. Webster is Managing Director. The Company is now operating lines in the Province of Quebec, but Belleville is the first place in Ontario it has entered. The Company only manufactures the plant, and builds a trunk line. It does not like the Bell Company purpose operating local agencies, but they sell the plant and put it up for local companies. The idea was to form a Belleville company with a capital stock of $5000 invested as follows: for 100 instruments $3,000, wire $1,000, office $500, incidentals $500. A meeting was held last night in the Dafoe House attended among others by the following named:—Ald. Biggar and McIntosh, Drs. Eakins and Wilson, T. S. Carman, W N Ponton, J. L. Biggar, A. E. Fish and J. C. Lake. Mr. Webster submitted his scheme, which after discussion was replaced by the following agreement. The local men are to secure 100 subscribers. The Dominion Telephone Co. will then put up the instruments and wire, and open a central office. They will also put up instruments free of charge at such public places as the G. T. R. station. They will operate and manage the service for 5 years charging subscribers $15 a year for night and day service, any 20 citizens to have the privilege of purchasing the plant and rights at any time. This offer was accepted and an agreement to that effect entered into.

The required number of subscribers will be had at once, Mr. Webster sees no reason why Belleville should not have 200 instruments at so cheap a rate.

A representative of this paper used one of the new instruments in the G. N. W. Telegraph Co.'s office to talk with Roslin, distant 15 miles, and heard the man at the other end distinctly and with great ease. Mr. Fish, Front St., is now using one of the instruments connected by a private wire between the store and his laundry works, and finds it to work so satisfactorily that he prefers it to the Bell instrument.

THE JACKSON OUTRAGE.

Five Boys placed on Trial at the Police Court.

At the Police Magistrate's court this morning the alleged house breaking and rape case reported in THE ONTARIO yesterday was tried. The warrant sworn out by W. J. Stapley, charged Cornelius Beauprey, Philip Soles, John Steele, John Downs, Thos. Cummings, and George O'Camb, with feloniously and burglariously breaking into and entering the dwelling house of W. J. Stapley in the night time, with intent feloniously, by force to take away against her will a woman, (Nancy Ann Jackson), with intent to carnally knew her. O'Camb did not appear. Mr. W. J. Diamond, on behalf of the accused demurred from the indictment on the ground, (1), that such a charge could not be laid, (2), that the Police Magistrate has no right to try this offence as charged, (3), there is no such offence laid down in criminal law or by statute, (4), that the accused should not be asked to elect until the offences charged are separated. The Police Magistrate overruled all the objections. Mr. Diamond asked that the prisoners, be tried severally. Steel and Cummings were the only ones that elected to be tried by the magistrate, the others making no election. Afterwards the other two also elected to be tried by the Magistrate on the understanding that each one of the five should be tried alone. Philip Soles' case was taken up first. Mrs. Stapley deposed that he broke into her house a second time on the morning of the 20th inst., followed by, she thought, Beauprey. They then found Miss Jackson under the sink. After the girl had been taken from the house Downs and a comrade of his carried her away, going in the direction of Bleeker's grove. When the police arrested Soles and Beauprey the same two lads brought the girl back. It was about one o'clock when the boys made their visit to the house. In cross-examination by Mr. Diamond it was elicited that the witness had kept a disorderly house before she was married and had been before the police court twice charged with keeping a house of ill-fame At one time she was arrested on the complaint of her father.

The girl Jackson is a mulatto about 18 years of age, without any friends or relatives in this country. She came to this city about three weeks ago from Stirling and applied to Mrs. Stapley for board, which was granted. She told Mrs. Stapley that she came from the States. The next day after going to Mrs. Stapley's she got work in Powell's rag shop and paid $1.25 a week for her board. It appeared from the evidence that the boys mistook this girl for Mag Howard, a notorious colored girl living about the city for years.

SAVED FROM DROWNING

In Hay Bay by two Belleville Young Men.

From our own Correspondent.

DESERONTO, Aug. 29.—A report reached here last night that a party from Napanee, in a sail boat had a narrow escape from drowning in Hay Bay Tuesday. A squall struck the sail boat capsizing it. The occupants, Myron Mills, his wife, father and brother, of Napanee, clung to the bottom of the boat for over half an hour, while a heavy sea was rolling over them. Finally J. W Snider and E. A. Robbins, of Belleville, who were in that vicinity fishing, saw the danger the party were in and they at once set out to rescue them. When they reached the boat the party were very much exhausted, especially Mrs. Mills, and in a very short time must have perished.

AN EVIDENCE OF INSANITY.

"Mr. Officer, what did you arrest this man for—what charges have you against him?"

"Insanity, your honor."

"What evidence have you to sustain the charge?"

"Plenty, your honor."

"Let's have it."

"Well, sir, last night about 10 o'clock as me and my pard was goin' along the upper end of Washington-avenue we saw this man and a woman walkin' along slow and he kissing her every once in a while. We thought, of course, he had some other man's wife with him, but when we got up to him we found that the woman he was kissin' was his own wife. We then concluded that he must be insane, and brought him in."

"Is that true, Mr. Man?"

"Yes sir. But"——

"No buttin' about it. How long have you been married?"

"A little over four years."

"Four years! And kissing your own wife on the sidewalk? I'm sorry to say, sir, that the grounds are sufficient to hold you over for examination."—Kentucky State Journal.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS' THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon re-uscitate. They dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions" Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

NERVOUS DEBILITY And PREMATURE DECAY RADICALLY CURED without stomach medication by the Marston Treatment. [illegible] MARSTON REMEDY CO., 19 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

'And you, you, Juliette, will live with us, will you not, until you marry, as of course you will very very soon and have a very pleasant house with your Eustace, or whatever his name may chance to be.'

She did not notice the start, the sudden quiver of the form she clasped in her arms.

She was full of her own great happiness and chatted and planned until finally sleep silenced the vermillion lips.

Then the Creole yielded to the agony she had been so long suppressing.

She writhed upon the couch, as though it had been the rack rending her delicate frame.

She thought of the bitter stain upon her name, a stain neither wealth or beauty could remove.

'How many die at their birth,' she cried 'why did not I?'

Then she thought of Pauline, the favorite of fortune.

How different was her fate.

She compared the happiness, free of all care, of the slumbering girl beside her, with her own shame, her misery—her humiliation.

She beheld more vividly even than Pauline, Pauline's future with Eustace Belmore as a husband, while she was alone, unregarded—possibly despised.

'Such a lot, so to be envied, might have been mine—mine,' she gasped, 'but for her. Had she not existed, he would have loved me; we should have been married, I would never have returned here, and thus never have learned the bitter curse upon me. It is all her fault—hers,' she moaned in frenzied dispair. 'Yes,' she went on abruptly rising upon her elbow, and leaning over the sleeper, 'It is you—you to whom I owe all—to your existence I hate you. Oh, why cannot I carry you away' far far away, where neither of us could behold him again I could bear separation then, but it is death to think that, fortunate in all else, you should be fortunate in this, his love, while I—I moan in despair. Oh, I hate you for having won him from me.'

'Why not then win him back? It is only fair. Your wondrous beauty is capable of overcoming greater difficulties then that.'

The Creole uttered a cry.

The voice that had spoken came from close by her side.

In alarm she looked up.

To her consternation she saw the door she had observed gone.

It had been removed from the other side.

In the opening stood Stuart Loring.

Another scream broke from her lips. She would have leaped to the ground, but the American caught her wrist and held her where she was.

'Silence,' he said authoritively, but with respect. 'Fear nothing you have no occasion. I wished to speak to you Miss Beauchamp, alone; the present moment will suit. You need not dread this beautiful child,' and his eyes rested on Pauline's placid features. 'She will not wake and miss you, she will not wake and miss you she will sleep til morning.'

'Then, then,' gasped the Creole, my suspicions were correct, the supper was drugged.'

Stuart Loring smiled. Was it with scorn?

CHAPTER XXXI.

A TRYING INTERVIEW—JEALOUSY IS TRIUMPHANT.

Yet holding her hand, Stuart Loring led the Creole through the adjoining apartment and downstairs to the room they had first entered on their arrival.

It was deserted.

No one, save those two seemed awake in ranche.

A light burned on the table near where stood two chairs as if recently used,

The American led his companion to one and sat himself on the other.

Juliette dropped silently into hers

Her frame was trembling; her hands were clasped together; her brain was in a whirl.

For a space, Stuart Loring regarded her in silence.

Then he remarked in a low voice, sweet in tone and tinged with sad reproach—

Miss Beauchamp, you still fear me?'

'I fear, I know not what,' she answered vaguely, 'unless it be myself.'

'Will you consent to hear me?' he asked in the same accents

'Yes, have I not come for that purpose?'

'You know my secret?'

She inclined her head.

'My love for your half-sister. Will you aid me win her.

'I!' exclaimed the Creole, abruptly, letting her eyes fall on him

'Rather I should have said, will you not prevent her doing so.'

All this was so strange and sudden that, for a moment she could not reply. then—

'Why should I not?' she enquired.

'For your own interest,' he replied, leaning towards her, 'promise to be no obstacle to my desire, and—

'And?' she repeated her eyes still fixed on his.

'Eustace Belmore shall be yours.'

ADVERSISING CHEATS!!!

"It has become so common to begin an article, in an elegant, interesting style.

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible.

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"The Remedy so favorably noticed in all the papers,

Religious and secular. It is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness and ability * * *

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

DID SHE DIE?

"No

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A DAUGHTER'S MISERY.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

"Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters that we had shunned for years before using it.' —The Parents.

FATHER IS GETTING WELL.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A Lady of Utica, N. Y.

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name.

"Twenty-four years experience,' says an eminent Physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the Generative organs is to repair the wasting giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all Druggists at 50 cents per box, 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Jas. Clarke & Co. Belleville they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See adv't in another column.

OUR CANADIAN SILK INDUSTRY is prosperous. The great difficulty to be contended with is the low grade of goods required. In nothing is this more apparent than in the comparatively small article of sewing silks. The great demand in Canada seems to be for cheap quality, buyers forgetting that a cheap thread must necessarily be a fine and consequently a weak one. Messrs Belding, Paul & Co. make three grades of spool silk; of these different qualities the poorest one has by far the largest sale, at the same time they constantly hear of complaints of poor sewing silk. If the ladies will take the trouble to ask for Belding Paul & Co's. own brand, and see that their name is on the end of each spool, they will be sure of getting the best made.

ON THIRTY DAYS' TRIAL

Address as above,—N B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty day's trial is allowed.

THE MIDNIGHT HORSEMAN.

Never Give Up Because of Intense Trial.

SERMON BY REV. DR. TALMAGE.

"Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley and returned."—Nehemiah ii; 15.

A dead city is always more suggestive than a living city—past Rome than present Rome—ruins rather than newly frescoed building. But the best time to visit a ruin is by moonlight. The Colosseum is far more fascinating to the traveler after sundown than before. You may stand by daylight amid the monastic ruins of Melrose Abbey, and study shaft and criel, rosetted stone and mullion; but they throw the strongest witchery by moonlight. Some of you remember what the great poet of Scotland said in the 'Lay of the Last Minstrel:'

> "If thou wouldst view of fair Melrose aright, > Go visit it by the pale moonlight."

Washington Irving describes the Andalusian moonlight upon the Alhambra ruins as amounting to an enchantment. My text presents you

JERUSALEM IN RUINS—

the tower down, the gates down, the walls down—everything down; Nehemiah, on horseback, by moonlight looking upon the ruins. While he rides, there are some friends on foot going with him, for they do not want the many horses to disturb the suspicions of the people. These people do not know the secret of Nehemiah's heart, but they are going as a sort of body-guard. I hear the clicking hoofs of the horse on which Nehemiah rides, as he guides it this way and that, into this gate and out of that gate, winding through amid the debris of once great Jerusalem. Now the horse comes to a dead halt at the tumbled masonry, where he cannot pass. Now he shies off at the charred timbers. Now he comes along where the water under the moonlight flashes from the mouth of the brazen dragon after which the gate was named. Heavy-hearted Nehemiah! Riding in and out, now by his old home desolated, now by the defaced temple, now amid the scars of the city that had gone down under battering-arm and conflagration. The escorting party know not what Nehemiah means. Is he getting crazy? Have his own personal sorrows, added to the sorrows of the nation, unbalanced his intellect? Still goes on, Nehemiah, on horseback, rides through the first gate, by the tower of the furnaces, by the king's pool, by the dragon well, in and out, and not until the midnight ride is completed, and Nehemiah dismounts from the horse, and to the amazed and confounded and incredulous body-guard declares the deep secret of his heart when he says, 'Come, now, let us build Jerusalem.' 'What, Nehemiah have you any money?' 'No.' 'Have you any kingly authority?' 'No.' 'Have you any eloquence?' 'No.' Yet that midnight moonlight ride of Nehemiah resulted in the glorious rebuilding of the city of Jerusalem. The people knew not how the thing was to be done, but with great enthusiasm they cried out, 'Let us rise up and build the city.' Some people laughed and said it could not be done. Some people were infuriated, and offered physical violence, and said the thing should not be done, But the workmen went right on, standing on the wall, trowel in one hand, sword in the other, until the work was gloriously completed. At that very time, in Greece, Xenophon was writing a history, and Plato was making philosophy, and Demosthenes was uttering his rhetorical thunder; but all of them together did not do as much for the world as this midnight moonlight ride of praying, courageous, homesick, close-mouthed Nehimiah. My subject first impresses me with the idea what an intense thing is attachment to the house of God. Seize the bridle of that horse and stop Nehimmiah. Why are you risking your life here in the night? Your horse will stumble over those ruins and fall on you. Stop this useless exposure of your life. No! Nehemiah will not stop. In hot haste this seeming adventurer comes to Jerusalem, and in my text we find him on horseback, in the midnight, riding around the ruins, It is thought the spectacle of this scene that we discover the ardent attachment of Nehemiah for the sacred Jerusalem, which in all ages has been the type of the Church of God, our Jerusalem, which we love as much Nehemiah loved his Jerusalem. The fact is that you love the House of God so much that there is no spot on earth so sacred unless it be your own fireside. The Church has been to you so much comfort and illumination that there is nothing that makes you so irate as to have it talked against. If there have been times when you have been carried into captivity by sickness, you have longed for the Church the holy Jerusalem, just as much as Nehimiah longed for his Jerusalem, and the first day you came out you came to the house of the Lord When the temple was in ruins, as ours was ten years ago, like Nehemiah, you walked around and looked at it, and in the moonlight if you could not hear the voice of the dead organ the psalm of expired Sabbaths, and the clang of the communion tankards. What Jerusalem was to Nehemiah, the house of God is to you. Sceptics and infidels may scoff at the Church as an obstacle offair, as a relic of the dark ages, as a convention of goody-goody people, but all the impression they have ever made on your mind against the Church of God is absolutely nothing. You would make more sacrifice for it to-day than for any other institution and if it were needful you would die in its defence. There are thousands of people in this house to-day who would, with Isaac Watts, say in regard to it:

THE MIDNIGHT EXPLORATION

> 'Zion's garden walled around,
> Chosen and made peculiar ground;
> A little spot enclosed by grace
> Out of the world's wild wilderness."

Or you can take the better words of the kingly poet as he said, 'If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.' You understand in your own experience the pathos, the homesickness, the courage, the holy enthusiasm of Nehemiah in his midnight moonlight ride around the ruins of his beloved Jerusalem. Again, my text impresses me with the fact that before reconstruction there must be an exploration of ruins. Why was not Nehemiah asleep in bed? Why was not his horse stabled in the midnight? Let the police of the city arrest this midnight rider, out on some mischief. No. Nehemiah is going to rebuild the city, and he is making the preliminary exploration. In at this gate, out at that gate, east, west, north south. By the fish gate. By the dragon well. By the tower of the furnaces. All through the ruins. The ruins must be explored before the work of reconstruction can begin. The reason that so many people in this day, apparently converted, do not remain converted is because they did not first explore the ruin of their own heart. The reason that there are so many professed Christians who in this day lie and forge, and steal and commit adultery, and go to the penitentiary, is beause they do not first learn the ruin of their own heart. They have not found out that 'the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked.' They had an idea that they were almost right, and they built religion as a sort of extension, as an ornamental cupola, There was a superstructure of religion built on a substratum of unrepented sins. The trouble with a good deal of modern theology is that, instead of building on the right foundation, it builds on the debris of an unregenerated nature. They attempted to rebuild Jerusalem before, in the midnight of conviction, they have seen the ghastliness of the ruin. They have such a poor foundation for their religion that the first north east storm of temptation blows them down. I have no faith in a man's conversion if he is not converted in the old fashioned way—John Bunyan's way, John Wesley's way, John Calvin's way, Paul's way, Christ's way. A dentist said to me a few days ago, 'Does that hurt?' I replied, 'Of course it hurts. It is in your business as in our profession—we have to hurt before we can help; we have to explore and dig away before we can put in the gold.' You will never understand redemption until you understand ruin. A man tells me that some one is a member of the church. It makes no impression on my mind at all. I simply want to know whether he was converted in the old fashioned way or whether he was converted in the new fashioned way. If he was converted in the old fashioned he will stand. If he was converted in the new fashioned way he will not stand. That is all there is about it. Ah, my friends, you see this is

NOT A COMPLIMENTARY GOSPEL.

That is what makes some people so mad. It comes to a man of a million dollars and impenitent in his sins, and says, 'You're a pauper.' It comes to a woman of fairest cheek who has never repented and says, 'You're a leper.' It comes to a man priding himself on his independence and says, 'You're bound hand and foot of the devil.' It comes to our entire race and says, 'You're a ruin—a ghastly ruin, an illimitable ruin, and, unless the grace of God rebuild you, an everlasting ruin.' Satan sometimes says to me, 'Why do you preach that truth? Why don't you preach a gospel with no repentence in it? Why don't you flatter men's heart so that you make them feel all right? Why don't you preach a humanitarian Gospel, with no repentance in it, saying nothing about ruin' talking all the time about the redemption? Instead of preaching to five thousand you might preach to twenty thousand; for there would be four times as many who would come to hear a popular truth as to hear an unpopular truth, and you have voice enough to make them hear.' I say, 'Get thee behind me Satan.' I would rather lead five thousand souls into heaven than twenty thousand into hell. The redemption of the Gospel is a perfect farce if there is no ruin. 'The whole need not a physician but they that are sick.' 'If any one, though he be an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel than this,' says the apostle, 'let him be accursed.' Again my subject gives me a specimen of busy and

TRIUMPHANT SADNESS.

If there was any man in the world who had a right to hope and give up everything as lost, it was Nehemiah. You say, 'He was cupbearer in the palace of Shushan, and it was a grand place.' So it was, The hall of that palace was two hundred feet square, and the roof hovered over thirty-six marble pillars, each pillar sixty feet high; and the intense blue of the sky, and the deep green of the forest foliage, and the white of the driven snow, all hung trembling in the upholstery. But, my friends, you know very well that fine architecture will not down home-sickness. Yet Nehemiah did not give up. Then when you see him going among those desolated streets, and by these dismantled towers, and by the torn-up grave of his father, you would suppose that he would have been disheartened, and that he would have dismounted from the horse and gone to his room and said, 'Woe is me! My father's grave is torn up. The temple is dishonored. The walls are broken down. I have no money with which to rebuild. I wish I had never been born. I wish I were dead.' Not so said Nehemiah. Although he had a grief so intense that it excited the commentary of his king, yet the penniless, expatriated Nehemiah rouses himself up to rebuild the city. He gets his permission of absence; he gets his passports; he hastens away to Jerusalem. By night, on horseback, he rides through the ruins; he overcomes the most ferocious opposition; he arouses the piety and patriotism of the people, and in less than two months—namely, in fifty-two days, Jerusalem was rebuilt. That's what I call busy and triumphant sadness. Here is a man who has lost his property. He does not go to hard drinking. He does not destroy his own life. He comes and says, 'Harness me for Christian work. My money's gone. I have no treasures on earth; I want treasures in heaven. I have a voice and a heart to serve God.' You say that the man has failed. He has not failed he has triumphed. Oh, I wish I could persuade all the people who have any kind of trouble

TO NEVER GIVE UP!

I wish they would look at the midnight rider of the text, and that the four hoofs of that beast on which Nehemiah rode might cut to pieces all your discouragements and hardships and trials. Don't give up! Who is going to give up, when on the bosom of God he can have all his troubles hushed? Give up! Never think of giving up. Are you borne down with poverty? A little child was found holding her dead mothers hand in the darkness of a tenement house, and some one coming in, the little girl looked up while holding her dead mother's hand and said, 'Oh I do wish God had made more light for poor folks!' 'My dear, God will be your light; God will be your shelter; God will be your home.' Are you borne down with the bereavements of life? Is the house lonely now that the child is gone? Do not give up. Think of what the old sexton said when the minister asked him why he put so much care on the little graves in the cemetery—so much more care than on the larger graves—and the old sexton said, Sir you know that of such is the kingdom of heaven,' and I think the Saviour is pleased when He sees so much white clover growing around these little graves.' But when the minister pressed the old sexton for a more satisfactory answer, the old sexton said, 'Sir, about these larger graves, I don't know who are the Lord's saints and who are not; but you know sir, it is clean different with the bairns.' Oh, if you have had that keen, tender, indescribable sorrow that comes from the loss of child, do not give up! The old sexton was right. It is all well with the bairns. Or, if you have sinned, if you have sinned grievously—sinned until you have been cast out by society, do not give up. Oh, there is no reason why any one in this house, by reason of

ANY TROUBLE OR ANY SIN,

should give up! Are you a foreigner, and in a strange land? Nehemiah was in exile. Are you penniless? Nehemiah was poor. Are you home-sick? Nehimiah was homesick. Are you broken-hearted? Nehemiah was broken-hearted. But just see him in the text, riding along the sacrileged grave of his father, and by the dragon well, and through the fish gate, and by the king's pool, in and out, in and out, the moonlight falling on the broken masonry, which throws a long shadow at which the horse shies and at the same time that moonlight kindling up the features of this man until you see not only the mark of sad reminiscence, but the courage, the hope the enthusiasm of a man who knows that Jerusalem will be rebuilt. I pick you up to-day, out of your sin and out of your sorrow, and I put you against the warm heart of Christ. "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

IF IT WERE POSSIBLE

to get the testimony of the multitude who have used the Shaker Blood Syrup for spring diseases, langour, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendary messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that the Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value any article now before the public, Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and by the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting the Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, beacuse of the evil influence produced by unreliable, worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of the Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon the people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

Functional Heart Troubles are commonly the outcome of impaired general health from depraved nutrition, and are peculiar to nervous irritable temperaments. Palpitation intermitting, or irregular pulse, difficulty of breathing and head symptoms are reflex or sympathetic from stomach derangements, and especially that form of dyspepsia with acidity or heartburn, flatulence, irregularity of bowels, high-colored urine and brick dust deposit. Many of these cases have been entirely relieved by the prolonged use of WHEELER'S PHOSPHATES AND CALISAYA, fortifying the nervous system and restoring the digestive apparatus to its normal activity.

THE DAILY ONTARIO.

SIR WILLIAM DAWSON.

The rank of Knight Bachelor was announced the other evening by His Excellency the Governor General as having been conferred on Principal Dawson of McGill University, Montreal. The title of Knight Bachelor is that which has been conferred on all men of learning from Sir Isaac Newton down. John William Dawson, L.L.D., F.R.S., F.G.S., C.M.G., a geologist and naturalist, was born in Nova Scotia, in October 1820. He studied at the University of Edinburgh, and returning home, devoted himself to the study of the natural history and geology of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. In 1842 he accompanied Sir Charles Lyell in his explorations in Nova Scotia, and aided him materially in his investigations. In 1850 he was appointed superintendent of Education for his native province, and in 1855 he became Principal of the McGill University of Montreal, of which he is now Vice Chancellor. In 1881 Dr. Dawson was created a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and in the following year was selected by the Marquis of Lorne to take the Presidency of the Royal Society of Canada. His two volumes on the Devonian and Carboniferous Flora of Eastern North America, published by the Geological Survey of Canada and illustrated from drawings by his daughter, are the most important contributions yet made to the Palæozoic botany of North America, and he is the discoverer of the Eozoon Canadense, of the Laurentian limestone, the oldest known form of animal life. In 1872 he published the story of Earth and Man, in which he combats the Darwinian theory of the origin of species. In 1875 he published the Dawn of Life, an account of the oldest known fossil remains. In 1877 fossil Men and their Modern Representatives, and in 1880, the Change of Life in Geological Time.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

The coming of the British Association for the Advancement of Science to Montreal for the first session ever held outside the British Isles is a decided compliment to Canada. It is probably the largest and most influential scientific body in the world. The British Association was established over half a century ago (1831), and was called into existence because the time had come for a new organization of wider influence, devoted to the general advancement of science. Scientific societies and academics were already numerous and successful in their way; but they were local and isolated, and the need began to be strongly felt for an association of a new type, on a broader basis, that should bring the widely separated cultivators of science into more intimate intercourse. Although an experiment, the British Association was successful from the start. The ablest men in all departments of science entered cordially into its work, and the most illustrious scientists of England, such as Buckland, Sedgwick, Whewell, Lyell, Grove, Hooker, Huxley, Thomson and Tyndall, have been among its Presidents.

SALVATION ARMY MUSS.

The Salvation Army leaders are at loggerheads in Burlington. This came out of a case brought before Mr. Henry Foster, J. P., of that village the day before yesterday. It was alleged that, the other evening, Private Watterworth, formerly of Hamilton, rose in a meeting of the Army and accused Cadet Eaton of appropriating all the funds to himself and spending them on candies for the soldiers. The gallant cadet was also accused of taking young ladies out boating. As a result of these accusations, Cadet Eaton went home, tore off his distinguishing stripes, and donned a suit of civilian clothing. The prosecution before Squire Foster followed, and it took the form of a charge that Watterworth had defamed the character of the cadet. Watterworth admitted that he had made the charges, but the Magistrate decided that he had no jurisdiction and dismissed the case, mulcting both parties into their own costs. The end does not appear yet, as Cadet Eaton is not satisfied with the award.

G. T. R. STATION BURNED.

WOODSTOCK, Aug 29.—At 1 o'clock this morning the baggage-room of the G. T. R. house was discovered to be in flames, which in a minute spread to the ticket office and waiting room on the opposite side of the track, and both structures which were of wood were quickly in ashes.

THE PROGRESS OF MEDICAL ENLIGHTENMENT has led to the abandonment of many antiquated remedies of questionable value, and the adoption of newer and more rational ones. Prominent among the latter is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, the justly celebrated Blood Purifier, a comprehensive family remedy for liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, loss of physical energy, and female complaints.

FOR THE LADIES.

FEMININE FASHIONS, GENERAL GOSSIP, AND HOME NOTES.

Mitts are growing in popularity.

Very tight sleeves are going out of fashion.

Feather fans are the most fashionable kind.

Parasols to match the costume are worn by ultra-fashionables.

There is a tendency toward the return of the Dolly Varden style.

Women enjoy more the pleasure they give than the pleasure they feel.—Roche pedre.

Ribbons are used in the greatest profusion on costumes for girls and small children.

Lace scarfs are again worn mantle-wise over the shoulders and loosely knotted in front.

Velvets has been used all summer to combine with the lightest and most sheer fabrics in morning dresses.

Cameo jewely is worn to a great extent, and emeralds and amethysts are taking the place of diamonds,

Many of the newest dark blue and gray dresses are trimmed with rows of narrow silver braid with pretty effect.

The sailor hat is gaining steadily in popularity, and it certainly is very jaunty when surmounting a pretty young face and stylish figure.

Long-wristed gloves are still in vogue, and are worn smoothly over the sleeves of the dress, or wrinkled at the wrist as fancy dictates.

Knots of bright ribbon are worn with morning costumes fastened just above the waist. Bright crimson is worn with blue and cherry or pink with brown and grey.

I once melted down some of my breadfast butter in a cup on the hob; soaked a bit of worsted in it; cooled, lighted, blew out, and smelt it. It was oleomargarine!

Rhea, the actress, has some dresses that were made for the Queen of Holland, and which she took off the Queen's hands when the Prince of Orange died. She says they are dreams,

The newest shopping bags are in Japanese work. Upon surface of hard black leather, curious designs are wrought in fine lines of silver and dull colors. Dragon flies, bees and other insects are represented.

The electric light is getting into society. Two young Ladies appeared the other night with the electric light in their hair. This was rather light-headed—too ballet girlish for some; but it pleased the younn men.

The conclusion is irresistible that the most competent women and even women of brilliant parts, who attract the attention of the world by signal success in many other activities strike some insurmountable snag when they undertake the business of money-making. Mrs. Langtry is an exception.

COSTLY ROBES DES NUIT.

A most costly and beautiful night-gown was shown to a Boston reporter.

"Is it very expensive?" was asked.

"Well, no, not very expensive. This one costs $125. It was originally designed for a young lady of Beacon Hill, who was about to be married. We keep this is a sample to show our customers. Each one that we make is of course, made to order."

"One hundred and twenty-five dollars. Yes. And is it customary for young ladies to wear such expensive robes de nuit?"

"We have them even more costly." And a satin lined box was produced containing a robe similar to the first. only infinitely more complicated, and fairly covered with expensive lace. "This one is worth $300.." "Who is it that is willing to pay these prices for a garment to be worn at night and to be seen by no one?"

☛ "Generally, our customers are young ladies about to be married, who are preparing their trousseaux."

PATTI'S ECCENTRICITIES.

Patti, who, by the way, has just broken her leg, has three favorite caprices, not counting Nicolini. The are parrots, laces and diamonds. [Patti has parrots, disgusting creatures they are too, who talk in various languages, sing, swear, and make themselves variously agreeable or offensive as one's taste may be. The highest priced parrot she owns cost her $250. They are elegantly caged, although many of them are so tame and domesticated as to need no restraint or hamper, or fetter of any kind. They all know her, as she knows them, answer to their names, respond to her called and obey her whistle as aptly as a well trained dog.

A FLUENT CONVERSATIONALIST.

Who can hear without pity and shame facedness the talk of woman who has to carry the reputation of a fluent conversationalist; who can entertain a circle of men with talk; who keeps it going without a pause. How evident her consciousness of the demand to keep it up! What inanities she gives out, having no connection with her mind. Like a work house tread mill, the talk must be kept going, although it grinds nothing. The pressure to keep talk going will not allow thought. The impression given to the observer is of an incessant whooping it up. Not allowing thought, it disables the mind. The mind becomes reduced to the little thing that the conversational necessity is forced to.

A FIELD OF CORNS,—Thomas Sabim. of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

Dont fill the system with quinine in the effort to prevent or cure Fever and Ague. Ayer's Ague Cure is a far more potent preventitive and remedy, with the advantage of leaving in the body no poisons to produce dizziness, deafness, headache, and other disorders. The proprietors warrant it.

THE FRANCO-CHINA WAR.

Alarmed Inhabitants Leaving the City of Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 29—Many Chinese have become alarmed and are leaving. The Chinese authorities have received an important telegram from Pekin, the purport of which is not precisely known, Reports are revived however, that China is desirous of coming to an agreement with France. The viceroy of Canton has ordered all the Frenchmen to leave his province immediately,

SHANGHAI, Aug. 29, 4 p.m.—The French fleet has destroyed the remaining Chinese works at Kinhai channel. It is believed the fleet left the Min river to-day, but its destination is uncertain. It seems probable it will come to Shanghai.

FOO CHOW, Aug. 29.—The foreigners' quarter was looted by Chinese.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Gen Millot telegraphs that the Chinese are preparing to invade Tonquin. He awaits their advance with confidence.

TONQUIN RECONQUERED.

According to reports received at Sontay 80,000 Chinese troops have suddenly invaded Tonquin, and after desperate fighting completely annihilated the French troops. Several thousand of the Chinese were killed. The massing of Chinese troops on the Tonquin frontier has been going on for some time, and so well did they hide their movements that the French commanders were unaware of their proximity until they swept down upon them like an avalanche. The French troops fought desperately, and repeatedly charged the Chinese lines and many hand to-hand encounters ensued, the French finally succumbing to overwhelming odds.

SAD END OF A CIRCUS.

GREELY, Col. Aug. 30—A circus train was burned nine miles north of here, yesterday being attended with indescridable horrors. The train belonged to Orton's Anglo-American circus. Golden, Detroit, very badly burned; N. J. Zimmerman, St. Louis, Mich., arms, legs back, face, fearfully burned; Frank King, Memomnee. Mich., badly burned about feet; M. McGlone, Holton Mich., face and hands badly burned; Hugh O Donell, New Orleans, badly burned about the face, arms, hands, and back, will probably die. The names of dead, as far as learned are as follows: Alex. McLeon, Marinette, Wis.; Thomas Kelly, New York; others known as Silverthorn, Andy, Frank, George, Smithie, and one unknown.

THE MOST GIGANTIC COLLECTION OF WONDERFUL WILD BEASTS, INCLUDING THE FAMOUS WHITE ELEPHANT AND TWENTY-FIVE ASIATIC AND AFRICAN ELEPHANTS ON THIS CONTINENT.

Adam Forepaugh, whose great show is to exhibit at Belleville Sept. 16, has been most assiduously laboring for almost a quarter of a century to secure the very best and largest collection of rare foreign animals and birds ever exhibited. That the veteran and ambitious manager has succeeded, the following list of animals, now demonstrates: In addition to the lions, tigers, polar bears, twenty-five elephants of all ages, sizes and sexes, hyenas, leopards, ostriches, emeus, camels, sea lions, monkeys, bears, and huge pythons, and ana condas, there is to be seen in huge menagerie pavilion, in the almost endless number of palatial, picturesque, massive dens and cages, the most magnificient living specimens of the African eland, caribou, horned horse, female kangaroo, tapri, lions and lioness, baby lions, cabia bars, nylghau, Bengol tigers, zebra, gnu, sloth, Russian reindeer, orang-outang, cheetah ibex, white camels, African wild boar, first genuine zebra, and only man faced gorilla, giraffe sixteen feet in height, sable antelopes, rhinoceri, the Thibbet or sun bear, the white polar bear, the grizzly bear, the black bear, the poonah bear, the brown bear, East India antelope, Casemere goats, Syrian and Egyptian sheep, spotted axis deer, bison of Colorado, American fallow deer, South American jaguar, siluer lion of California, striped and spotted hyena, Peruvian alpaca, llama or camel of the Andes, puma or American cougar, American buffalo, Virginia panther, Sennegal leopards, Australian kangaroos, tawny lion of Kaffra, African wild boar, the Shetland cow, rat kangarao of New Zealand, the zebu or ox nunda, South Africcan oryx, sacred cattle, spotted and black tigers, African porcupines, ant-bear' badgers, beavers, and caons, wild-cats, foxes, Canada lynx, weasels and civet cat, peccaries and wambat black tigers, liliputian cow, royal yak, kudu or koodoo, gennett, ichneumon, coyote, prairie wolf, aard vark, gazelles, Japanese swine, monkeys, apes ann baboons, African jackals, babiroussa and hedgehog Humadrias baboon or lion slayer, ocelot, and rhama phoa hounds, strepcicerous or horned muomun, barus and black monkeys wanderoo mandril, different species of monkeys, African ostriches, birds of paradise, apteryx, cassowary, king vulturer, condor onp eagles, white pelibans, white pea, and Jova gowl, black and white swans, African crowned cranes, lyt birds, New Holland emeus, carrier doves, golden phessants, tampica parrots, roso cockatoo, satin-preasted parrots, African gray parrots, Spanish macaws, king lori birds, silver pheasants, Chinese birds, chamois and armadillo, the whole forming the largest, rarest, and costliest collection of mammoths, beasts, birds, reptiles, and marine monsters ever assembled since the time when Noah filled his floating ark, in obedience to the divine decree. A TERRIBLE CHARGE.

A SANE WIFE KEPT IN A MONTREAL ASYLUM FOR THREE YEARS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.—Mr. Alfred Perry writes to the press in regard to the case of the unfortunate woman now, for nearly three long years past, unjustly confined under a false name by her husband in the Long Point Insane Asylum. He says that owing to influence that has been invoked to prevent her liberation, it will take a few days more before she can be brought before the proper court. In the mean time Messrs. Girouard & Mc Gibbon, advocates, have the case in hand. The public may rest assured these gentlemen will be in a position to demonstrate that, under the working of the existing law no husband, should he be inclined to make away with his wife, need resort to poison or wait for death by any other process.

MAUD S. TO BE SPEEDED.

After Mr. Bonner, the new owner of the fastest horse in the world, and Mr. Bair, the trainer, had had a talk in the evening. Mr. Bonner said:

'Maud S. is to be speeded. The arrangements between Mr. Bair and myself have been definitely settled. He is to start with the mare to morrow in a special car on the New York Hartford and New Haven Railroad for Hartford. It is arranged that Mr. Bair shall train her for three or four weeks and then Maud S. will be started to break the record. Do I think she can do it? Certainly I do, and every good horseman who knows anything about her says so, too. One thing is sure she will have the advantage of trotting under more favorable conditions than ever before, so far as human foresight goes.'

'You will allow the public to witness the performance?'

'Certainly. Everybody can go in. I want the public to enjoy the sight.'

'Is the day set for the trial?'

'Oh, no. That depends on the mare's condition the weather, the track, and many other conditions. Ample notice will be given.'

'What about your proposition to purchase Jay Eye See?'

'You can say that Mr. Bonner has set a price on Jay Eye See. Further than that that I ought not to speak, in justice to Mr. Case.'

Mr. Vanderbilt wrote this letter to Mr. Bonner when he sold Maud S:—'Dear Sir: Enclosed please find receipt for Maud S. I must congratulate you upon being the owner of the fastest and finest horse in the world. I am sure you will find her simply perfection itself in every particular. She is always ready to do anything you want to have her do, always expecting kind treatment, and the fullest confidence that she is not to be hurt. She seems to know as much as a man, and is of the most affectionate disposition. These are are great requisites. No one can but admire them, and we must all love the animal possessing them.

THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE

Moves incessantly the most buoyant to-day may be loaded down with sorrow to-morrow. One peculiarity of that famous alleviator of human suffering —Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, is the fact that in spite of hundreds of imitations and substitutes it has retained its place in the very front rank as a remedy for corns. This must ever be the case as every person who has used it testifies that it is prompt, painless and certain—three grand essentials which when combined, as is the case with Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, insures a sure pop corn cure. When found about four p.m. he was lying face down with a large stone on top of him. Although there had been no fire in the kiln for some days, the flesh on his face and body was almost roasted from the heat of the lime.

THE JACKSON ASSAULT.

Brutal Conduct of a Gang of Boys in Blecker's Grove.

THE GIRL'S OWN STORY.

The trial of the five boys, Soles, Beauprey, Downs, Steele and Cummings was on all day yesterday before the Police Magistrate. Mrs. Stapley was in the box four and a half hours, and gave her evidence in a remarkably clear manner. Her story in substance was given in yesterday's issue. Her husband corroborated his wife's evidence in a sort of slip-shod manner, showing if possible a desire to avoid a contradiction of her statements. After the evidence of the police had been taken the court adjourned at 7 o'clock last night until this morning. Steele and Cummings were allowed to go on their own recognizance to appear to-day. The other three prisoners were kept in custody.

THE GIRL'S STORY

Nancy Jane Jackson, aged 22, the girl who says she was so brutally assaulted by the boys was called into the box. She said:—I arrived over two weeks ago and went to Mrs. Renfrew's, where I stopped two or three days. While at Stapley's Mr. Renfrew got me work in Powell's rag shop; on Wednesday night I was at Stapley's when I was awakened by Mrs. Stapley calling me. I was frightened because I heard some one say, "throw that nigger wench out," and afterwards call for Mag. Howard. I began dressing and all the while the boys outside were making a great noise; when I heard the boys call for Mag. Howard I went to Mrs. Stapley and asked her to put me away; she did so, hiding me under the sink; after that I heard a noise as if made by parties trying to break into the house; I was under the sink fifteen minutes when I was pulled out by a man whom I don't know; there were three other men in the woodshed; one of them stepped up and took me away from the man who brought me out; I caught hold of the door and tried to prevent him taking me out, but he dragged me on out by the arms; the man outside took me by the arm and led me towards the woods; I said for God's sake to take me back to the house; he said to keep still or the whole gang will be after me; going towards the woods one of the party swore frightfully and said; "we have got her now;" when we reached the woods the boy who had hold of me said if I did not do as he said he would murder me; I told him he had a soul to save as well as I, and if he had any heart he would take me back for I was not Mag Howard; I tried to get away and when I screamed he put his hand over my mouth; I can't recognize any of the prisoners as those who were with me that night; two of the boys stopped with me and the others went away in the woods; the two that remained then criminally assaulted me, and threatened if I said anything about it they would kill me; they told me they would take me back if I would not scream; I was frightened and made them believe I would not; the two boys then concocted a story to tell at the house that they were strangers and rescued me from another gang; this tale they repeated at the house to old man Stapley when he opened the door; the men then left going in the direction of the hill. The latter part of this evidence was given in a very reluctant manner, the witness crying and showing a delicacy about giving the details of the assault. In the meantime the court room was cleared.

Mrs. Jane McDonald, who lives on Bleecker avenue, quite close to Stapley's, stated that she heard a noise about that neighborhood on Thursday morning but did not see any person.

Joseph Disotelle, father of Stapley's wife, recognized Downs and Soles as the two who were at his daughter's Thursday afternoon. They said they heard a warrant had been issued for their arrest and they came to see about it. Mrs. Stapley said he would have to give an account of himself but he said he could not as he was not there. Afterwards he admitted that he was at his house the night before.

To-morrow is the 12th Sunday after Trinity.

Rev. J. J. Rice who has been out of town at the Central St. Lawrence Camp Ground for some days past has returned and will take his regular services to-morrow at West Belleville Methodist Church.

GENERAL.

Rev. Dr. Potts and wife, of Montreal are back from Europe.

Monsigner Capel has paid a visit to Winnipeg where a crowded audience met in the Opera House to lisiten to his lecture on "Freedom of Intellect under Catholicism."

A few enthusiastic individuals are busying themselves in the endeavor to organize a new Presbyterian Publishing House and to start another paper in connection with that denomination.

The Congregational Church in Forest, of which the Rev. W. H. N. Shannon is pastor have re-opened their restored building. The extensive repairs made have added much to the attractive appearance.

Winnipeg has had two church openings within a week or two of each other. The fine new English Church was opened by the Bishop of Saskatchewan, who preached impressive and appropriate discources on the occasion. Last week the new edifice for the congregation of Knox church, Presbyterian, was opened, the Rev. H. M. Parsons, Toronto, preached morning and evening, and the pastor, Rev. D. M. Gordon, in the afternoon. The building is a good specimen of ornate English gothic.

In the September number of the Canadian Methodist Magazine, Principal Grant, of Queen's University has an able article on "Organic Union of Churches; How far should it go?" He is of the opinion that the Congregationalists and Presbyterians ought to unite since there is nothing to keep them apart. The doctrinal differences between Presbyterians and Methodists are more pronounced but he thinks a modus vivendi might be found by the exercise of mutual tolerance. An amalgamation with the Church of England would, at present be still more difficult on account, among other things, of the dogma of apostolic succession. Still, even this, in the Principle's view, does not present an insuperable obstacle. There might be concessions on both sides. John Knox favored a mild episcopacy when he appointed his superintendents. It is certain that for many reasons a closer union of the Protestant churches is eminently desirable.

WEST HASTINGS SHOW.

Prospect of the Largest and Best Exhibition ever Held.

The prize list of the West Hastings Agricultural Society fair, to be held at the grounds in Belleville on Wednesday and Thursday, 8th and 9th October, has been published. It represents the largest number of cash prizes ever offered at any fall show in this county. Especially is this the case in the equine department. Mr. J. M. Hurley, deputy reeve of Thurlow, assisted by one or two others, has paid particular attention to this class this year and the result must certainly be encouraging to the Board of Directors for a more liberal list of cash prizes given by private citizens was never before known in the history of the Society. The same satisfactory result applies to several of the other departments, which will have a tendency to advertise the West Hastings fair as it has never been before. The prizes are what attract exhibitors and a comparison of this year's list with any of its predecessors will convince the public of the large additional expenditure in that respect this year. Prize lists can be had on application to the Secretary, Ald. Davis.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Resuming Work after Midsummer Vacation.

IMPROVEMENTS TO THE HIGH SCHOOL

The public and high schools will reopen on Monday, at 9 p.m., after the long midsummer vacation. During the recess the Board has made one or two changes in the teaching staff, the principal one being the appointment of Mr. Henry to succeed Mr. Francis as mathematical master in the high school. The other changes have been made in the lower divisions of the public schools, and it is believed all will resume work on Monday with that energy and determination to succeed no characteristic of the public and high school teachers of Belleville.

In order to furnish increased accommodation at the central school the Board has expended about $1,000 in making alterations and improvements in the building. These repairs have been wisly made and the money judiciously expended under the supervision of Mr. James Smith, Superientendent of school buildings. Now the second story of the building will be entirely at the disposal of the high school, while all the class rooms on the ground floor and those in the old grammar school will be used by the public school teachers. In the central school building the large reception room has been devided into four class rooms, making in all eight class rooms on the first floor. These are about 22x24, with high ceilings and halls leading from the entrance door, so that one division cannot interrupt or have any connection with another. The galleries have all been removed, and iron desks from the foundry of J. M. Walker & Co. substituted, which are a decided improvement over the old-fashioned cramped up unhealthy desks in use in too many of our public schools. The blackboards made by Mr. W. Wensley, are of paper instead of plaster. This new departure had been tried in one of the class rooms for a year and the paper blackboards were found to be harder and more serviceable, with a smoother surface than those made of plaster. The teachers will appreciate this change. In making these improvements the comfort of the scholars by supplying a perfect system of ventilation was the chief object studied by the architect. The windows and cold air pipes in future will not inconvenience the pupils in the least, as the cold air will be circulated with the hot air before it passes over the room. This will be found much better than opening a window and allowing the cold air to pour in upon the pupils as has been the case in the past. Each room has been supplied with a tank for drinking water, with a pipe to carry the refuse water to the sewer. The plumbers were at work yesterday completing their task and everything will be in readiness for the opening of school next week. Mr. Alford, the contractor, has done his work well and now the Board has a building, which in point of convenience and comfort ranks second to none in the Province.

In the Pinnacle Street school new iron desks were put in one of the class rooms.

All the other schools were renovated, but no special improvements were made further than those noted.

A TERRIBLE CYCLONE.

AT LEAST THIRTEEN LIVES LOST BY THE STORM.

BARDSTOWN, Ky., Aug. 29.—A storm this morning did much damage in Nelson County to crops and houses. At Bloomfield, Broadbent's carriage manufactory was destroyed; the bridges were all washed away, thousands of shade trees torn up by the roots, and other injury done. Rollker's new foundry was almost demolished. The steamers J. V. Throop and Silver Thorn were badly damaged; the former almost wrecked. Several churches suffered severely, also a new school house. The loss of the transfer steamer Belmont and the drowning of ten to fifteen persons is confirmed. A hurricane this forenoon capsized the boat at Stanley Landing, three miles above Henderson, turning her completely over. She was going to Henderson with a barge containing the passengers of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. The boat separated from the barge, and all on the latter were saved. All on the boat, except four or five were lost.

Very few old married men express any desire to see the woman with the iron jaw.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. THE GREAT NEED. The Blood is the life and on its purity depends our health, if not our existence. These Pills thoroughly cleanse this vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that power strengthens and invigorates the whole system, heathily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Hollaway's Pills commends them to the favor of debilitated and nervous constitutions, which they soon reinstate. They dislodge all obstructions both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or who from some cause have become so.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attend the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and scorbutic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompaning "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in affecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succor.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

LOVE'S LOTTERY

OR,

THE RIVAL SISTERS.

She started violently.

In her own mind she had known he meant this; nevertheless, the words had came upon her suddenly.

It was with quiet scorn however, she rejoined—

'I can feel neither respect nor interest much less put credence in one Mr. Loring, who learns a lady's secrets by eavesdropping.

He laughed, a soft amused laugh.

'Eavesdropping? you are cruel. Miss Beauchamp and accuse me wrongfully,' he said. 'In this case the first time we met I read your heart, at your aunt Lady Dudley's reception. You know I did,' he added lightly touching her hand.

She did not answer.

Her silence was an affirmative.

'Well?' he asked interrogatively.

'Well,' she repeated, recovering somewhat of her firmness; you promise as a reward for my friendship,' she went on, a sneer on her small lips, 'more than you can perform. A man may marry a woman by threats or force, a woman cannot thus wed a man. accepting as a fact I love Mr. Belmore, that I remain passive in regard to your purpose how would that make him love me?'

'Make? It is my firm belief he loves you already.'

'He?'

The red blood sprang into the Creole's face.

'Yes, though at present we will say next to your sister. Were she placed beyond his reach, he would turn to you. 'Man cannot live alone.' Recall his manner, his attentions; confess was here not a time when once you yourself imagined his affection yours?'.

She drooped her head and did not speak, for she could not deny the accusation.

She was awed, almost terrified.

This singular man appeared to know everything.

After a pause, she said bitterly, yet with a kind of proud scorn—

'Again accepting this, the past and present are two different things. If ever Mr. Belmore regarded me with affection, it was as Colonel Beauchamp's legitimate daughter. When —when he learns I am the effspring of—of a slave—

She stopped suddenly, her vaice failed; she raised her hands quickly to her crimsoning cheeks,

She heard the American rise; she felt his fingers gently resting on her bowed head, sending a thrill through her, then in mournful pitying accents his voice fell on her ear.

'Poor child.' he said, 'he knows it. He has known it all along.'

A terrible cry, low but piercing, burst from the Creole's suddenly whitened lips.

Fixing her wild eyes on the speaker, she gasped in horror—

'He, he, Eustace Belmore know? impossible; I will not believe it. You are deceiving me again. How could it be?'

'Easily. Did not Keziah, born on the estate and your nurse, know it—and can the tongue of her race be kept silent? also was not Lady Dudley acquainted with the truth?'

'No,' gasped the wretched girl, 'that is I understood not.'

'You are mistaken,' he answered regarding her with apparent compassion; she was. All London knew of it: aye, as you rode throughhh the park, as you glided through the brilliant assemblies the truth was known.'

The Creole's eyes were dilitated, and fixed on vacancy.

Her small hands were pressed over her heaving bosom,

Her expression might have won pity.

Stuart Loring was pitiless.

He aimed the deadliest shaft into the miserable girl,s throbbing, bursting heart.

'Listen, for it is right you should learn all. It was Lady Dudley who, with her own lips acquainted Eustace Belmore with the stain upon your birth.'

Uttering an agonized cry, the Creole slipped from her chair to the ground. Her hands were clasped to her head her heart was convulsed with bitter sobs of anger, pain and humiliation.

It was a fearful blow, this cruel. overpowering intelligence.

In her ignorance, how happy she had been in London.

How proudly, conscious of her beauty she had carried herself how the flatteries lavished on her filled her with delight, and after all, she had been an object of pity, of curiosity all the while—it what her companion said was true—people had been whispering of her, pointing her out perhaps to others as the beautiful child of a bondwoman.

This was terrible; but the bitterest pang was that Eustace Belmore had been aware of her shame, and had been told by Lady Dudley herself.

Rapidly in her sufferings she resolved to fly anywhere rather than meet the man she loved again.

And there also arose in her a hate against Lady Dudley and all her friends, which was never to be overcome.

The paroxism for a while was to great for words, then suddenly lifting her eyes she asked excitedly—
